J. H. BROWN,
Ch'n of Dist. Com.

It is now the state of Idaho, the bill for that state having been signed by the president on Thursday.

There is no reason why Gov. Merriam should not succeed himself, as he has made an excellent governor in every respect.

Five new stars were added to the national flag July 4th, that many new states having been admitted for the year preceding.

The newly arrived Chinese minister in an interview with a World reporter said that the Chinese government would retaliate and exclude every American from China unless our exclusion law is repealed.

Wyoming will undoubtedly be admitted into the Union as a full-fledged state sometime during the coming week, and will be the first state ever admitted with woman suffrage as one of its institutions. Female senators and congressmen from that state may now be expected.

The Minneapolis Evening Tribune evidently favors the nomination of Knute Nelson for governor. This is the first time the Tribune ever favored a candidate from the country for this position, and the only reason it does so now is to down Merriam because he lives in St. Paul.

The initial number of the Grand Rapids Weekly Eagle, Col. Geo. S. Canfield's latest newspaper venture, has just been received. It is a neatly-printed 7 column folio publication, and judging from the copy in hand, will be bright and newsy, and even on the look-out for an opportunity to boom the town in which it is printed. We hope the Colonel will prove successful in his venture.

Examination for a Cadetship in the U. S. Military Academy.

A competitive examination of application for nomination by S. G. Comstock, M. C., as Cadet to the United States Military Academy from the Fifth Congressional District of Minnesota, will be held at the High School building, Fergus Falls, Otter Tail county, August 5th, 1890, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m. Examining board: Hon. E. E. Corliss, Dr. T. N. McLean and Prof. Weld. The age for the admission of Cadets to the Academy is between seventeen and twenty-two years. Candidates must be unmarried, at least five feet in height, free from any infections or immoral disorder, and generally from any deformity, disease, or infirmity which may render them unfit for military service. They must be well versed in reading, in writing, including orthography, in arithmetic, and have a knowledge of the elements of English grammar, of descriptive geography, (particularly of our own country), and of the history of the United States; they must also be of good moral character. It is almost essential to ultimate success that the candidate possess larger requirements than those absolutely necessary for entering the Academy, particularly in arithmetic, algebra, and geometry, as most of the failures at the Academy are due to a deficiency in mathematics.

Yours truly,
S. G. COMSTOCK.

Speedy and Safe.

The Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City Railway is not the oldest, but in many respects the best line between Chicago or Kansas City, St. Paul and Des Moines, and St. Paul and Minneapolis. The celebrated compartment sleeping cars, built expressly for this company and run only over its lines between the points named, are pronounced by old and experienced travelers to be the most comfortable and luxurious sleeping cars in the world. The ventilation of these cars is simply perfect. This, with the speed and safety with which passengers are carried over this line, has made it deservedly popular. Be sure your tickets take you over the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City Railway.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Patrick McCarthy, which has cast a gloom over the entire charter of the St. Francis Branch No. 1 of the Catholic Mutual Benefit association, and

Whereas, By his death St. Francis Branch No. 1, C. M. B. A., has lost a faithful member and a true and generous friend, and his bereaved family a loving and devoted husband and father. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow to the will of God, we cannot refrain from expressing our heartfelt sorrow for the death of one whose true and noble character was worthy of the highest and noblest esteem.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his grief stricken family in this their hour of affliction and earnestly commend them for consolation to Him who takes away, and who alone can lighten the burden that has so heavily oppressed them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed in the Brainerd papers, and a copy presented to the family of our brother, and that they be entered in the records of the branch.

FARGO'S CALAMITY.

The Metropolis of North Dakota Visited by a Terrific Hurricane, Resulting in Loss of Life and Property.

A terrific wind storm swept over the neighboring cities of Fargo and Moorhead and surrounding country early Monday morning, causing great destruction of life and property. The storm was at its highest at about three a. m., the wind at this time having a velocity of 75 miles an hour. At Fargo the storm demolished the Manitoba and Milwaukee freight houses, threw down the electric light towers, destroyed the fronts of the Davis block, the opera house block, the Continental block, the Garfield block, the Webster block, uncroofed the Northern Pacific freight depot, also the Republican office and the Chapin hardware store. The court house tower is badly twisted and deposited on the sidewalk on Tenth street. The Plymouth Congregational church has suffered badly. Barger Furniture Co.'s warehouse is damaged, and numerous bricks from the Argus brick block lie on the ground. The Deering warehouse is damaged to some extent, as are the Alfred's hardware store and Vachen's restaurant, and the rear battlement of the Bank of North Dakota lies on the ground in ruins. The Keeney block and Exchange hotel suffered badly. Dozens of smaller buildings and rods of sidewalks are demolished.

The saddest of all is the death of the entire family, consisting of the mother and seven children of the late Capt. McCarthy, which occurred at their residence, at the corner of Ninth and Fifth streets. The family had taken refuge in the cellar and in some manner were caught in the timbers of the falling building and crushed to death.

Train No. 1, on the Northern Pacific, a passenger, was caught just as it was departing from Fargo, and toppled over into a ditch. No one was killed, but thirteen were injured.

At Moorhead fully $25,000 damage to property was done in the city, besides a number of people being injured. So far as reported there is no loss of life in this city. The most serious damage to property was the blowing down of the foundry; also the round house of the Great Northern railway. A part of the roofs and several chimneys were blown from the state normal school; also from the high school. Considerable damage was done to the Grand Pacific, Jay Cooke and Central hotels. A large number of buildings in the country near town were blown down, and considerable damage done to grain.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The republican legislative convention of this district has been called for Sept. 2nd, at Little Falls.

The Hennepin county republican convention have elected a set of delegates to the state convention, all of whom are opposed to Merriam's renomination.

H. L. Gonzos, formerly of Minneapolis, has been found guilty of attempted murder in California, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, or pay a fine of $2,500. Mr. Gordon is out on bail, pending an application for a new trial.

A special dispatch from Verndale, to the Minneapolis Tribune, says that John T. Drawz, editor of the Motley Register, jumped off the fast mail train at this point last night and came near killing himself in the operation. His head and face are badly cut and bruised, his breast bone broken, and he is probably otherwise internally injured. His real condition is hardly known as yet, but his doctor considers it rather serious.

One of the Little Falls & Dakota trainmen, whose run is from Brainerd to Morris, pointed out a field of grain on D. S. Moores' farm at Ft. Ripley, as the best looking piece of grain that he had seen on the route. As the road traverses an excellent farming country, it is a sure indication that the field referred to made a good showing, but the remarkable part of the matter is the fact that this field was first plowed in 1849, over forty years ago, and has but little rest since. It seems to improve in crop raising by experience.

A special to the Minneapolis Tribune, of the 6th inst., from Little Falls, says: For some weeks there have been a couple of detectives looking after the interest of the Northern Dakota Elevator company, and to-day they caused the arrest of an employe named Canfield, and a couple of business men named Burton. Their bonds have been placed at $2,000 each. Burton Bros., being business men here, will give bail, but Canfield is incarcerated. The charge upon which the arrests were made is forgery. It seems young Canfield has issued spurious grain checks and Burton Bros cashed them.

