No Other RAILWAY in the Northwest

has in so short a period gained the reputation and popularity enjoyed by the WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINE. From a comparatively unknown factor in the commercial world, it has been transformed to an independent, influential, grand THROUGH ROUTE, with magnificent depots, superb equipment and unsurpassed terminal facilities. Through careful catering to patrons, it has won for itself a reputation for solidity, safety, convenience and attention to its patrons, second to no railroad in the country. Pullman sleepers, models of palatial comfort, dining cars in which the cuisine and general appointments are up to the highest standard, and coaches especially built for this route, are among the chief elements which have contributed towards entering successfully to a discriminating public. Located directly on its line between MINNEAPOLIS and ST PATL, and MILWAUKEE AND CHICAGO, and DULUTH and MILWAUKEE and CHICAGO, are the following thriving cities of Wisconsin and Michigan: NEW RICHMOND, CHIPPEWA FALLS, EAU CLAIRE, ASHLAND, HURLEY, WIS., IRONWOOD, MICH., RESSEMER, MICH., STEVENS POINT, NEENAH, MENASHA, OSHKOSH, FOND DU LAC, WAUKESHA and BURLINGTON, WIS.

G. G. HARTLEY will undoubtedly be elected as one of the delegates to Chicago.

THE Mass convention of the Republicans Thursday evening was a very harmonious affair and passed off to the satisfaction of all.

THE Norman County Herald has made its appearance. More Democratic newspapers will be born this year than ever before.

MILLE LACS county has elected Blaine delegates to the state convention. They also elected congressional delegates who are for Buckman first and Barto second.

A SMALL sized cyclone struck the tail sycamore of the Wabash on Tuesday and if telegraphic reports are correct, Voorhees will not desire to tackle the Senator from Kansas again in a hurry.

It was a cold, wet day for the St. Paul democracy on Tuesday. For the first time in years the city went republican by a large majority. The Republicans are awake this year all over the state.

THERE are some counties in this district that are electing delegates to conventions which have not yet been called. As a word of caution we will state that it is irregular to elect delegates to any convention until the call has been issued.

G. D. KNOX, who was injured at the sham battle at the State fair grounds last fall, is totally blind and very poor and he has asked the sham battle committee to pay him the remainder of the sum it agreed to give him. It is certainly a shame that the man is allowed to suffer.

Proceedings of the Republican County Convention.

Pursuant to a call issued by Chairman Nevers a mass convention of the Republicans of Crow Wing county was held at the court house in the city of Brainerd, on Wednesday evening, May 2nd, at 8 o'clock. The meeting was called to order by the chairman of the county committee and the call read. The first business was the election of a chairman. A. J. Halsted moved that the usual method of electing a temporary organization be dispensed with in order to expedite matters and that Justin Smith be elected permanent chairman. The motion was put and carried and Mr. Smith took the chair, and asked the further pleasure of the meeting. J. J. Howe nominated N. H. Ingersoll as secretary and he was elected.

The next business coming before the convention was the election of delegates to the St. Paul convention to be held May 16th, for the purpose of electing four delegates at large to attend the Chicago convention. The nominations of Dr. J. L. Camp, Ole Errickson and A. J. Halsted were made by W. A. Fleming. The question was put in regular order and the gentlemen were elected unanimously.

As delegates to attend the Republican district convention at Crookston on May 15th, W. A. Fleming, M. Hagberg and John Willis were put in nomination by Wm. Paine, and receiving a second they were chosen by a unanimous vote.

A motion was made by A. J. Halsted and carried in usual form, that in case any delegate elected to attend these conventions is unable to attend that the balance of his delegation have the power to name his substitute.

On motion of W. A. Fleming the following county executive committee was elected: J. J. Howe, chairman, J. N. Nevers, A. M. Bratt, Wm. Paine and J. L. Camp.

A suggestion was made to the effect that a committee be appointed to draft resolutions to be presented to this convention. This was followed by a motion from H. Poppenberg that a committee of six be appointed by the chair on resolutions. The motion was carried and the committee appointed as follows: H. Poppenberg, W. A. Fleming, G. S. Fernald, F. G. Sundberg, O. H. Havill and Ed. Mahan. The committee retired and after consultation returned and requested that the convention grant them until the next county convention in which to prepare the resolutions and the request was granted. The convention then adjourned.

N. H. INGERSOLL,
Secretary.

A Creature of Destiny.

To see Brainerd is to be impressed with her great possibilities. Taking into consideration the splendid advantages of the place there can be but one outcome of the confidence it has inspired, and one of the finest cities in the state is destined to grow up at this point. Almost every day brings inquiring strangers into our borders looking for investment. It only remains to extend the spirit of enterprise and confidence for which our citizens are noted to insure a speedy realization of the most sanguine hopes, and the outside world as well as our own people are cognizant of the fact. We have superior advantages and of a nature that cannot be offered by any other city in Northern Minnesota. Brainerd will become a great manufacturing and distributing centre. Our business firms are all well established and enjoying a lucrative patronage more so by far than at any other time in the history of the city. We have professional men, mechanics and laborers of every kind, and almost every branch of commerce and industry is represented. With half a show our city will far outstride all competitors in the coming two years.

The following resolution was, on motion, adopted:

RESOLVED, That the following recommendation be made to the district court:

To the Honorable C. B. Sleeper, Judge of the 16th Judicial District:

The county commissioners of the County of Crow Wing, Minnesota, on the representation of Father Watry, would respectfully recommend that the judgments standing against the real estate, taxed in the name of the Catholic Congregation of this city, said real estate being situated in Blocks 42 and 65, this city, be reopened, and the said Catholic Congregation be allowed to redeem said real estate, by paying the amount of taxes only, the interest and penalty being abated.

On motion the following resolution was adopted:

RESOLVED by the board of county commissioners of Crow Wing county, That it appearing to the satisfaction of this board that due notice has been given by David Magnan of his intention to apply to this board at this term for license to construct and maintain the dam hereinafter located and described, and it further appearing that it is necessary and advisable that such dam be maintained for the purpose of raising a head of water to facilitate the driving of logs and timber in the Nokasabie river and that it is for the general interest of those engaged in the lumbering business on said stream that such dam be erected and maintained on the land on both sides of such stream is under the control of the party applying for license and that he is a suitable person to build and maintain such dam, and a proper bond having been filed, license is hereby granted to David Magnan to construct and maintain a dam across the Nokasabie river on the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 18, Township 43, Range 31, in said county, with proper and sufficient sluiceway for sluicing logs, timber and lumber, and not less than an eight foot head for the period of six years from the date hereof, and said Magnan is authorized and empowered to collect and charge as toll for sluicing any logs, timber or lumber, through said dam, the sum of six cents per thousand feet, board measure, for all logs, timber and lumber so sluiced.

DANGEROUS FOOD ADULTERATION.

The Fraudulent use of Alum and Lime in Cheap Baking Powders.

If consumers prefer to buy an adulterated article of food because it can be had at a lower price, they undoubtedly have the right to do so, provided the adulterants are not of a character injurious to health. If such articles are not falsely sold as pure, and the customer is not deceived as to their real character, the transaction is not illegitimate.

But the great danger in the traffic in adulterated food arises from the deception that is practised by manufacturers usually classing such goods as pure. This is almost invariably done when the adulterant is one that is injurious to the health. For instance, manufacturers of alum and lime baking powders not only fail to inform the public of the real character of their goods, but carefully conceal the fact that they are made from these poisonous articles. Most of these manufacturers also claim that their articles are pure and wholesome, while some go still further and proclaim boldly that they are cream of tartar goods, or even the genuine Royal Baking Powder itself. No consumer will buy alum baking powders knowingly, for it is well understood that they are detrimental to health. The sale of lime and alum baking powders as pure and wholesome articles is, therefore, criminal, and it is satisfactory to notice that several persons engaged in such sale have already been brought to justice in the courts.

The official analysts have recently been active in the pursuit of these dishonest articles. The baking powders of several states have been carefully and critically examined. The officials are surprised at the huge amount of lime and alum goods found. It is a suggestive fact that no baking powder except the Royal has been found without either lime or alum, and may contain both. Dr. Price's baking powder has been found to contain nearly 12 per cent of lime; Cleveland's 11 per cent of impurities; the phosphate powders over 12 per cent of lime.

The chief service of lime is to add weight. It is true that lime, when subjected to heat, gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quick-lime is left a caustic of most powerful nature. A small quantity of dry lime upon the tongue, or in the eye, produces painful effects; how much more serious must these effects be on the delicate membranes of the stomach, intestines and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when the lime is taken into the system day after day, and with almost every meal. This is said by physicians to be one of the causes of indigestion, dyspepsia, and those painful diseases of the kidneys now so prevalent.