The lumber syndicate which it has been reported purchased the Northern Pacific pine in Minnesota, and is to build a mill at Brainerd, made a visit to Brainerd on Thursday last. The party included Frederick Weyerhauser, of Rock Island, Peter Musser, of Muscatine, Wm. Stanley, of Shillwater, and W. H. Laird, of Winona. The gentlemen looked at the dam property north of Brainerd, the mill belonging to J. J. Howe & Co., and then went to Gull River, where they examined the plant of the Gull River Lumber company. The gentlemen had little or nothing to say about their plans, and the Brainerdites are as much in doubt, and quite as hopeful as ever.—Lumberman.

On motion the street commissioner was instructed to take up the rails of the street car track wherever it appeared as a nuisance, and to have said rails and outfit put in street car barn.

Committee on fire protection reported favorably on the policy on central hose house.

On motion duly carried the city attorney was instructed to answer for the city in the suit for damages instituted by Chris. Anderson.

On motion duly made and carried, the bond of City Surveyor Whiteley, and the liquor license bond of Con. O'Brien were approved, and license granted Mr. O'Brien.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

IS the "Ideal" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend this preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing; prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. La Ferney, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliable."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

THE FIGURE "18."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stage. So man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "Ro-yal High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine."

The "Ro, R" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, and its exhibits having received lower awards of gold medals, only. The French decoration was conferred in superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "Ro, C" is not an old machine improved with the latest improvements, and yet the same Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the highest award for any family sewing machine of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, that it is having the very latest and best.

LITTLE WAR CLOUD

Important Instructions Sent to the British Naval Squadron in the Pacific Coast.

Men-of-War Gathering to Defend Canadian Sealing Vessels.

LONDON, Special—That important instructions have been issued to the British naval squadron in the Pacific is a matter of well authenticated report, but the nature of the instructions cannot definitely be ascertained.

It is understood that the flagship Warspite has been ordered to the Pacific coast of British Columbia, and that a formidable array of men-of-war is to be gathered there to defend vessels sailing under the English ensign against attack. It is also said that the English may be prepared to go is not stated, but it is generally understood that the city of San Francisco will be very likely to encounter English ships of war on the very first and possibly the last day for explanations.

It is stated that the American naval force on the Pacific is insignificant compared with the British squadron, and that the English will have no difficulty in carrying out England's rights, as they are called, in the matter. A hostile encounter between British and American war ships would result in a battle royal, and it would certainly tend to provoke it. In this connection Lieut. Gen. Henry Brackenbury, of the British army, delivered a scientific intelligence and brother of the late eminent Major Gen. Brackenbury, is quoted as commenting on the recent assertion that Canada would fall a ready prey in the event of a war with England.

THE UNITED STATES ARE GREAT NATIONS. It took the Northern armies four years to conquer the states of the South, and that with the advantage of the fact that they had a knowledge of the country invaded, as well as the sympathy of the inhabitants. Canada is a country of vast extent, more population in comparison with the United States than the Southern states, and no sympathy with the United States among the Canadians. The United States would find the invading Canada even a more formidable task. Winter would hamper the British troops, but the warm climate of the Confederacy would be in favor of the United States. It is not to be assumed, in, with imminent risk of destruction, the British would allow themselves to be caught in such a trap, under circumstances not favorable to a successful retreat, and the snows and piercing winds would hasten their destruction.

The Canadian sealing fleet now leaving for Behring sea are about the same as last season, with the exception of substituting for Mesdames, Juniata and Mollie Adams have obtained leave from the authorities at Ottawa, to change their names to Katherine Adams and E. R. Marvin, respectively. Last season the sealer so sunk caught by Canadian vessels in Behring sea was 16,585, while the total catch was 29,370, valued at about $300,000.

Wholesale Horse Stealing.

Horse thieves have made a grand round up in Hancock county, Illinois, and Bonner, Idaho during the past few days. The method of their operation indicates that they are a regular organized band, and have been sufficient to cover a large area of country. Two or three days ago two men came to Spokane Falls, and hastened away with 500 head of stolen horses, which they had stolen from the Flathead Indian reservation.

A Walla Walla farmer reports the loss of 100 head, and the trail leads within a few miles of Spokane Falls. Twenty-five horses were stolen from Bonner county recently paid $1,200. A large number of horses have been stolen in the vicinity of thieves, but with little hope of recovery. The thieves are known to be within miles the start of the pursuers and doubtless have succeeded in decorporating the stolen property, which is very ragged and little traveled. The horse thieves are known to be desperadoes, and those who would not halt at the murder of Thomas Hendricks would not hesitate to capture. A small posse has started under Sheriff Cook, of Bonner county, and Marshal Warren, and telegrams have been sent out to all points in the Northwest to repeating officers. A battle is on, and the chances are the pursuers overtake the thieves.

His Peculiar Economy.

I knew a man—a country doctor—of ample means and real generosity, who enjoyed the best of cigars and offered the same kind to his friends. But when his guest asked for a match to light the cigar or offered to help himself from the box lying on the smoking tray he would hastily remonstrate, walk to a box filled with the short stumps of matches that had been once used, and carefully relighting one of them, would hand it to his friend.—New York Evening Sun.

Powell will be checkmated in his attempt to withdraw all the Canadian sealers, that a formidable array of men-of-war is to be gathered there to defend vessels sailing under the English ensign against attack. The dwelling consists of many places along the Cheyenne and Nobles, and is generally the finest timber in the country. The log could be had with sixty days and resume the dollars for the log, and the cost of the log, however, as the county board had already appointed its successor.

The high water in the Mississippi and tributaries has greatly facilitated the movement of logs from the pine country. It is estimated that there are still 500,000, 000 feet in the upper Mississippi district, of which 350, 000,000 will be cut and sent down in the spring season.

J. A. Foster and Robert L. Lind were drowned at Mankato while bathing in the river. Both men could swim, and no satisfactory explanation can be given. It is probable that they got into deeper water than they anticipated, and got into trouble in distress, and upon the other's going to his rescue both were drawn down. Foster was a prominent lawyer in the west of the state, and lately devoted much attention to dealing in land. Lind was a young man of ability and his parents reside at Eagle Lake. Lind was twenty-four years old and also single.

A farmer named O. A. Turner, living five miles from Fairbault, was found dead under peculiar circumstances. Turner was 70 years old. He arose in the morning as usual in good health, and went to work. Before eating he had taken a pail and carried a load of milk to the Cannon City creamery, where he received a check which he cashed at home for home. Some little time afterwards he was discovered dead in his wagon half way home by a neighbor named Lottery. The man was found by the roadside near the creamery. His horses had brought over the dash board o' his wagon, his head almost touching the wagon tongue.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo has voted to issue water works bonds.

Andrew Evanson, while working in a well forty-two feet deep at Lisbon, was overcome by foul gas and suffocated.

H. C. Hyland, of Grand Forks, has been appointed to a place in the census office at Washington.

The strawberry and raspberry crops of this season are said to be the largest and the best ever produced in the Northwest in the Dakotas.

Among the property of Jay Cooke, sold at the time of his failure in 1873, is a large tract of land in North Dakota, which will be sold at sheriff's sale on April 15.

Maj. Hamilton, of Grand Forks, formerly secretary of the board of university regents, has assumed editorial charge of the Grand Forks Herald.