Adulteration with lime is quite as much to be dreaded as with alum, which has heretofore received the most emphatic condemnation from food analysts, physicians and chemists, for the reason that while alum may be partially dissolved by the heat of baking it is impossible to destroy or change the nature of the lime so that the entire amount in the baking powder passes, with all its injurious properties into the stomach.

The large profits from the manufacture of lime and alum baking powders has placed many of them in the market. They are to be found in the stock of almost every retail dealer, and are urged upon customers calling for baking powders upon all occasions. Because of their well-known detrimental character it is desirable that prompt means be taken to suppress their manufacture.

Pure baking powders are one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. While those are to be obtained of well-established reputation, like the Royal, of whose purity there has never been a question, it is proper to avoid all others.

More Puzzles.

In order that the strain occasioned by the hen puzzle may be lifted from the minds of the people the following puzzles are presented for consideration:

A young man wished to wed a fair young lady and was advised by her father as follows: "If you will bring in a quantity of apples and give me half and half of one more than half; give Mary's mother half of what remains and half of one more than half; and to Mary herself half of what remains and half of one more than half, still having an apple left, you may have her. The young man did as requested and captured Mary. How many apples did he begin on?

Supposing that a train of cars of unusual length ran over the Brooklyn bridge under one minute headway. The first car in the train we will call 85 feet long and will carry 56 passengers. The third or last car in the train is as long as the first car and one-half as long as the middle car combined, and the middle car is as long as the first and last car together. After obtaining the lengths of the middle and last car they are supposed to carry as many passengers in proportion, as is seen, that a 36 foot car will 56 persons. How many passengers will such trains carry over the bridge in one hour?

TUESDAY was rather chilly for the Democratic brethren all round.

Wife Murder and Suicide.

HELENA, Mont., May 3.—John T. Rand last night shot and fatally killed his wife who was fleeing from him with her babe in her arms. The child's spine was broken when the mother fell. Rand then blew the top of his head off. Rand came from Oldham, Maine, in 1852.

Cheap Excursion Rates.

Saturday excursion rates, at one cent per mile the round trip, between Brainerd and Perham at $1.45, and Brainerd and Detroit Lake at $1.85 for the round trip, have been placed on sale at the Brainerd ticket office. These tickets will be sold on Saturdays only, and must be signed by the purchaser and witnessed by the agents at Perham or Detroit, and used returning on or before the Monday following date of sale. A similar rate has been fixed at stations east of Jamestown for same points. Round trip tickets from Brainerd to Perham and return, $3.40, and Brainerd to Detroit and return, $4.45, good for thirty days, are for sale daily.

Land Excursions 1888. One Fare for the Round Trip.

—The population of London now exceeds every other city, ancient or modern, in the world. New York and all its adjacent cities combined are not equal to two-thirds of it. Scotland, Switzerland, and the Australian colonies each contains fewer souls, while Norway, Servia, Greece and Denmark have scarcely half as many. Yet at the beginning of the present century the population of all London did not reach one million.

—The electric bell system has been developed to such a fine point in New York hotels that by moving a pointer upon a dial and then pressing the bell the guest can indicate to the office his desire for his bill, cologne, a carriage, writing materials, chambermaid, messenger, boots, waiter, porter, fireman, ice-water or hall-boy. At one hotel the dial is divided into three sections, one for eatables, one for drinkables and a third for ordinary hotel service.—N. Y. Tribune.

FACTS YOU CAN BET ON.

That the oldest and largest tobacco factory in the world is in Jersey City, N. J.

That this factory makes the popular and world-famed Climax Plug, the acknowledged standard of the chewing tobacco.

That this factory was established as long ago as 1826.

That last year (1887) it made and sold the enormous quantity of 27,626,000 lbs. or fourteen thousand tons of tobacco.

That this was more than one-seventh of all the tobacco made in the United States—equivalent to one-fourteenth of all factories at work.

That in the last 61 years this factory has helped support the United States Government to the extent of over Twenty-four Million two hundred thousand dollars ($24,200,000.00) paid into the U. S. Treasury in Internal Revenue Taxes.

That the pay-roll of this factory is about $1,000,000 per year or $600,000 per year more than the Climax.

That this factory employs about 3,500 operatives.

That this factory makes such a wonderfully good chew in Climax Plug that many other factories have tried to imitate it in vain, and in despair now try to amuse the public by offering larger pieces of inferior goods for the same price.

That this factory nevertheless continues to increase its business every year.

That this factory belongs to and is operated by YOUR, very truly,

The friends of Secretary Bayard and Mrs. Folsom are greatly incensed at the report in New York papers that an engagement of marriage exists between them. The story is denounced as a malicious invention without a single basis of truth. The secretary denies it.

The Emperor of Germany may be very sick, but he is well enough to order the prosecution of every newspaper which published insulting rumors about the Empress Victoria. The lamentable lack of gallantry of some of the German sheets deserve punishment. They need a lesson in manners.

We wonder how much truth there is in the story that the proprietor of one of the New York dailies offered to pay one of his editorial subordinates $20,000 and his expenses if he would marry a certain young southern author, whose who has recently sprung into fame. There is a story to this effect and it appears to be pretty well corroborated.

The little King of Spain is a constant source of disturbance in the Royal Palace at Madrid. A few days ago he was lost for hours and, as has been related, was finally found in a cupboard. Not longafter he was taking his midday repast of bread and milk. Not liking the flavor of the milk he suddenly jumped from his chair, upset its contents over the nurse who was feeding him. Then his Majesty laughed in a mocking, haughty way and ran off to play with his toys.

At the last session of the South Carolina Legislature an act was passed giving a pension of $5 per month to all disabled Confederate veterans or their widows. The act appropriated $50,000, and Governor Hagood was empowered to borrow as much as was needed after the appropriation was exhausted. The Pension Board is now in session, and they are appalled at the number of applications pouring in. It would require at least $200,000 to pay the pensions applied for.

While a citizen of Lumpkin, Ga., was cleaning out his cellar recently after it had been flooded he discovered a slight depression in the earth, and, examining closely, saw the end of a bar of metal partly buried there. Picking it up, he found it to be lead. Further search revealed 167 bars, weighing about a pound each. How long they got there is not known, though it is surmised that they were buried during the Indian war of 1836, when a rude fort stood on the present site of the house.

The Chinese Minister and his secretary have been making a great stir in New York society, not only on account of their own social position, but also of their picturesque costume, which is a great break upon the dull monotony of men's evening dress. At a recent reception offered them the Oriental gentleman by Mrs. J. W. Drexel, they appeared in their most gorgeous silk gowns, the Minister wearing in the center of his skull-cap an immense ruby, said to be second to but one in the world. Mr. Chang does not always wear this ruby, sometimes he wears an equally large diamond, or a pink amethyst which is said to be unique among precious stones.

FIFTIETH CONGRESS.

SENATE.

The House bill giving to the city of Grand Forks, Dak., the right to build river bridges across the Red River of the North was passed.

Mr. Hopkins, of New York, objected to the consideration of the bill that a special session should be held; and then the house and senate concluded upon a time for the tariff bill, the floor being accorded to Mr. Mills, of Texas, who occupied the remainder of his speech there was a running fire of questions and answers between the speaker and Messrs Kelly and Reed, who opposed the consideration of the tariff bill.

Mr. Mitchell offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the secretary of the treasury for copies of the report of the Chicago Appraiser Sewell Angle as to the alleged smuggling of opium from Canada into Chicago.

The motion to refer the President's message to the house and the "Vorrhees proceeded to address the Senate.

Mr. Morrill, of Vt., gave the conference report on the joint resolution for a commission of the American nations was concurred in and a conference asked on the bill deered.

The animal industry bill was laid aside and a bill to forbid transcend land grants was taken up, but was passed without action and the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The House went into committee of the whole on the tariff. Mr. Bynum of Indiana was the first gentleman to be heard with his unqualified approval. He believed that the surplus should be reduced and collected at all times to meet the current wants of government and expenditures and that any extraordinary expenses should be met by appropriations and bonds. Believing this to be correct, he would vote against the proposition to remove a tax on taxation until the last obligation of the war was discharged.

Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, said that the report was the result of a thorough study of business and trade and commerce, in order to place the country on a firm and lasting basis. He said that the question presented was how very surprised was he to find the committee there now.

The committee then rose.

Mr. Springer, from the committee on appropriations, reported the deficiency appropriation bill, which he said to enable the executive departments to carry on the business of government, and to be held in Cincinnati, O., in July, August and September, and the Chicago Sewer Bill.

The house then took a recess until 8, the committee to be for debate only on the tariff bill.

SENATE.