The state board of agriculture of North Dakota has decided not to attempt to hold any state fair this year, on account of the legislature failing to appropriate the necessary money.

J. A. Dickinson, Fred Wimpfheimer, aged about 25, a section laborer in the Northern Pacific yards, was knocked down by a switch engine and killed Saturday night. The men were intoxicated.

The state board of agriculture met in Grand Forks, after a lengthy discussion decided not to attempt to hold any state fair this year, on account of the legislature failing to provide any appropriation.

A Grand Forks dispatch says by warm weather, created great excitement a few days ago by appearing in the streets in a buffalo overcoat, but it was only a temporary affair and will make his next appearance before the enclosures of a menagerie.

Henry Fenner, wanted at Cooperstown, for grand larceny, was captured at Sham Rocks and conveyed to the county jail. He escaped without putting the officers to the trouble of procuring requisition papers, by the good offices of a friend, who drove a buggy.

John E. Blinn, aged 18, was drowned while bathing in the Red River near Grand Forks, recently. He could not swim and was carried beyond his depth by the current. A companion named Stewart narrowly escaped the same fate in an effort to save him.

The post office changes are nearly all in the state of Washington. They are as follows: Casselton, $1,400 to $1,300; Devil's Lake, $1,400 to $1,200; Hillsboro, $1,200 to $1,100; Hillsboro, $1,200 to $1,300; Jamestown, $1,300 to $1,700; Park River, $1,200 to $1,100; Valley City, $1,400 to $1,300.

The wheat crop within a radius of 100 miles of Grand Forks is in excellent condition.

CONGRESSIONAL

A Resume of the Proceedings of Congress During the Past Week.

SENATE.

Senator Davis was before the committee on commerce urging the passage of the senate bill for the improvement of Hay lake channel and for dredging the bay. The bill, or some equivalent measure, he incorporated in the river and harbor bill, which he reported.

Senator Washburn presented a resolution of Washington camp No. 1, of the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America, deprecating the use of foreign pauper labor on public lands, such as for advertising purposes and the like, and asking legislation favor national legislation to prevent this.

HOUSE.

Representative Lane introduced a bill providing for appointments by the president of commissioners, consisting of three persons, to have an impartial and thorough investigation of child slavery in all the states, in relation to labor and wages, marriage and divorce and the general welfare of the people. The report based on the investigation made by the committee of which Mr. Lane was chairman, was read. The report will further show that in the Dakotas and Washington territories, a number of wells, the pressure per square inch, the number of feet bored, the depth, and the number of acres served. The area in the Dakotas examined by the artesian machines about 147,000 square miles.

Mr. Morgan introduced a bill (which was referred to the committee on public lands) providing that the unoccupied and unappropriated public lands of the United States in Wyoming and Utah be transferred to the states to be a bigamist or polygamist, or who teaches, advises, or counsels another person to enter into bigamy or polygamy, or who in any manner aids, abets, encourages, or induces polygamy.

Attendance was ordered on the agricultural appropriation bill, and Messrs. Pugh, Morgan, Paddock and Stockbridge were appointed as part of the senate. The peculiarity of this case which makes it a matter of difference from the celebrated instance of Aladdin, and the "Open Sesame" of "Ali Baba, Khan" lies in the fact that the author had not been dreaming. He awoke and found the pitcher had gone to the dead sleep and found that his imagination had produced, without conscious effort on his part, a perfect poem.

Horses Meat Tastes Like Hare.

Physically, horse meat, a writer in the Nineteenth Century says, may be distinguished from beef or mutton by its appearance. It is coarser in the grain than beef. In this respect it resembles bull beef more than any other. It is darker than beef, and looks more moist than beef. It has a peculiar sweet and pleasant taste, a peculiar sweetness of taste. Its flavor is generally considered to be half way between that of beef and venison. Game. It is something like the flavor of hare. One reason why horse flesh is, as a rule, dearer than beef, is because it is that horses which are pole-taxed, or which have died from injury, disease or old age, are not generally found dressed and sold by the slaughter. It is, however, by no its that horse flesh is most easily distinguished. The fat of horse flesh is not generally mixed with other meat. It is yellow in color. It looks more moist than the fat of beef. It soon melts and soon becomes rancid. Its consistency is comparatively a rapid sale is effected or the fat removed, an advanced price must be charged in order to make it worth the butcher from loss on unsold meat.

Lastly, horse flesh can be distinguished by its peculiar sweet and characteristics, and it is in this way that it may be recognized when mixed with other meat. Who can say, who can tell except the chemist what are the components of the sausages, pottage or savoloy? Or who can tell by taste what these parts are? We do not know what we eat, we know what we drink. And in the making of flavor—to use Sam Weller's phrase—"It's the seasoning as does it."

Used to Riding Thoroughbreds.

A wealthy rancher of Wyoming territory recently related a story of a rich young Englishman who, while looking about the west for good investments, visited his ranch. He stayed three days and one afternoon as the cowboys were about to round up a bunch of cow ponies for the young man's use. He would enjoy a good ride in the saddle. He said he was used to riding thoroughbreds, and he didn't think they had a horse good enough for him. The cowboys said they had that they had one of the finest horses on the plains, and it he knew how to ride he would be a fine sight to see.

He was apparently insulted when questioned about his ability to ride a cow pony and he insisted ride any kind of a horse. A sleepy looking broncos was brought out from the corral and saddled. The lough he appeared half dead he was the worst. "Is he safe?" he asked. "Safe," said the foreman, when the pony was brought to him. The boy said the foreman, "Safe as a baby in a cradle." The boy mounted the pony and took the saddle. He didn't linger long. The first bucks jarred his teeth in the horse's neck, and after a second he was in the atmosphere. He turned a double somersault and landed on the sharp end of a cactus plant. The boy picked himself up and the cowboys asked what he thought of the thoroughbred now. The question seemed to stagger him for awhile. "It's a good 'oss," he answered, "but 'e lopes too bloomin' 'igh."—Chicago Tribune.

Does It Hurt Him.

Does a dismembered limb retain sensitiveness? Many persons hold firmly that it does not. Physicians have frequently sustained by those strange and vivid imaginings of persons who have had a hand or foot, and declare that they have no feelings in the fingers or toes of the lost member. Telephenomenon, however, has been explained in a scientific way. Recently, but in the month of August, Bergen, a 12-year-old boy who lives at 240 West Michigan street, is an example. He was playing on one of the cars in the Big Four yards, when he slipped. He was dragged some distance, but at first escaped with a safe position, and his left foot was cut off above the ankle, remaining in the rail. The boy was taken home and his leg was amputated just below the knee. He was in a state of unconsciousness, but he complains frequently that the toes of his dismembered foot are cramped and that they seem still to be in position. The foot was placed in a cramped position when it was cut off, and the boy and a member of the household declare that his sensations are the boy's sensations, and recalls cases which she thinks confirms this view.—Indianapolis Journal.

As a Soldier.

The religion of Dahomey Land is to the effect that any soldier killed while fighting white people will be allowed to heaven to become a bandanna young man of 28, who is provided with fifteen beautiful wives and all the game he can shoot for a thousand years. Under this belief hundreds of them have been sent to get killed, and rather funny to hear that they are immolated when they have sailed up "over there."—Detroit Free Press.