Mr. Sherman, from the conferees committee on the House bill to provide for the holding of the invitation of the French republic to participate in the International exposition in Paris in 1889, made a report that they had agreed to the House bill with of appropriation at $250,000.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the Indian land forfeiture bill, and after a long debate it was passed without the amendments as to the lands granted to the Sioux City and Pacific railroad company, and by the Governor of that state to the Sioux City and Pacific Land Company.

After a speech upon the general land policy of the government, by Mr. Dolph, the bill was laid aside until Monday.

The following bills were taken from the calendar and passed: To authorize the authorize the construction of a bridge across the Red River of the North; the senate bill granting the right of way, into and through the Fort Ellis Park, Pacific Railway company through the Indian Territory, the Senate bill to fix the salary of the president of the United States at $50,000 per annum for use of the nation or tribe of Indians whose land is taken.

HOUSE.

The House bill was passed for the relief of the Omaha tribe of Indians in Nebraska.

The House then went into committee of the whole on the bill to admit Dakota, New Jersey, opposed the bill.

Mr. Stockdale, of South Carolina, said he could not conceive a system more unjust, more unnecessary, more unfavorable to the prosperity of the country, more unfriendly to the Republic, and more unchristian than the protective system. He said that the Republicans had made an argument against the bill, which he characterized as a plea for the rights of American labor.

Speeches followed until the day was spent.

SENATE.

The Senate committee on education and labor, at its meeting, ordered favorable reports on the bills introduced by Senator Blair's bill to restrict the sale of opium in the United States, and Senator Chandler's bill to establish a department of labor; ten bills were reported adversely, and referment to the consolidation for ever prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquors and transportation and sale of alcoholic liquors in the United States, Senator Blair was authorized to report as from the committee on labor the bill to establish a bureau of national college of dental science in Washington.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Dunham, of Illinois, the House resolved itself into committee of the whole and authorized the construction of a canal in Lake Michigan for waterworks purposes.

Mr. Dunn, of Arkansas, from the merchant marine and fisheries committee, reported and the House adopted a resolution which has been before the house for consideration relative to the seal fisheries in Alaska.

After a short discussion as to whether it was expedient for the House to proceed to the consideration of private business, the House went into committee of the whole, Mr. Springer of Illinois, in the chair, on the tariff bill. Speeches were made by Messrs. Bremer, Ford, Goff and others.

Mr. Gifford presented the petition of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union against running interstate trains on Sunday, opening the Columbian Exposition and drills on the Sabbath. Tariff speeches were made for the rest of the day, thus adding to the stock of campaign literature to be distributed in the coming Presidential campaign. The House committee on public lands reported a favorable report on the bill granting right of way through the Fort Ellis Park to the Northern Pacific railroad Company through the Flathead (Dakota,) military reservation.

SENATE.

The resolution offered last week by Mr. Hoar, instructing the committee on the interior information as to appointments in the Indian service, and the civil service grade since March, '85, was taken up and agreed to.

For public buildings at Youngstown, O., $100,000, and Akron, O., $75,000. To authorize the secretary of the treasury to re-examine and reassess the claim of the heirs of Pennsylvania for the interest and money advanced to pay the militia called in the war of 1812 and the Senate proclamation of the 15th of June, 1863.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the railroad and forfeiture bill.

HOUSE.

The tariff debate in the House was opened by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio, who attacked Mr. Morrison's speech of Mr. Nelson of Minnesota, who followed in behalf of the system in which the preliminary work of the tariff commission, the tariff bill and free tobacco. When the committee rose Mr. Morrison, of Illinois, who urged the appeal of the Internal Revenue Law in the Republican platform of last year, and the Democratic platform of 1884 and 1886 and 1887 and 1888 and 1889 and 1890 and 1891 and 1892 and 1893 and 1894 and 1895 and 1896 and 1897 and 1898 and 1899 and 1900 and 1901 and 1902 and 1903 and 1904 and 1905 and

"PUT ON MORE COALS."

Well, gentlemen, if you wish it, I'll tell you the story. When I was a youth of nineteen and lived with my parents in a Pennsylvania town, I had a taste for railroading and a boyish ambition to become a driver, although I had been educated for loftier pursuits.

During my college vacation I lounged about the station almost constantly, making friends with the trainmen, and especially with a driver named Silas Markley. I became much attached to this man, notwithstanding he was forty years old and by no means a sociable fellow.

He was my ideal of a brave, skillful, thoroughbred driver, and I looked up to him as something of a hero. He was not a married man, but lived alone with his old mother. I was a frequent visitor at their house, and I think they took quite a fancy to me in their quiet, undemonstrative way.

When Markley's fireman left him I induced him to let me take his place during the remnant of my vacation. He hesitated for some time before he consented to humor my boyish whim, but he finally yielded and I was in great glee. The fact was that in my idleness and the overworked state of my brain I craved excitement as a confirmed drunkard does liquor, and, besides, I had had such longing dreams of the fiery ride through the hills, mounted literally on the iron horse. So I became an amateur fireman, and liked it exceedingly, for the excitement more than compensated for the rough work I was required to do.

But there came a time when I got my fill of excitement. Mrs. Markley one day formed a plan which seemed to give her a good deal of happiness. It was her son's birthday and she wanted to go down to Philadelphia in his train, without letting him know anything about it, and there purchase a present for him. She took me into her confidence and bad me to assist her. I arranged the preliminaries and got her into the train without being noticed by Markley, who, of course, was busy with his engine.

The old lady was in high glee over the bit of innocent deception she was practicing on her son. She enjoined me again and again not to tell Silas, and then I left her and took my place.

It was a midsummer day and the weather was delightful. The train was neither an express nor an accommodation, but one which stopped at the principal stations on the route. On this occasion, as there were two specials on the line, it was run by telegraph—that is, the driver has simply to obey the instructions which he receives at each station, so that he is but a machine in the hands of one controller who directs all trains from a central point, and has the whole line under his eye. If the driver does not obey to the least tittle his orders it is destruction to the whole.

"Well, we started without mishap and up to time, and easily reached the first station in the time allotted to us. As we stopped there the boy ran alongside with the telegram which he handed to the driver. The next moment I heard a smothered exclamation from Markley.

"Go back," he said to the boy; "tell Williams to have the message repeated, there's a mistake."

The boy dashed off, in ten minutes he came flying back. "Had it repeated," he panted. "Williams is storming at you, says there is no mistake, and you'd best get on." He thrust the second message up as he spoke.

Markley read it and stood hesitating for half a minute. There was dismay and utter perplexity in the expression of his face as he looked at the telegram, and then at the long train behind him. His lips moved as if he were calculating chances, and his eyes suddenly quailed as if he saw death at the end of the calculation. I was watching him with considerable curiosity. I ventured to ask him what was the matter and what he was going to do.

"I'm going to obey," he replied, curtly.

The engine gave a long shriek of horror that made me start, as if it were Markley's own voice. The next instant we rushed out of the station and dashed through low-lying farms at a speed which seemed dangerous to me.

"Put in more coal," said Markley."

I shoveled it in, but took time.

"We are going very fast, Markley."

He did not answer. His eye was fixed on the steam gauge, his lips close shut.

"More coal," he said; I threw it in.

The fields and houses began to fly past half seen. We were nearing Dutreme, the next station. Markley's eye went from the gauge to the face of the timepiece and back. He moved like an automaton. There was little more meaning in his face.

"More!" he said, without turning his eye. I took up the shovel—hesitated.

"Markley, do you know that we are going at the rate of sixty miles an hour?"

"Coal!"

I was alarmed at the stern, cold rigidity of the man. His pallor was becoming frightful. I threw in the coal. At least we must stop at Dufreme. He told me that was the next hault. The little town approached. As the first houses came into view the engine sent its shriek of warning; it grew louder—louder.

We dashed into the street, up to the station, where a group of passengers waited, and passed it without the halt of an instant, catching a glimpse of the appalled faces of the waiting crowd. Then we were in the fields again. The speed now became literally breathless, the furnace glared red-hot. The heat, the velocity, the terrible nervous strain of the man beside me seemed to weigh the air. I found myself drawing long, stertorous breaths like one drowning.

I heaped in the coal at intervals, as he bade me. I did it because I was oppressed by an odd sense of duty, which I never had in my ordinary brain work. Since then I have understood how it is that dull, ignorant men, without a spark of enthusiasm, show such heroism as soldiers, firemen, and captains of wrecked vessels. It is this overpowering sense of routine duty. It's a finer thing than sheer bravery in my idea. However, I began to think that Markley was mad—laboring under some frenzy from drink, though I had never seen him touch liquor.

He did not move hand or foot, except in the mechanical control of his engine, his eye going from the gauge to the timepiece with a steadiness that was more terrible and threatening than any gleam of insanity would have been. Once he glared back at the long train sweeping after the engine with a headlong speed that rocked it from side to side.