A New Yorker Dreamed a Poem.

A New Yorker, famous in the world of letters, awoke one night recently from a dream of a poem. So far as he knew he had not been dreaming, but he composed himself again and was sinking into slumber when there came into his mind, as though out of the darkness, a line of verse, rhythmically but senselessly. They kept him awake, and after a time two lines more, equally smooth and absurd, presented themselves to his mind as though one was dictating sequential dogmeet to him from the shadows of night. Unable to sleep, he arose and went down stairs to his library. He made note in the darkness for a while, hoping that he would fall asleep in his chair. But a second verse, perfect in form but absurd in meaning, came into his mind, and then a third and fourth. Lighting a lamp, he took up a pen and wrote down rapidly the lines that had come to him. As he wrote new verses fell from his mind, as if from a pen. He had finished his task a poem of eight stanzas by before 3 o'clock. He was surprised to find that, taken in the entirety, the verses were far from meaningless.

He carefully folded the poem in an envelope and directed it to a publication firm. Placing it among other letters to be mailed, he called his servant in the morning, he returned to bed and at once fell asleep. Upon awaking he found the poem which he had dashed off of writing a poem or had really transcribed one. As his letters had been left on the table he examined them. His uncertainty was pleasantly relieved the next day, when he received from the publication house a check from his publishers and a letter stating that the poem was accepted. The peculiarity of this case which makes it a matter of difference from the celebrated instance of Aladdin, and the "Open Sesame" of "Ali Baba, Khan" lies in the fact that the author had not been dreaming. SPOONS AND FORKS.

Their History from the Time of Primitive Man to the Present Day.

The implements of the table is the subject of a charming article in the current number of the Revue de Famille. Plates, tumblers, knives, spoons, forks, and salt-cellars are called upon to give an account of their creation, or rather of their evolution. The plate comes first, and a curious story is told of the first chinaplates, which, in the dark middle ages, arrived in Europe from the east. As soon as the dainty ware with its curious hieroglyphics made its appearance rumors became current that it is poisonous substance was put upon them that their whiteness became immediately clouded, and, as the fear of being poisoned was very great among the rulers, the china plates were substituted for the more ancient test of dipping the tooth of a serpent or a piece of a horn of a unicorn into the food. This fear of poison prevailed to such an extent that it became the custom to bring padlocked boxes of the table, which were opened the moment dinner was served and which everybody kept his own knife and spoon. Prince Saint Simon writes: "At the king of England sat down with the queen on his right and our king on his left. They had all their padlocked boxes by their side." But long before the aristocratic dinner ware of the Chinese appeared there came across the sea wooden and metal plants had been in use, which had slowly developed from primitive flatness into the shapely saucers or gravies from running off the flat plates pieces of bread were provided by which the fluids were sacked up, and which, after the meal, were gracefully distributed among the people of more common clay.

"The sovereign or grandee of the middle ages, seated in front of his flat plate, cut his food with a knife begun in the darkness of primitive day, when the European savage made himself axes of stone. Each century, almost each generation, tried to improve the knife, and the mediæval dinner, whose habits, like those of Gaston de Foix, were somewhat peculiar, could even indulge in using his own pocket-knife in preference to the article supplied by his host. Later the knife-handles were adorned with fanciful carvings, the music and words of church hymns were cut into them, their size and shape varied almost infinitely, and slowly they arrived at their present state of perfection.

"The palm of the hand was the spoons of primitive man. Then came the reign of the shell from the seashore, but, while in ancient Rome and Greece and on the banks of the Nile the full-blown spoon this side of the Alps, even in the fifteen century. Gradually the handle grew, became flatter and more shapely, and behold, when Louis XV. reigned over France the modern silver spoon, with dainty decorations, had become its parent.

"The vocabularies of ancient Greece have no name equivalent for the term "fork," nor do the later dictionaries supply the deficiency, consequently it may be assumed that they used Father Adam's fork," only understanding the fact that on a number of celebrated French paintings depicting scenes from Greek history or mythology, men and women are armed with forks which might have come from the shop of a modern ironsmith. And so entirely was even France abused to its manner of eating by the sole assistance of its fingers, where spoon or knife would not suffice, that the fork crossed across the mountains at the end of the fifteenth century were received with misdirected repugnance. Even only was eaten with forks, and when, in 1611, Tom Coryat brought some of the implements from Italy the British looked upon him in utter stupefaction and dubbed him "lursiver" that is, the man of the fork.

Ventilating Cool Rooms.

The object of ventilation is to keep the cellar cool and dry, but this object often fails of being accomplished by a common mistake, and instead the cellar is made warm and damp. A cool place should never be ventilated unless the air admitted is cooler than the air within, or at least as cool as that, or very little warmer. The warmer the air, the more moisture it holds in suspension. Necessarily the cooler the air, the more the moisture is condensed and precipitated. When a cool cellar is filled with a warm day the entering air, being in motion, appears cool, but as it fills the cellar the cooler air with which it becomes mixed chills it, the moisture is condensed, and dew is deposited on the cold walls, and may often be seen running down them in streams.

Then the cellar is damp, and soon becomes moldy. To avoid this, the windows should only be opened at night, and late—the last thing before retiring. There is no need to fear that the night air is unhealthful. It is as pure as the air of midday, and really drier. The cool air enters the apartment during the night and circulates through it. The windows should be closed before sunrise in the morning, and kept closed and shaded during the day. If the air in the cellar is damp it may be throughly dried by placing in it a pan of coal of time in an open box. A peck of lime will absorb about seven pounds or more than three pints of water, and in this way a cellar or milk-room may soon be dried, even in the hottest weather.—Colman's Rural World.

A Marvelous Clock.

The tower of the public buildings now in course of erection at Philadelphia is to be provided with a clock which, for size alone, will be one of the marvels of the world. The center of the dial (twenty-five feet in diameter) will be 351 feet above the street. It is calculated that it will take a year to place the clock machinery in the tower after the building shall have been completed. The bell is to weigh between twenty thousand and twenty-five thousand pounds and will be second in weight to the great Montreal cathedral bell, which weighs 28,000 pounds, and it is calculated that its peal will be heard even to the most distant parts of the city. Chimes similar to those of Westminster clock will be used, ringing at the quarter, half, three-quarter and hour. To distinguish the time at night the dial will be illuminated by electricity, so that the position of the hands can be seen from any point in the city. The minute hand is to be twelve feet and the hour hand nine feet in length, while the Roman figures on the dial will measure two feet eight inches in length. A steam-engine will be placed in the tower to wind up the time-piece each day.—Iron.

GEOLOGISTS assert that if the continents and the bottom of the ocean were graded down to a uniform level the whole world would be covered with water a mile deep, so much greater is the depression of the ocean bed than the elevation of the existing land.

A MATTER OF BUSINESS.

A Claim State Man Kills a Robber for 10 Cent of Tobacco.

We were staging from Anton Chico to Santa Fe, and there were six passengers, all men. Every man was armed, and one might safely judge that every one would fight if driven to it. One of the passengers was a man from Rhode Island, who said his name was Hastings, and after we were fairly started he said:

"Gentlemen, I have a proposition to make. If you will fight I will be to your benefit. If you do not, then no harm has been done. We are quite likely to meet with a road agent before we get through. If so, how many of you will fight?"

This was plain and pretty broad, but seeing that no disrespect was meant, one of the passengers looked at the ground and replied:

"I think every man can be depended on."

"Yes, you think so, but when the pinch comes, the case will be different. I've been through this a dozen times and I've seen a man with two revolvers go right down into his boots and submit to be robbed."

"What is your proposition?"

"Well, I'm about dead broke. I want to empty the stage of the money for 10 per cent, of the money it is carrying."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, it stopped, I'll agree to kill or run off the chap who does it. If I do you pay me 10 per cent, but if I do each man to give up his pile."

"You mean to think yourself a very brave and smart man," remarked one of the others.

"Oh, no, I'm not at all stuck on myself. This is a matter of business. I guarantee to do this and so. I want you to do your part."

We chafed him for a while, but seeing how good natured he was, finally agreed that if we stopped we would be killed or drove the robber off we'd come down with the per cent. demanded. Stages had been robbed on that route, but we had no fear, and it had come along to 5 o'clock p. m. and we were about to cross a creek running through a chaparral when a voice cried "Halt!" and the driver pulled up.

"Email but here's the agent!" chuckled Hastings, who had been sitting for an hour. "Remember the terms, gentlemen—10 per cent. if I save your tobacco."

"Throw down your gun!" shouted the voice, and we heard the driver comply.

"Now get down and unhitch your horses from the stage!"

The fellow was swinging himself down when Hastings opened the right hand door and jumped out, revolver in hand. As tough a looking chap as you ever saw stood at the horses' heads, with a Winchester at his side, his hands, and he yelled at Hastings and he saw him drop. The latter fell on his hands and knees, crept out of sight under the vehicle, used one of the wheel horses to cover him, and while the robber was peering around for the gate him, and at the same time warning us not leave the coach, the Claim state man rose up and sent a rifle bullet through the fellow's head. He ran forward to finish the job, but as the robber was as dead as a herring.

"Gents, 10 per cent., if you please!" said Hastings, as he piled out of the stage, "and whatever I find on the body is mine."

He got two revolvers, a shotgun, two gold watches and $170 in money, and we paid him about $200 more. He got the money, and we had seen you, as we had been given no show. Hastings stripped the body, dragged it out of the road, and took his place in the coach with the remark:

"Hope you gentlemen are satisfied with my work, and if you want to contract for my services the rest of the way, I'll put down the per cent., which is an extremely low rate."—New York Sun.

He Wanted a Pass.

The multitudes who think they ought not to pay railroad fare are never at a loss for ingenious devices which to base their applications for passes. The passenger agents are never at a loss for appropriate replications, some pleasant, some audacious, and now and then one that is downright humorous. Under this head comes an application that was made to Passenger Agent Ed Smith of the Baltimore & Ohio the other day.

Ed Smith was busy in his office on 5th avenue, when a tall and very lean young man came in and asked to see the passenger agent. Ed Smith, suspicied that the young man's hair was very long and that the bottoms of his trousers were frayed, and in spite of these ominous signs he said cheerily: "Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

"I want to get to Baltimore," said the long-haired young man in a peculiar voice.

"You've come to the right place, sir; we sell tickets for Baltimore to any one," said Mr. Smith, waving his hand toward the ticket counter. "No, you don't understand me. I want you will see your way to transporting me to Baltimore," and with this the young man fished out a bundle of manuscript from his coat tail pocket. It was a warm day and Mr. Smith did not feel inclined to precipitate a conflict; so he sank back into his chair and the long-haired poet began to read aloud his effusions. He read two poems of considerable length, and then, with a fluttering but the second poem had a refrain in which "along the shore" was rhymed with "all the more" and "Baltimore," and Mr. Smith's good nature oulds't stand that. He called to the clerks and they pounced the ink and lean poet with the long hair on the sidewalk. For some days yet Baltimore is safe.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Will the Star of Bethlehem Reappear?

A prediction has been made by certain European scientists that the star of Bethlehem will again be made visible to inhabitants of this globe some time in August of the present year. The prophecy is based upon the fact that in 1752 the great Danish astronomer, Tycho Brahe, observed a brilliant "temporary star" in the constellation Cassiopeia, and the modern astronomer has records of similar appearances in the years 945 and 1264. From these allegations even the most unscientific delicate has been made that there is in existence a variable star with a period of over three hundred years, and that this star is the phenomenon chronicled in the gospels. Reckoning back three hundred years, and allowing for the lower to wind up the time-piece each day.—Iron.

Navigating an Ox-Team.

A day or two ago a local police officer had occasion to arrest a yoke of oxen and imprison them in a Franklin street stable until they had sundries. He approached the cudchewers, and, taking the goad-stick prepared to drive them.

Reader, did you ever navigate a yoke of oxen and a hay-rack? If you ever agitate the goad-stick? Did you ever address barnyard conversation to the mild-eyed beasts? If you ever had intended to hurry a yoke of oxen. The pedestrian began wrong; in the first place. He goad-stick wrong side of the cattle, and when he addressed a "gee-haw" to the pair they hawed instead of gee-ing. This was evident, after they had taken six or seven long steps, for whereas the policeman had intended to hay a course due south, they made leeway toward Chapel street and seemed inclined to head due north for the Lexington exchange.

A number of frantic "whoes" brought them to and enabled the policeman to reply to a sarcastic admion of a spectator, who was sitting on the tongue of an ox team loaded with hay near by.

The boy was sent, "Mister Pliceman, you'd drive them ere steers better if you'd git round on t'other side."

The officer had to take advice and jabbed the off ox. He jumped and hayrated. This time they collided with the barber pole and nearly wrecked the hay-rack almost into a pile of mass. The officer was green excited. He "whoa-hised" and "gee-bucked." He got them started and then got scared and yelled for them to stop them by his pleading gestures. He drew an audience. He waved the stick like a semaphore signal for state-fair pulling stakes. He smiled through his grief and finally got the patient beasts, who probably were as much surprised as he was, straightened away and running before the wind for the station house where hay was plenty and anchorage secure.—Lewiston Journal.

Ammonia in the House.

A little ammonia in tepid water will soften and cleanse the skin.

Spirits of ammonia inhaled will often relief a severe headache.

If the color has been taken out of silks by fruit stains ammonia will usually restore the color.

One or two tablespoonfuls of ammonia added to a pint of water will clean windows better than soap.

When acid of any kind gets on clothing spirits of ammonia will fill it. Apply chloroform to restore the color.

Grease spots may be taken out with weak ammonia in water; lay the spot on paper over and iron with a hot iron.

Keep nickel, silver ornaments, and metal knobs bright by rubbing with woolen cloth saturated in spirits of ammonia.

A few drops of ammonia in a cup-ful of warm water, applied carefully, will remove spots from paintings and chromos.

Ammonia applied two or three times on a fresh cold sore will kill it. It will relieve the pain and make the cold sore is first felt.

Old brass may be cleaned to look like new by pouring strong ammonia on it and scrubbing with a scrubbing brush and powdered rotten stone.