One could imagine he saw the hundreds of men and women in the carriages talking, reading, smoking, unconscious that their lives were all in the hold of one man whom I now strongly suspected to be mad. I knew by his look that he remembered their lives were in his hand. He glanced at the clock.

"Twenty miles," he muttered. "Throw on more coal, Jack, the fire is going out."

I did it. Yes, I did it. There was something in the face of that man I could not resist. Then I climbed forward and shook him by the shoulder. "Markley," I shouted, "you are running this train into the jaws of death."

"I know it," he replied, quietly.

"Your mother is aboard the train!"

"Heavens!" He staggered to his feet. But even then he did not move his eyes from the gauge.

"Make up the fire," he commanded, and pushed in the throttle valve.

"I will not."

"Make up the fire, Jack," very quietly.

"I will not. You may murder yourself and your mother, but you shall not murder me."

He looked at me. His kindly gray eyes glared like those of a wild beast. But he controlled himself in a moment.

"I could throw you off this engine, and make short work of you," he said. "But, look here; do you see the station yonder?"

I saw a faint streak against the sky about five miles ahead.

"I was told to reach that station by six o'clock," he continued. "The express train meeting us is due now. I ought to have laid by for it at Dufreme. I was told to come on. The track is a single one. Unless I can make the siding at that station in three minutes, we shall meet in yonder hollow!"

"Somebody's blunder?" I said.

"Yes, I think so."

I said nothing. I threw on coal; if I had had petroleum I would have thrown it on. But I never was calmer in my life. When death actually stares a man in the face, it often frightens him into the most perfect composure. Markley pushed the valve still further. The engine began to give a strange panting sound. Far off to the south I could see the bituminous black smoke of a train. I looked at Markley inquiringly. He nodded. It was the express! I stooped to the fire.

"No more," he said.

I looked across the clear summer sky at the gray smoke of the peaceful little village, and beyond that a black line coming closer, closer, across the sky. Then I turned to the watch. In one minute more—well, I confess I sat down and buried my face in my hands. I don't think I tried to pray. I had a confused thought of a mass of mangled, dying men and women—mothers and their babies.

There was a terrific shriek from the engine, against which I leaned. Another in my face. A hot, hissing tempest swept past me. I looked up. We were on the siding and the express had gone by. It grazed our end carriage in passing. In a sort of delirious joy I sprang up and shouted to Markley. He did not speak. He sat there immovable and cold as a stone. I went to the train and brought his mother to him, and when he opened his eyes and took the old lady's hand in his I turned away.

Yes, gentlemen, I have been in many a railway accident, but I have always considered that the closest call I ever had.

"What was the blunder?"

I don't know. Markley made light of it ever afterward and kept it a secret, but no man on the line stood so high in the confidence of the company after that as he. By his coolness and nerve he had saved a hundred lives.

When Wolves Were Plentiful

Chambers' Journal.

Ancient chroniclers state that King Edgar attempted to extripate the wolves in England by commuting the punishments of certain offences into the acceptance of a certain number of wolves' tongues from each criminal, and in Wales by converting the tax of gold and silver into an annual tribute of 300 wolves' heads. In subsequent times their destruction was promoted by certain rewards, and some lands were held on condition of destroying the wolves which infested the parts of the kingdom in which they were situated. In 1281 these animals troubled several of the English counties, but after that period our records make no mention of them. The last wolf known in Scotland was killed in 1680 and in Ireland one was killed in 1701. Very fearful accounts are on record of the ravages committed by wolves when in hard weather they associated in immense flocks. So lately as 1760 such terror is said to have been excited in France by ravages of wolves that public prayers were offered for their destruction. Since India has become so much the country of Europeans the race of tigers has been much thinned, and ere long it is probable that they will be driven to the most remote and impenetrable districts. The wolf in these islands was hunted by an animal known under various appellations, as the Irish wolf dog, the Irish grayhound, the Highland deerhound, and the Scotch grayhound. There appears to be no doubt that all the dogs thus denominated were essentially of the same breed. Its original home is supposed to have been Ireland, whence, during the proud days of ancient Rome, it was frequently conveyed in iron cages to assist in the sports of the city on the Tiber. Buffon observes: "The Irish greyhounds are of a very ancient race and still exist (though their number is small) in their original climate; they were called by the ancients dogs of Epirus and Albanian dogs." Holinshed, in his "Description of Ireland and the Irish," written in 1586, says: "They are not without wolves and greyhounds to hunt them, bigger of bone and limb than a colt." In Anglo-Saxon times a nobleman never went out unaccompanied by these dogs and his hawk, and so highly were they esteemed that by the forest laws of Canute it was ordered that no person under the rank of gentleman should keep one.

Many anecdotes of the early Quakers are preserved in Philadelphia, to show how even, under Peen's rule, the impulses of human nature struggled against their rigid laws of duty and submission.

Not a few of the young men of Quaker families served in the Revolutionary Army and in the navy in 1812, and wore on the field their broad-brimmed hats and shad-bellied coats.

It is said that one of these young "Fighting Quakers," as they were called, met his father on the street on his return home. The old man laid his hand rebukingly on his son's arm, saying, "The wool in thy coat was sheared from my sheep, and woven in thy mother's loom, yet there is blood on it!"

"And the blood is thy blood," boldly replied the young man. "If thou hadst been twenty instead of sixty, thou, too, wouldst have fought under Washington."

"Zachariah!" stammered the old man. "It may be so, Zachariah. Thou hadst better go in to thy dinner."

A well known story is that of a Friend who was in a sailing vessel boarded by a British press-gang in 1812. He paced the deck with folded arms during the fight, until he saw one of the assailants climbing on deck by means of a cable.

"Friend, dost thou want the rope?" he said, calmly, hurrying up, knife in hand. "Thou shalt have it," and he cut it. The man dropped into the sea.

A better authenticated story is that of a grave old Quaker, two of whose sons went into the late Civil War without his knowledge. The youngest son was fired, as was almost every other young man at that time, from Maine to Florida, with the wish to give his life for the cause which he believed just. He had accepted a commission, but did not wish to go without his father's consent.

He took occasion to make his preparations rather ostentatiously in his father's sight, laid out his officer's uniform and tried to attract attention, but all in vain. As a last resort he seated himself in the room where the old man was pacing up and down, and began polishing his sword.

His father watched him, with a face growing paler and with dim eyes. At last he went up to the young man and said quietly: "Samuel, if thee thinks thee must use one of those tools, buy the best and—I will pay for it, Samuel."

Don't try, if you are an ordinary man to occupy two seats in a crowded horse car. Only women can do that and look as innocent as a lily-of-the-valley all the while.

THE DEMON DEBT

The Safe Rule for Beginners in Life.

From the Philadelphia Record.

One of the most serious and insidious obstacles in the way of thrift, of ease of mind and of true household comfort, is the "running account." Doubtless the credit system originated in a benevolent intention to do good, and, in its wider application, it is necessary to carry on the great commercial, social and financial undertakings of the world, but it is a great enemy to home economy. It is the foundation for debt and all the distressing formula of indebtedness, duns, notes of hand, liens, mortgages and a thousand-and-one of the miseries and incumbrances known to legal phraseology and practices which are the bane of life.

Jack Falstaff, who got all the good out of the credit system there was in it, declared: "If I had a thousand sons the first human principle I would teach them should be to forswear their potations and addict themselves to sack." But Jack was the prince of scapegraces and only remembered one half of the meum et tuum division of property. His debts never bothered him except he had difficulty in making them. If the writer had a thousand sons and daughters the first human principle she would teach them would be never to establish a running account. No one can live within his or her income who spends money in advance of earning it. Persons who live in this way, in fact, never have any income; they have an outgo that eats up income before it gets inside the door.

The "running account," however, is more dangerous for the housewife, because she is not usually either the wage-earner or the pay-master in the household. She gets what she wants on credit, because there is no particular trouble in getting it and without the appreciation of the trouble of paying for it, which grows out of the necessity of scraping the dollars together in whatever way the husband comes by his money, whether it be in swinging a blacksmith's hammer, in throwing a weaver's shuttle, in measuring tape and molasses or in guiding the handles of his plow. She does the multifarious and never ending work of her household, keeps the table well spread, the house tidy, the beds aired, and the bread well-baked an nutritious, and it is not at all to be wondered at that she thinks this is enough. The mistake is in the beginning in having things that are not paid for. The housekeeper who spends only what money she has to spend is not only relieved of the worry of debt—for what worries the husband will worry the good wife—but she is made a conscious power in the pay and provender department of her establishment. Instead of being a drag upon her husband's energies she is made to understand for herself the limitations of the fund which she draws upon and how much may be paid and how much laid up for emergencies.

Young couples who start out by running in debt should remember that they cannot, in the long run, get an inch the start of the world in that way. They can only live up to their earning after all is said and done. By running an account with the butcher, the baker and candlestickmaker, they give these several dealers an opportunity to charge them high prices for their purchases. The storekeeper who sells his wares on credit is always obliged to make good the accounts of his bad customers by taking larger profits from those who get credit and pay. Besides, it is a rule, which acute business men thoroughly understand, that money is worth and will usually fetch some rate of interest or an equivalent sum by being frequently turned over. It is not fair to suppose that the shopkeeper looks to his credit customer to make good the deficit in his bank account brought about by the system of "running accounts?" On the contrary, the buyer who buys for cash can choose where she will buy, which is a great advantage, and she can buy for lower prices. The cash price is always the lowest, and the cash customer is always the preferred customer.

It too often happens that no check is kept upon the running account. Settling-day is always a day of surprise for the debtor, and big store bills are a perpetual source of family broils and discomfort. People who pay "some other day" nine times out of ten carry the improvidence of their getting into an improvidence of use. Those who are accustomed to get without care use without stint.

There is no rule in the world for large affairs or small ones like the rule of "pay as you go." It is the foundation not only of good finance but of good temper and good fortune as well. And especially the housewife who is wise enough to give the matter a little serious thought and determination enough to stand by her convictions will need no monitor to warn her of the folly and danger of "running accounts."

Ideal Husbands and Wives.

It may be truthfully said that less than one-fourth of the women who marry know what they are doing. They have no idea of what their duties are, much less their rights. About all they know is that they are getting married. Is it any wonder that so many are disappointed and wish themselves out of it?

It is perfectly right for a woman to have an ideal husband, yet more important that she should have a clear and distinct notion of what constitutes an ideal wife. There's where the trouble lies. They all want ideal husbands, but never seem to think that men may want ideal wives. Men imagine that a wife will make them happy, and women think that all they need to put an end to their troubles is to secure a husband. How sadly both are disappointed. The wife who expects her husband to make her happy is foredoomed to disappointment; so is the man who expects the same from his wife. We make our own happiness, and in so doing make others happy.

Preaching Under Difficulties.

A curious case of the pursuit of preaching under difficulties came under my notice. In a country church in the remote districts of the West of England a swarm of bees had taken up their quarters in the oaken woodwork at the back of the pulpit, to the dismay and discomfort of the weekly occupant of that structure. During the discharge of his peculiar function he was not only annoyed with the busy, sullen roar of the hive, but his fear of arousing their animosity by the loud challenge of his tones, or by the vibration of the pulpit, was stimulated by the light skirmishers which used to come out and perform all sort of minatory maneuvres within measurable distance of his nose. The annoyance at length became intolerable, and orders were given to smoke out the bees. This was affectually done; but, unfortunately, the clerk in smoking out the bees set fire to the church, and it was burned to the ground.—Chambers's Journal.

Prehistoric Skating.

As is well known, the art of skating is a prehistoric one. In many parts of Europe bones of domesticated animals have been found which had been used as skates or as runners of small sledges. It is of considerable interest to learn that similar implements are found still in use in several parts of northern Germany. In The Journal of the Berlin Ethnological society, sledges are described which consist of a board resting on the bones of a horse. But, besides this, skates are used, the runners of which consist of the lower jaw of cattle, the curvature of the lower side serving admirably the object of the [illegible]. Science.

THE TALE-TALE HEART.

If It Were Worn on the Sleeve There Would be no Bluffing at Poker.

Some years ago, on the frontier, in a little den, half hotel and half gambling house, I saw a most astounding feat performed.

It was done by a gambler named Paxton, a tall, cadaverous, nervous-looking fellow, who is pretty well known in the West, partly through his professional dexterity and partly through a certain faculty in applying his index finger to the instrument that has immortalized Mr. Colt. I think he is at present in Dodge city, Kansas.

The way it came about was this: I met Paxton at the supper table and fell into conversation with him. He had been a keen observer throughout a very checkered career, and interwove a running description of the country and some very free-hand portraits of prominent citizens with a vein of sardonic philosophy that was extremely entertaining. In short, I wanted to see more of him, and in the course of the evening dropped into the barroom, where he was the presiding genius at a faro table, for the particular purpose of drawing him out. Presently the game dwindled down to nothingness, and pushing back his chair he picked up the thread of our talk, and so it drifted on from one topic to another until something was said about coolness in trying positions.

"Coolness is like beauty," said Paxton; "it's only skin deep. No man is really cool in the presence of great danger, but if he can appear to be and carry it off that is all that is necessary. And, by the way," he added, "that reminds me of something that may interest you. Just run your eye over that faro layout, and pick out a card, in your mind."

I did not exactly see the connection, but did as he told me. On the layout, or board, were pasted, face upward, the cards of one suit, from ace to king. I mentally selected the jack.

"Now then," he said, laying his hand impressively on mine, "let's see if I can read which it was. But it seems to me you have forgotten." I assured him I remembered perfectly. "All right," he continued, "think just how it looks."

I pictured vividly in my mind's eye the idiotic effigy on the jack, and he began to count: "Ace, deuce, tray, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king. It was the jack," he said.

I was a good deal surprised, and protested that it must be a guess.

"All right," he said, "select another." I chose the four, and he began again. "Ace, deuce, tray, four—that's it—the four."

Of course there was no room for the guess theory after that, and I went away completely mystified. It seemed to be a perfect example of mind reading, pure and simple, much more clever and open than anything done by Browne. Bishop had not then come to the front. A few days afterward Paxton became so fond of me that he told me how he did it.

"It's all in the heart," he said. You may stiffen up your face, wall your eyes, and not move a muscle, but all the while your heart, which you can't control, is throb, throb, throbing away, blabbing everything it knows. When I put my hand on yours I dropped my finger on your pulse, and when I named the right card it gave a little quaver, as plain as day. The talk about your forgetting the card was simply to make you think about it as hard as possible."

The pulse trick that Paxton showed me is simple and easily performed by any one of reasonably sensitive touch. I have done it over a hundred times with as many different people, and never made a single failure after the first few attempts when I was getting the hang of it. The jog or quaver of the pulse is very characteristic and quite unmistakable, and the trick forms a neat and effective parlor illusion. Of course faro layouts are not supposed to be accessible, but a deck of cards or blocks lettered with the alphabet will answer. I have found in most cases, particularly with ladies who are delicately organized, it can be done by simply requesting the subject to think of a number or letter, but to insure success it is better to have a visual object on which the mind can be more readily concentrated.

Following out this line several other things suggested themselves which are pretty experiments and easily performed. Here are a couple of them: Take a sheet of foolscap and rule it crossways into six spaces of equal width. Then number the spaces, and request the subject to think intently of one of them. While he is doing so let him take a pen by the tip of the holder and draw a line from right to left across the sheet, and the line when it enters the space on which his mind was fixed, will almost invariably incline toward the body. Furthermore, it will show, on close inspection, a tremulous edge, while the balance of it is firm.

Another and more striking test may be performed as follows: Lay the ace, deuce, tray, and four of ordinary playing cards face up in a square on the table. Then let the subject hold a pen suspended, by a short string tied to the end, above the centre of the square, and tell him to shut his eyes and think of one of the cards. In a few seconds the pen will begin to oscillate toward the one, and finally swing directly over it. Neither of these experiments should be explained beforehand, as in that case the subject will probably exert his will power to defeat them, and they may fail.

In connection with this curious tendency of the heart and muscles to betray themselves I had my attention called some time since to an article in the Revue Scientifique (Paris) describing an apparatus to do on a large scale what Paxton did on a small. It was the invention of Prof. Masso and consisted of a table on which a man could stretch at full length and, having an equipoise so delicate that the slightest disturbance of his centre of gravity would cause a large indicating needle below to move to one side or the other. It was designed to show how the heart and circulation are instantly affected by the mind, and some strange things were done on it. The slightest emotion would cause the needle to incline toward the head, and it would dart in that direction even when the man on the table was asleep and a noise was made in the room, though not sufficiently loud to awaken him. Masso relates that an Italian professor submitted to the experiment and, reclining at full length, read to himself from two books, a poet in his own language and Homer in the original. The needle was passive while he read the Italian's verses; but when he came to the harder task of translating Homer, it moved toward the head and remained fixed immovably there. Taken all in all, I am inclined to think that the little force pump in one's breast is about the only truthful organ, and that when novelists speak of a false heart they slander it. As a matter of fact, its delicate throbs are attuned to every hidden thought, and perhaps some day genius will devise a form of Masso's instrument which may be attached to a witness in court and enable justice to dispense with the formality of an oath.

Cruel Punishment.