A tablespoonful of ammonia in a gallon of warm water will often restore colors in carpets, and will absorb more whitewash from them.

Equal parts of ammonia and turpentine will take out spots of clothing, even if it be hard and dry. Saturate the spot as often as necessary and wash out in warm water.

To a teaspoonful of ammonia in a quart of water, wash your brushes and combs in it, shake and all grease and dirt will disappear. Rinse, shake, and put in the sun to dry by the fire.

If these who perspire freely would use a little ammonia in the water they bathe in every day it would keep their flesh sweet and clean, doing away with any disagreeable odor.

John L. Sullivan Snubbed.

A lively little scene occurred at Chamberlain's resort in Washington. John Donald Young, Senator Quay's Representative Crain, Isaac H. Bromley, the veteran newspaper man, and Phil Thompson, all of Kentucky, were at the Buffet, when in came John L. Sullivan, accompanied by Jack Burrett. Sullivan had been drinking, but was not ugly. He knew John Russel Young, and at once made for him and his party. The two stood hands and John L. at once ordered two "shots," as he called it. Young then introduced him to Senator Squires and was about to present him to Bromley when the latter drew himself up and turned away.

"Ain't you going to shake hands?" thundered Sullivan.

"No, sir," responded Bromley, "I am not."

"Why what's the matter with me?" said Sullivan, slamming his hat on the back of his head.

"Nothing, you are simply a bully, and I don't want the acquaintance of bullies."

By this time everybody was feeling uncomfortable, and Bromley was as white as a sheet. The Kentucky Sullivan would make a break, but he did not. He simply gave Mr. Young a glance of wonder, and muttering something about not staying where he was not wanted, turned away, leaving the wine he had ordered untouched.

Work of Female Brains.

There is a war ship here patented by Mary Montgomery, and a woman in Iowa has made an improvement on the machinery for cigars. Blanche Willis Howard has a patent bath shoe and a musical stock, and Mary Walker is turning the patent office upside down in getting out a new invention of teaching spelling. Mary's patent looks like a Chinese puzzle and is a more curious thing than Cupid.

Among other patents which I remember are jar lifters, bag holders, fish boxes, raisin seeders and a thousand and one curious appliances for household matters. The washing machine of Iowa is a little better up a number of cases and the table utensils are numerous. One woman has invented a spelling machine and name is Ellen A. Mitchison, and her husband evidently had a big mule kick when he got the patent handling the top, and Ellen says that with this spoon one can be conveyed to the mouth without danger of soiling or disfiguring the mustache. She patented the spoon in 1879.—Cor. New York World.

Misunderstood.

I was traveling on the District railway in London England, and suddenly let a man, who was sitting next me, put his hand on my arm as he leaned forward and said in a low "Dear friend, is it not wonderful to tell we can have light from above?" Before I had time to reply a man opposite rejoined quietly: "The company would hardly be such fools as to put the light on the floor."—London Letter.

LOVE AMONG THE CLOVER.

Over and over the purple clover,
Sweet Bessie came straying, for wild flowers
Musing,
And sang as her maiden glee:
"I'd buy, O but
There's a lady I know
Who jumps at my face to see.
Fair blossoms, I pray, now what shall I say
When I pick some posies for her?
Dear heart,
When Bessie comes wooing o' me?"

Over and under the bungles sounder,
The bees were humming all day,
And where the lady, and whatever had be
A sweet, low voice, responsive, said:
"O fairy, O but
They said as she
Brown Robin and blushing Bess
But what did he say to the wood nymph?
I think I will leave you to guess.
I think I will leave you to guess.
I think I will leave you to guess.

THREE FUNERALS.

In some parts of the south it is the custom to preach the funeral of the deceased long after the deceased has been buried. In fact, nearly all the preachers have appointments for orations. Sometimes a new circuit rider, to endear himself to the people will first announce himself by declaring that he will entertain his beloved members on the 15th anniversary of death of old Anderson Lipscomb, who surrendered to the demand of the great high Sheriff of death just forty-three years ago yesterday.

Recently Simeon J. Boyle, a circuit rider of the old school, was appointed by conference to take charge of the Black Sulphur Strings circuit. He was known as a perfect agonizer, a man who could raise the soft hair of luxurious sin into the stiff bristle of fear. The day after Boyle had arrived in the neighborhood of his new charge he was called upon by Wiggs Bailey. Wiggs is a well known character of the community—a man of untrembling nerve, of strong arms, and an appetite that had never been satisfied.

"What can I do for you?" the preacher asked, when the visitor had introduced himself.

"I've come to pay my respects an' to tell you if you ever need my services, jes' call on me. I 'preciate the position you hold as a worker for the Lord, and I wanter ask a favor of you."

"All right, brother."

"I want you to preach the funeral of my brother Ike. Best feller you ever seen in your life—died about ten or fifteen years ago. Jes' as big feller, whipped old Oscar Miles once, and Os was a power in the land, I tell you. You ever preach his funeral, an' I'll make it all right with you."

"I will do it, brother. What was the cause of his death?"

"Lack of licker."

"What, was he so addicted to the use of liquor that when it gave out he couldn't get any more he died?"

"Oh, no; he was never much of a hand to drink."

"Then how did he die on account of the lack of liquor?"

"Why, he was bit by a rattlesnake, an' as he didn't have no licker, he jest naturally died."

"And you want me to preach his funeral?"

"Yes, an' you ken get into some powerful good licker when you git down inter the lacks of his lyin' thar sufferin' for licker. You can fetch the licker yourself, or I can send it to the house."

"I see, but a description of his death, so matters may be tried, will not be quite enough. Tell me something of his life."

"Well, he was the powerfullest feller in the country. Reckon he could lift more at a handspike than any feller around Bluff."

"But what were his strongest points?"

"Rasslin', brother, rasslin' with the ketch-as-ketch-can rule."

"That had he not some moral quality?"

"Oh, yes. He didn't swear 'cept when he couldn't help himself."

"Well, I will do the best I can. Will next Sunday do?"

"Yes, mighty well right. That'll be a big crowd out, 'specially as this is your first 'pearance, an' I want you to make a powerful sermon; he painted a pathetic picture of a man wallowing on the ground, wringing his hands and cursing and muttering in a second voice: "Licker, chilbring me licker, or I will perish!"

After service were over Wiggs shook hands with the preacher, and then, breaking down with the weight of his emotion, he sobbed aloud and disappeared in the woods.

On the following Saturday Wiggs called on the preacher again. "I have come," said the visitor, when the minister had shaken hands with him, "to tell you that not only me, but everybody, is delighted with the brother you sent us."

"I am highly pleased to hear it."

"Not at all. Say, I've got another favor to ask of you."

"What is it, brother?"

"I want you to preach the sermon of my brother Bob's funeral next Sunday."

"Why, that wouldn't do at all."

"Why not?"

"Because I preached it last Sunday."

"Brother let me tell you that I come mighty near runnin' this here funeral off myself. I put the sheets logs in that church you preached in last Sunday, and unless you preach this funeral I'm afraid I'll be tempted why I'll take the logs that belong to me an' split 'em up for fire wood. Bob was a big man, and the folks will take your part. They know mebbe know that it won't do to fool with me. What do you say?"