A respectable, industrious married woman named Northwood, living at Ampthill, England, who has four children, one in arms, was charged with damaging trees that grew in her cottage garden, the damage being estimated at 5 shillings. The husband was out of work, and, there being no fuel, the poor woman broke off branches to make a fire for her shivering children. The woman was sentenced to pay a fine of 25 shilling and 10 shillings cost or to undergo a months' imprisonment. She was in Bedford jail for several days, and in the meantime her children collected the money to pay the fine.—New York Sun.

CONVINCING GUARANTEES

TO THE PUBLIC:

Having branch houses and laboratories in seven different quarters, and therefore having a world-wide experience, we, H. H. Warner & Co., justify ourselves in making the following statements:

FIRST.—For the past decade we have held that 93 per cent. of diseases originate in the kidneys, which introduce uric acid into the system, a poison that is injurious to every organ, attacking and destroying first the organs which are the weakest. We have also held that if the kidneys are kept in perfect health most of the ordinary ailments will be prevented, or, if contracted, cured. Other practitioners have held that extreme kidney disease is incurable. We have proof to the contrary, however, in hundreds of thousands of cases in every section of the globe.

SECOND.—The kidneys being the sewers of the human system, it is impossible to keep the entire system in good working order unless these organs are doing their full duty. Most people do not believe their kidneys are out of order because they never give them any pain. It is a peculiarity of kidney disease that it may long exist without the knowledge of the patient or of the practitioner. It may be suspected if there is any gradual departure from ordinary health, which departure increases as age comes on.

THIRD.—We do not cure every known disease from one bottle. This is an impossibility.

FOURTH.—Warner's Safe Remedies have been recognized by the doctors and the people all over the globe as standards of the highest excellence.

FIFTH.—We make the following unqualified guarantees:

GUARANTEE 1.—That Warner's Safe Remedies are pure and harmless.

GUARANTEE 2—That the testimonials used by us are genuine, and so far as we know, absolutely true. We will forfeit $5,000 for proof to the contrary.

GUARANTEE 3.—Warner's Safe Remedies have permanently cured many millions of people whom the doctors have pronounced incurable. Permanent cures are always convincing proof of merit.

REV. J. P. ARNOLD, Camden, Tenn., had fearful abscesses caused by Kidney disease. In 1878 and 1881, other running abscesses appeared. He was fully cured in 1883 by Warner's Safe Cure and in 1888 reported himself sound and well and he is over 70 years old.

MRS. ANNIE JENNESS MILLER, editress of Dress, 253 Fifth avenue New York, eight years ago was cured of nervous prostration, when the best New England physicians could do her no good. She cured herself with Warner's Safe Cure, and writes in 1887: "To-day I am a perfectly well woman. It is the only medicine I ever take."

L. B. PRICE, M. D., a gentleman and physician of the highest standing of Hanover, C. H., Va., four years ago, after trying every other remedy for bright's disease, including famous mineral waters, cured himself by Warner's Safe Cure, and March 24, 1888, wrote: "I have never had the slightest symptoms of my old and fearful trouble."

HERMAN URBAN, of MacNeal & Urban, safe makers, Cincinnati, O., was broken down by excessive business cares. He was fully restored to health four years ago by Warner's Safe Cure and has since been in robust health.

DR. DIO. LEWIS wrote: "If I found myself afflicted with a serious kidney disorder I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

MRS. E. J. WOLF, Gettysburg, Pa., S. C. Farrington, Gotha, Fla., J. M. Long, 43 East 2d street, Cincinnati, O., and the sister of J. W. Westlake, Mt. Vernon, O., were cured of consumption, (caused by kidney acid in the blood, as over half the cases are,) by Warner's Safe Cure.

We could give many thousands of similar testimonials. Warner's Safe Cure does exactly as represented.

SEVENTH.—Warner's Safe Remedies were put on the market in obedience to a vow made by H. H. Warner that, if the remedy now known as Warner's safe cure, restored him to health he would spread its merits before the entire world. In ten years the demand has grown so that laboratories have been established in seven quarters of the globe. Warner's Safe Cure is a scientific specific—it cures when all the doctors fail, thousands of the best physicians prescribe it regularly, its power over disease is permanent and its reputation is of the most exalted character. Can you afford longer to ignore its extraordinary power? Now, in the spring of the year, a few bottles will tone you up and cure all those ill feelings which, unknown to you, are caused by the fatal kidney poison in the blood, which will surely end fatally, if not at once removed. For this no other specific is known.

NOTHING IS KNOWN TO SCIENCE AT ALL comparable to the CUTICURA REMEDIES in their marvelous properties of cleansing, purifying and beautifying the skin, and in curing torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly and pimply diseases of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair.

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

For The Nervous The Debilitated The Aged.

Medical and scientific skill has at last solved the problem of the long needed medicine for the nervous, debilitated, and the aged, by combining the best nerve tonics, Celery and Coca, with other effective remedies, which, acting gently but efficiently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, remove disease, restore strength and renew vitality. This medicine is

Paine's Celery Compound

It fills a place heretofore unoccupied, and marks a new era in the treatment of nervous troubles. Overwork, anxiety, disease, lay the foundation of nervous prostration and weakness, and experience has shown that the usual remedies do not mend the strain and paralysis of the nervous system. Recommended by professional and business men. Send for circulars. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists.

THE CAMP FIRE.

Gen. Harney's Dignity—The Model Soldier—A Polite Private—Army Movements, Etc.

Gen. Harney's Notion of Dignity.

The following story is told of General Harney when he was in command at Camp Verde, Texas. He was an intensely dignified officer, and if there was one thing he detested more than another it was undignified haste. One evening, just as he was about to hold dress parade, he perceived that he had forgotten his handkerchief, and as the weather was very hot, he said to his orderly:

"Go to my quarters, quick, and bring my handkerchief."

The orderly touched his cap and started for the quarters several hundred yards distant. After he had proceeded a short distance, remembering that there was no time to lose, he broke into a trot.

"See that ——scoundrel running as if the Indians were after him. If there is anything I hate it is to see a soldier running instead of marching properly. Here, my man," continued Harney to another soldier, "go after that man and tell him to walk,——him."

The second soldier started after the first, but as the first kept on running the second one saw his only chance to deliver the message was to hurry up, so he, too, broke into a run. To say that Harney swore is to use a mild expression.

"Here, Sergeant, go after that man and tell him if he don't stop running I'll hang him up by the thumbs."

The Sergeant started out on a brisk walk, but as his predecessor had a good start he, too, began to run as hard as he could.

"If all the three scoundrels ain't running like jack rabbits!" ejaculated Harney. "I'll show 'em," and tucking his sword under his arm he started in pursuit as fast as he could run, but suddenly remembering his dignity he came to a halt, and walked stiffly back to the place where the dress parade was to come off.—Texas Siftings.

The Model Soldier.

Changes which, during the last century, have been brought about in the garments of men have in the main been due to governmental action, says a writer in the Atlantic. A century ago stockings and breeches were affirmed as the covering for the legs of men. It was in time found by the medical authorities that the close fitting stocking was apt to produce in marching soldiers a diseased condition of the legs. This led to the invention of the trousers, which left the lower leg free. This new custom, thus planted in the army—that part of the community which of old was the glass of fashion—naturally spread to civil life. In this way, too, the habit of wearing long hair disappeared. The camp is no place for such a fashion. To keep men clean in hard campaigning cropped polls were a necessity. In many other matters of dress the military habit has affected the garments of men in civil life. The changes have generally been for the better, but there are some cases in which the influence of custom is harmful. The stiff collar, clearly a remnant of the gorget, is a case in point; the two buttons on the back of the coat, which once served to hold up the sword-belt, a meaningless survival maintained by conventionality alone. The divided tail of the ordinary coat, which appears to be derived from the needs of the horseman, affords another instance of the same nature. Men were once dependent on the saddle for their greater activities, and their coats retain the mark of that time.—National Review.

He Was Bound to be Polite.

Early in the war Col. Oliver, then a major, was acting as an inspecting officer to a newly-raised regiment that carried the green flag. He found the Irish recruits quick enough at everything but military courtesy. Having several times made the tour of the posts without receiving the proper military recognition, he started out one day to make the rounds all over again compelling all raw recruits to "face out" smartly and give the prescribed salute with some style to it. One elderly Irishman, very anxious to learn, faced out well, but neglected to salute.

"Now, my man," said the major, "we must do that all over again. The next time I pass salute me properly, and try to throw into the salute all the civility and courtesy you can."

The major retired a little distance and resumed his march for this particular post. When he reached it Private O'Grady faced out in fine style and came to the present with a snap. But he had not forgotten the major's command to throw into the salute all the courtesy he could, for in an insinuating voice he remarked:

"Good morning, Major Oliver. It's well ye're looking this morning. I think ye'r honor's health must be good."—Boston Transcript.

A Transfer of Troops.