"Oh, rather than have any trouble, brother, I will do as you suggest."

"Will you make it as powerful as the other one was?"

"I will try," the preacher answered.

"All right, but mind that you do try."

The next Sunday the people were somewhat surprised to hear another sermon on the virtues and graces of Brother Bob, but no objections were raised. Wiggs was again deeply affected, and again with overpowering emotion he disappeared into the woods.

Early the following Friday morning the preacher was surprised to receive another call from Wiggs.

"What can I do for you this time, brother?" the preacher asked.

"Nothin' only to preach the funeral of my brother Ike next Sunday."

"Absurd!" exclaimed the preacher. "I have set up the sermons twice and think that I have done my duty."

"Look here, cap'n—call you cap'n because you air about to go into a war—my brother Ike has been a lyin' thar for ten or fifteen years with nary a funeral sermon till the other day, while lots of old fellers that have never done nothin' for the country have had more funerals than they know what to do with, and so I think it's time fur Ike to have a chance. Hear me?"

"I hear, but I do not hearken. The fact that your brother has been neglected is no fault of mine. There are hundreds of men who have never had a funeral, but am I to be held responsible?"

"In regard to other folks, no; in regard to Ike, yes."

"But I refuse to preach his funeral again."

"All right. I'll allow you a while and then I'll go and fetch a big man logs out of the church. Wanter be wallered?"

"I don't want any trouble with you."

"Then agree to preach about Ike, or I'll give you the vast wallerin' a white man ever seed."

"Give me time."

"Goin' to preach that funeral?" The visitor began to take off his coat. The preacher's expression settled on the preacher's face.

"Brother I do not wish to have any trouble with you. I am a man of peace and gentleness."

"But I am not," Wiggs replied. "I am a snorter from Bull Licker! I ain't the man that butted the bull out of the pen, I ain't the man that rid the bay steer through the salt cote of the swamp of despair. I'm the man that can get that cost dirty, w'y off with it."

"Brother, at the risk of displeasing the people I will do as you wish, if you please, I will make another venture. I will preach for you again next Sunday."

On the following Sunday the people were still further surprised at the such virtues of Brother Bob, but being indulgent made no complaint. Three days later Wiggs rode up to the preacher's house, and seeing the minister in the yard dismounted.

"Come out here a minit," Wiggs called.

"What can you possibly want with me?" the preacher asked as he climbed over the fence.

"I have come on mighty distressin' business. Reckon I'll have to ask you preached my brother's funeral three times?"

"Yes, and you cannot possibly want me to preach it again?"

"No; for the last time. I have just found out that Ike wa'n' nothin' but my half brother, and I don't propose to do so much for a half brother. Ike's more kin to me than that. So, brother, w'll have to fix it."

"I fail to see how I can do it. The funerals have been preached."

"I know that, an' that's why I have come. I want you to go to the church next Sunday an' take them sermons back. I ain't havin' Ike buried twice, an' I ain't none of the half way business about him. Will you take them sermons back next Sunday?"

"Such a thing would be ridiculous, my friend. I cannot comply with your wish."

"Then I'll have to waller you."

"I have warned you twice before and now I beg you to go away."

"I jowed that I'd have to waller you."

"I tell you that I am a man of peace and gentleness."

"Lowed that I'd have to waller you."

"Well, come on then you trifling scoundrel!"

The preacher took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. Wiggs looked up and down the road. The preacher rolled up his sleeves. Wiggs looked around his house, lifted his hands and said:

"Lord, thou knowest that when I killed old Lige Moore and Sam Tillotson and Calvin Green and Dock Yates that I prayed like all such cups might forever pass from me, but thou seest that I am compelled to defend myself."

The preacher turned about. Dust was rising down the lane. Wiggs had taken off his boots.—Opie P. Read in New York World.

Some Interesting Chairs.

From the Chicago Herald.

The Libby Prison War Museum has just placed in position an exhibit consisting of interesting chairs, and almost every one of these chairs forms one of the links in the history of this great nation. The first chair of interest is an old wooden one, in which John Hancock sat when he affixed his signature to the famous Declaration of Independence, and near this is an old and worn wooden wicker chair, in which Washington, father once prized as a portion of his household effects. Then comes a few chairs of a more modern date, the first being the leather-covered pivot chair used in Lincoln's library at the White House when he was President. In the same exhibit are six of the chairs that were in the box at Ford's Theater, Washington, on the night that President Lincoln was assassinated, and the official chair of the Confederacy is one of great interest. It is the one that Jefferson Davis used in the residence of Mrs. Trotts as an office chair after Richmond was evacuated, and from the seat of the Confederacy was forced to the South. The most modern of these chairs in this historic collection is that used by president Grant, Hayes and Garfield as an office chair in the White House. One other chair of interest is that used by President Garfield after he was shot by Guiteau. It is an invalid chair of the reclining pattern, and was the only one used by that martyred President from the time he was shot by the assassin until his death.

Catching a Loon with Hook and Line.

Alfred Hills, one of the brothers who run the famous Hills' Homestead at Savin Rock, narrowly escaped being carried into the deep by a big loon ago. Here's the story as Mr. Hills tells it: He was fishing for flatfish off the Savin Rock shore when he was suddenly struck by a big bird, uttering screeches and to feel a big thing on his line. A loon, or great northern diver, had swallowed the bait and was fast on the hook. Mr. Hills got just as much excited as was the loon, and he ran for Royal Bollowd. The fisherman played his catch until his boat had been pulled fully a mile, and had the game well in hand. He pulled in the line slowly and had the bird close by the boat when the loon made a last effort, broke the line and escaped. To capture a loon is a big feat, because the loon must have line and line is unprecedented. The bird is very shy, and will dive so rapidly when he is hooked that after between the time of a flash of a gun and the time the bullet reaches the place where the loon was.—New Haven Palladium.

Getting Rid of a Corn.

A pretty, young married woman who resides on K street has suffered long with a corn. The corn was located on the outside of the little toe of her left foot, and it gave her a world of misery. She tried various applications to destroy it or to relieve the pain, but in vain. Day by day the small corn grew more painful and troublesome. The lady's husband advised her often to have it cut out or otherwise removed by a corn doctor. But she was morbidly afraid of anything resembling a surgical operation, and then the idea of a chiropodist handling her foot was not pleasing to her. So the corn it grew and grew, and the unfortunate lady suffered tortures every time she put on a shoe.

When this sort of thing had gone on a couple of weeks the husband grew impatient. He insisted that a corn doctor must be called in. It was the only way, he said, relief could be had. So the poor little woman finally distracted between the agonizing pain of the throbbing corn and the anticipated pain of the surgeon's knife, yielded. As the husband went down town that morning he left the necessary order at the chiropodist's for an immediate call at the K street residence.

Meanwhile, the wife gave orders to the servant who opened the door that if a man with a small hand-bag came he was to show him up her room at once. Having made up her mind to endure the ordeal, the lady sat down, resolved to be ready for the man with the knife she feared so much to come on. Her mother, who lived in Baltimore, was her to lend moral support, and while waiting she thought of the probable pain of the operation she was to undergo. Thus, as the minutes rolled by, the little wife became more and more nervous until at last her condition bordered on mild hysteria.