The Secretary of War has directed the following transfer of troops, the movements to commence not later than June 1, next:

The Third Infantry and the Twenty fifth Infantry will exchange stations within the department of Dakota.

The Fifth Infantry will be concentrated at Bismarck, Dak., and then moved to such stations in the Department of Texas as the commanding General of that department may designate.

The Sixteenth Infantry will move to the Department of the Platte, with headquarters at Fort Douglas, Utah; the companies of the Sixth Infantry, now at Fort Douglas, Utah, to Fort Lewis, Colo.; the Twenty-Second Infantry to the Department of Dakota, with headquarters at Fort Keogh, Mont.

The commanding General, Department of Arizona, will order some company from his command to Fort Marcy, N. M.

The Thirteenth Infantry, in the Department of Arizona, will exchange stations with the Twenty-fourth Infantry, in the Department of the Missouri.

Battery G, First Artillery, in the Department of the East, will exchange stations with Battery F, First Artillery, in the Department of California.

The portion of the Eighth Cavalry now in the Department of Dakota will be concentrated at Fort Meade, Dak., and then moved to Fort Riley, Kas.

The Eighth Cavalry will be concentrated at such point in the Department of Texas as its commanding General may designate and moved to Fort Meade, Dak.

Items.

There are now 200 inmates in the Grand Army Home at Yountville, California.

The gain in the Grand Army during the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1887, was about 14,000.

The McClellan monument will cost $30,000. Only $3,000 has been placed in the treasury.

The increase in the various departments is such as indicates a year of active prosperity.

The average age of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic is estimated to be 48 years.

The Department of Massachusetts expended during the past year for relief the sum of $41,899.94.

The Michigan Soldiers' Home, at Grand Rapids, has 350 inmates, with thirty absent on furlough.

Curious Mental Freaks.

Lizzie Zink, a 10-year-old girl of Mount Joy, Lancaster county, Pa., was discovered to be in a comatose condition the other day while at school. When she entered the schoolroom she told a playmate that an old woman had been following her and was coming in through the keyhole. The child, with her eyes tightly closed, cried loudly, "Gey weck," the Pennsylvania Dutch for "go away." When requested to open her eyes she said the old woman was holding them shut with her fingers. Figures were placed on the blackboard, and notwithstanding the fact that the girl's eyes were closed, she readily named all of them correctly. With the same precision she repeated words which were written upon the blackboard by the teacher. All questions were answered without hesitancy. Letters and figures were written on the floor with chalk at different points, and to the utter amazement of those present, the girl told in every instance, both their location and character. The water can, basin, bucket and the wearing apparel of other children in the school were in turn held above her head and behind and in every instance the nature of the article was announced without hesitancy. When Mr. Ober arrived she said she was glad to see him, though her eyes were closed at the time and no one had mentioned his name. She was taken home and remained in the same condition for six hours.

A German citizen of Hoboken was informed that a lady had called to see him in his absence. "A lady," he mused aloud, "a lady." Upon an accurate description, he suddenly brightened up and added: "Oh, dot vos no lady; dot vos my vife."

The Meanest Cheat Yet.

From the McKean County Miner.

A reputable citizen of the county writes us that not many days ago a man took a load of grain to a mill in this county, put his horses in the mill shed, and gave them half a bushel of oats in the feed boxes. He then went into the mill, but immediately returned to get a bag, but he heard his horses pawing as though they wanted something to eat. He went to their heads, and what was his astonishment to find their oats all gone.

He then began to investigate, and found the boxes had a false bottom. As soon as the horses put their noses into the oats it pressed the bottom of the box down so that the oats would run through into another box, the bottom of which was filled with auger holes. From last winter the poor horses that were hauling logs were supposed to be fed in this shed, and the thief who robbed the noble animals of their food ought to be punished.

The whole secret of good manners is to "do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

In every community there are a number of men whose whole time is not occupied, such as teachers, ministers, farmers' sons, and others. To these classes especially we would say, if you wish to make several hundred dollars during the next few months, write at once to B. F. Johnson & Co., of Richmond, Va., and they will show you how to do it.

An infant was crying fretfully in his mother's arms in a street car the other day, when she turned to a man at her side with the request of: "Wud you plaze to look cross at him sor; he'll think it's his father and kape shtill."

Yon sturdy oak whose branches wide
Boldly the storms and winds defy,
Not long ago an acorn, small,
Lay dormant 'neath the summer sky.
Not unlike the thrifty oak in its germ, development and growth, is consumption. But even this mighty foe of mankind, positively yields to the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery if taken early. Don't be blind to your own interests and think yours a hopeless case. This remarkable remedy has rescued thousands. Of druggists.

If you dread a piece of work the best way is to go right at it and get it done, and your mind will be so relieved you will feel happy over it.

Teachers.

There is an increasing demand for teachers who are qualified to teach Bookkeeping and Penmanship. Teachers should improve the opportunity offered by the St. Paul Business College during the summer, and fit themselves for more remunerative work. We use, in the "Normal" department of our College, the State Text Books, and teachers will receive individual instruction from the principal. Students may enter at any time, and a special reduction from our regular rates will be given to all who enter before June 1. W. K. MULLIKEN, St. Paul, Minn.

A Thrilling Incident

In the mission life of Mrs. Ingal's, in Burmah, is well told in the "Baptist Messenger," relating how she was sent for to visit one of the Buddhist high priests, who had been nearly killed; and how, while in the most holy place in their temple, where none but priests had ever before been admitted, she was permitted unrebuked to use for him the sacred vessels which none but the high priest dare touch, and to even overturn and sit on one of their gods to rest; all through the influence of Perry Davis' Pain Killer, called by them "god medicine," so successfully had she used it in curing their many diseases, some of them considered heretofore fatal in that climate, among which were cholera, liver complaint, dyspepsia, the bite of venomous reptiles, etc. This speaks volumes for the Pain Killer.—London Times.

It is the early bird that is poisoned by catching the worm that has eaten Paris-green.—Picayune.

In Love's Harness.

Most women look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life, but they should constantly bear in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form, are the best passports to a happy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weaknesses, "dragging-down" sensations, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex have an unfailing specific in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 Cents.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. C., 181 Pearl st. N. Y.

Purify Your Blood

For a good spring medicine we confidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. By its use the blood is purified, enriched and vitalized, that tired feeling is entirely overcome, and the whole body given strength and vigor. The appetite is restored and sharpened, the digestive organs are toned, and the kidneys and liver invigorated.

Those who have never tried Hood's Sarsaparilla should do so this spring. It is a thoroughly honest and reliable preparation, purely vegetable, and contains no injurious ingredient whatever.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the very best medicine to take to purify the blood and to expel the germs of scrofula, salt rheum, and other poisons which cause so much suffering, and sooner or later undermine the general health. By its peculiar curative power, Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the system while it eradicates disease.

"Early last spring I was very much run down, had nervous headache, felt miserable and all that. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and was benefited by it. MRS. J. M. TAYLOR, 1119 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"For a first-class spring medicine my wife and I both think very highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We both took it last spring. It did us a great deal of good and we felt better through the hot weather than ever before. It cured my wife of sick headache, from which she has suffered a great deal, and relieved me of a dizzy, tired feeling. J. H. PEARCE, Supt. Granite Railway Co., Concord, N. H.

Purifies the Blood

"We wish to express our heartfelt thanks for the good Hood's Sarsaparilla has done our little daughter. For three years she suffered with scrofula, which went to her eyes. After we had spent a good deal of money with no benefit, we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla. Two bottles greatly relieved, and five permanently cured her. We heartily recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. C. F. FALLER, Newton, Ill.

ARM AND HAMMER CHURCH & CO'S SODA BRAND SODA

To Housekeepers and Farmers.—It is important that the Soda you use should be White and Pure same as all similar substances used for food. To insure obtaining only the "Arm & Hammer" brand Soda, buy it in "pound or half pound" cartoons, which bear our name and trade-mark, as inferior goods are sometimes substituted for the "Arm & Hammer" brand when bought in bulk. Parties using Baking Powder should remember that its sole rising property consists of bicarbonate of soda. One teaspoonful of the "Arm & Hammer" brand of Soda mixed with sour milk equals four teaspoonfuls of the best Baking Powder, saving twenty times its cost, besides being much healthier, because it does not contain any injurious substances, such as alum, terra alba etc., of which many Baking Powders are made. Dairymen and Farmers should use only the "Arm & Hammer" brand for cleaning and keeping Milk Pans Sweet and Clean.

The production of Haggard's "She" by the Webster-Brady company on Tuesday evening was certainly something new and unique, and people who had read the strangely fascinating story were interested in the play throughout. The first act was certainly on the ordinary plan and the interest did not awaken until the curtain rolled up for the second time. From this on until the withered form of the imaginary being, "She," appeared from the flames, every eye was directed to the stage. People who attended the performance for the purpose of seeing the weird production were satisfied, but whether they could conscientiously admire the entire production is a matter for them to settle. The success of the play depends entirely upon the scenic effects.

Notice to Railroad Men.

Work of an Incendiary.

Tuesday night at 1 o'clock Chas. Cross, the watchman whose residence is at the foot of Laurel street near the Mississippi river bridge, was awakened from his sleep by a dense volume of smoke which filled his room and came near strangling him. He immediately aroused his family and they made their exit in their night clothes from the burning building. The fire alarm was sounded and a quick respose was followed but the house was nearly destroyed before they could check the flames, a small portion of the household furniture was saved and that in a damaged condition. Mr. Cross thinks the house was set on fire as he found a pail in the garden the next morning that had contained kerosene. The house and contents were insured for $725.

Walker—Parker—At the residence of the brides parents on Monday evening April 30, 1888, by the Rev. E. J. Brownson, Charles Walker and Miss Essie Parker.

The parties to the above contract are known to all our citizens. The announcement, although anticipated by some, was quite unexpected as the arrangements were made quietly and the young people "stole a march" on their friends. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Parker and the groom is the junior member of the firm of S. Walker & Son. Mr. and Mrs. Walker went to housekeeping immediately everything having been previously arranged. Several fine presents were tendered them among which was an elegant piano from the groom's parents and five lots in East Brainerd from Mr. and Mrs. Parker.

Haverly's Great Minstrels

Will appear at the opera house Tuesday evening May 8th. This is the greatest musical combination in America. The San Francisco Bulletion says of them:

Haverly's Great Minstrel Combination of first-class and versatile performers hold the stage this week. Haverly's Minstrels have for years embodied all that was best and new in the minstrel line—which has made them famous both in this country and Europe. The company comes here in its entirety. There has been a rush to see them. The minstrel programme opens with a monster first-part, raising tier on tier to the back of the stage, divided into three "editions," with new end comedians for each. The olio brings the varied talent of the company to the front in acts an specialties that introduces their best lines of business, and an amusing afterpiece closes the bill. The first part presents the company in new and elegant costumes, and is presided over by the be[illegible] conversationalists, J. N. Norcross, Ed. Manning, Harry Armstrong, Geo. Edwards and Lew Spencer, commedians and end men, create the fun by new witticisms, quirks and jokes. Manning makes a feature of his fine dancing; Spencer of his humor as a raconteur, J. D. Green, Castell, Brydges and Henry Leighton contribute some capital vocalism. It has a laughable finish, with a dashingly costumed song and dance by eight of the company. The main features of the olio are the wonderful act that shows young Hilton's flexibility; the $5,000 challange dance by Howe & Doyle, in which they dance to the genuine dance music of the patterings of their own feet. the graceful, manly and artistict Olympian Pastimes of the Morrello troupe, five in number—a remarkable fine quintette of sernaders: the very humorous act by Spencer and Edwards, and the closing one by Queen, Stowe and Randall, in which they do most everything that is remarkable in the musical line.

Marks of Time.

The death of W. A. Smith on Monday morning was a shock to the entire community. His ailment was typhoid pneumonia and he had been confined to the house about a week, and was not considered in a dangerous condition until within two or three days before he died. The deceased was the senior member of the firm of W. A. Smith & C., and had been a resident of this city for fourteen years. He was highly esteemed in business and private circles for his manly traits of character. Those who knew him best were his steadfast friends and in all the years of his business career in this city no word but that of respect was ever uttered in connection with his name. A wife and three children, the oldest but nine years of age, are left to mourn the loss of a fond husband and kind hearted and indulgent father. The deceased was in his forty-fourth year.

The funeral exercises were conducted at his late residence Thursday afternoon, the Rev. J. A. Rowell officiating, after which the remain were laid to rest in Evergreen Cemetery. The business houses of the city all closed during the services out of respect to the deceased and his family.

Mrs. John McCarthy died on Monday morning of heart disease, after an illness of less than three days. Mrs. McCarthy was in her 43rd year and had long been a resident of Brainerd, moving here with her husband from St. Cloud in 1871. The deceased was a most estimable Christian lady, highly esteemed and whose circle of friends extended throughout the entire city. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family. The funeral exercises were conducted by Rev. Father Watry Tuesday afternoon.

Bridget Call, wife of Martin Call, died on Thursday or congestion of the lungs at the advanced age of 68 years. Mr. and Mrs. Call came to Brainerd many years ago and were among the first settlers in the city. The deceased was highly respected by all her acquaintances. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church this morning, Rev. Father Watry officiating.

Geo. Muirhead died at the Sanitarium Thursday morning of typhoid fever. The deceased was a new arrival in Brainerd, having come here from Canada about six weeks ago and commenced work for the N. P. road. He was a member of the B. of L. E., who will take charge of his remains until work is received from his father. He was an unmarried man 28 years of age.

The Uniform Rank.

The uniform rank of the Knights of Pythias will be organized to-night by Col. E. S. Radcliffe, of St. Paul. After the institution the members of the organization will repair to the City Restaurant where a banquet will be given. At the banquet H. S. Totton will act as toastmaster and toasts will be responded to as follows:

"Knights of Pythias of the World."—E. S. Radcliffe.

"Our Officers"—Judge C. B. Sleeper

"Our Uniform Rank"—C. D. Johnson.

"Good of the Order."—W. A. Fleming.

The organization starts out with a membership of thirty as follows: Captain—Judge C. B. Sleeper; First lieutenant, W. J. Bain; Second lieutenant, H. S. Totton; Recorder, A. F. Ferris; Treasurer, C. The Poor Farm.

The county commissioners at their meeting on Tuesday entered into a verbal agreement with Henry Spalding for the purchase of his farm in Oaklawn township for the specified sum of $4,000. Nothing concerning the transaction appears in the minutes of the meeting which appear elesewhere in this issue, for the fact that they have no authority to transact such business only at their January and July meetings. If the farm was to be purchased this season the arrangements had to be made immediately in order to get in a crop. At their July meeting the commissioners will pay a certain part of the purchase price and receive a deed, but in the meantime the work of getting things in shape will be carried on by them. Mr. John Milen was engaged as overseer at a salary of $60 per month and board for himself and family and he will move onto the place immediately. The paupers who are now scattered over the county will be brought to the farm and be taken care of there, and for the accommodation of which an addition will be built onto the house. It is the intention of the commissioners to make this farm self supporting, or as near so as possible. The first year of course will entail considerable expense as teams and cows will have to be purchased and additions made to the house and out buildings. The move in buying this farm may seem to some as an act not warranted at the present time, but it is a matter that would have had to be done eventually and could be carried out at much less expense now than at some future time. The expense of supporting paupers at boarding houses, hotels or in private families as has been done in the past is too expensive a luxury to be indulged in for years to come, as the paupers are increasing in number as the county grows older.

Taken Up.

Came to my enclosure Tuesday May 1st, a two-year-old heifer, spotted red and white. The owner is requested to take her away which he can do by paying the expense.

Gull River Notes.

Miss Alice Day is visiting friends in Brainerd.

Miss. Dugaw is visiting friends in Little Falls this week.

We are sorry to learn that little Claud Wood is quite sick.

Mr. Stafford had the misfortune to lose one of his horses Friday night.

Mrs. H. C. Mills, of Motley, spent a few days visiting friends in this city.

Several of our young people took in the play at Brainerd Tuesday evening.

Mr. Wilson is having his house plastered and will move into it as soon as possible.

We are glad to see that Charlie Mooers is able to be out again after his recent severe illness.

Will Casey has gone to Minneapolis where he has an engagement to work for the Chute Bros.

Mr. E. A. Horr has returned from Minneapolis where he has been spending a few days with his family.

The W. C. T. U. league is progressing finely, the house was full and the programme was very interesting Tuesday evening.

T. H. Mooers Jr. has lately purchased a fine saddle horse, which is certainly a beauty and it is claimed that he can throw dirt in the eyes of any other horse in this part of the country.

Mrs. H. M. Chiperfield delivered a very interesting discourse to a large audience last Sunday evening. We regret to learn that she will not be able to be with us again as she has been called by the state president of the W. C. T. U. to hold a convention, after which her time will be occupied for the present in giving temperance lectures.

Daggett Brook Items.

The log drives are making good progress. W. Holmes, the head boss, and his crew are sending the logs flying twenty days sooner than usual. A number of Daggett Brook homesteaders are on the drive although several were bounced for making holes—in the water.

The saw mill at Daggett Brook is making poor headway so far.

The Bellenger dam broke out Sunday morning for the second time this year making a thirty foot hole in the structure. The general opinion is that the dam does not amount to much.

A. F Knebel, of Big Stone City. D. T., is in this section of the country looking for a blizzard but without success.