An hour and a half passed, the bell rang and a neatly dressed man stood in the vestibule with a little bag in his hand. The servant opened the door, caught sight of the bag and exclaimed: "Walk right up stairs; she has been waiting for you this half hour."

The man followed the girl and was shown into the lady's room. As soon as she entered and before he could put in a word the lady began nervously removing the pretty shoe and blue silk stocking, specially donned for the occasion, from the afflicted member.

"I want to know if it's going to hurt," she begin to the operator, adding, "for if it is I'm not going to let you touch it."

The man stood gazing at her with a bewildered manner as it struck speechless.

"Yes," continued the lady rapidly, without giving him a chance to get in a word, "you may start to work, because you know it will, I have a good mind not to have it done at all."

The man at this opened his mouth to speak, but before he could do so the fidgety little woman went on:

"Now, you needn't say one word, because I know beforehand exactly what you are going to say about no pain whatever. Doctors always tell you that."

"But, madam—" the man began.

"No, you needn't say it," the lady remonstrated with a little more emphasis. Well, you know Thompson? I tried him three years ago, and not for a week or two! He came, of course. Never knew Thompson to refuse an invitation. He got me to introduce my daughter. They fell in love with each other at first sight. He proposed to her and I course he threw down, of course she accepted him.

"Well, it made me mad. I knew the darling only wanted the girl's money, so I put up a job on him. I told the girl that the corn had failed, and that he wasn't worth a copper. As I expected, the blackguard went back to New York and never, until next day he wrote the girl a letter saying that he had been mistaken and asked to be released. The girl waxed indignant and sent him flying, and then I went to work and proposed myself. She accepted me. Well, all went on smoothly for a week when—

"What happened then? Did you marry the girl?" asked the box coated gentleman.

"Oo-o. You see, at the end of the week the old count died, and when his accounts came to be settled it was discovered that instead of having a half million to his credit he was in debt to the tune of $200,000. Of course, you see, after that I couldn't marry the girl very well, you know. Well, as I am, I do not support myself."—New York Evening Sun.

Clergymen as Business Men.

Says Rev. Dr. Wilson, of St. Louis, in the Globe-Democrat of that city: "The failure in business of prominent clergymen suggests the fact that such men are generally unsuccessful in making money. When they do the religion generally oozes out as the dollars come in, and they end up by giving up ministerial work altogether. Presbyterians, particularly Methodist preachers, are almost always poor, and the text to them in the point of poverty are the Bishops. The vast majority of Methodist preachers in this country receive less than $1,000 a year, while the constant demands for charity greatly diminish their incomes. Presbyterian clergy are better off. Among the Church of England ministers, both here and in Great Britain, fairly roll in wealth. Any nonconformist, The English Bishops have princely incomes, the lowest being $10,000 a year and the rest of a major, while connected with the cathedral. The Archbishop of York, who is "Primate of England," has $50,000 a year, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is "Primate of all England," receives $70,000 and has two magnificent palaces. Methodist Bishops are poorly paid. Those of very ancient and wealthy Church North, is rich, having married the widow of a rich man in Boston. But Bishop Hendrix, of the Methodist Church South, enjoys the reputation of being the richest Bishop in America, having inherited a fortune, which, by careful management, he has increased. Bishop Ames has the reputation of being both benevolent and rich. To schools and colleges he is very liberal, and Dr. Central College, in this State, owes its present prosperity to his generosity. In addition to these facts, thinks the only Bishops who have made money in this line are Bishops Simpson and Ames.

Not so Blunt and Funny.

Yerger—How is your uncle coming on? I hear he is getting better.

Gilhooly—He is completely cured, my dear boy. He is more active than he was twenty years ago.

"It would be funny if you should die before him; then he would be your heir."

"Oh, no."

"How's that? Wouldn't he be your heir?"

"Yes; but I don't see where there is any fun in that."—Texas Siftings.

The Insurance-Man and Chiropodist.

A well-known insurance-man walked into a Chinese laundry on Fulton Street the other day and after looking at two Mongolians in the shop addressed the elder of the two:

"Say, John, I'm an insurance man come to look over your house."

"Uml"

"We insurance, want looks over fire."

"Um!"

"Oh, you know very well what I mean. I'm an insurance man and I want to look over your place to see that it is properly protected against fire."

"Um!"

"I want to go through your place for the insurance company."

"Me no tell."

"Say, don't you understand English?"

"No."

"Me topside up down house go through all same Hong Kong insurance. Do you understand that?"

"Don't know."

"Don't know, blank you?"

"No."

"Well, Melican man, suppose fire burn Chinaman, give money, insurance, see? So we come here to go topside up down laundry look and see no fire burn, you no let me go though no no give do money."

"Don't know."

This continued for fifteen minutes and the insurance man worked himself into a perfect lather over sets of repeated pigeon English like a Canton merchant. Suddenly he was startled by hearing a voice behind him say:

"What do you want, anyway?"

Turning, he saw that it was the second Chinaman who had addressed him.

"You're a cuckoo!" was all the insurance man had spirit enough to say.

He went though the premises, and as he was going out the Chinaman who didn't understand English asked:

"Well, how did you come out?"

"You're a cute Chinaman," said the insurance man.

"Me cute enough," said the Celestial, his features expanding into a broad grin.—Brooklyn Eagle.

That Altered the Case.

"Say, do you see that girl?"

"Why, yes; she's a beauty, too."

"Well, you can just bet she is. I was engaged to her once."

Then there was silence for the space of two minutes, as the two sat there in a reverend mood the pretty young woman. Then the young man in the box cent remarked:

"You didn't speak to each other. How is that?"

"Why, you see," explained the gentleman with the black mustache and gray hair, "it's a very peculiar story. Sounds like a romance, but it's true, every word of it. I broke her two years ago down at Long Branch. She was the daughter of an old Russian count, who was reputed to be worth at least a half million. I fell dead in love with her, and she reciprocated. We used to meet every me. Well, you know Thompson? I tried him three years ago with not so a week or two! He came, of course. Never knew Thompson to refuse an invitation. A young lad about 12 years of age, named Joe Buzhaway, fell into a well nearly 60 feet deep last Friday night, the well being on the Darby premises near Howe & Co.'s mill. The well was an old abandoned one, not being in use, and contained scarcely a foot of water. The cries of the boy, who, fortunately, was not stunned by the fall, were soon heard, and a rope was lowered and the youth drawn out, none the worse for his frightful fall, except a slight injury to one of his knees. It is marvelous how he could have fallen such a distance and escaped with his life.

A Former Brainerd Citizen Dead.

The many friends in this city of C. H. Conklin, formerly of the hardware firm of Conklin, Clark & Co., (now D. M. Clark & Co.,) will be pained to hear of the death of that highly respected gentlemen, which occurred on Saturday, the 5th inst., at Hastings, Minn., the home of his parents. Mr. Conklin severed his business relations here about three years ago, and went to Wadena and engaged in the hardware business there. He has since had a series of misfortunes, breaking his leg on two different occasions, and also being unfortunate in his business ventures. He has been afflicted with a disease which seemed to soften and make brittle the bones of his body to such an extent that the slightest jar or unnatural move would cause them to break, which disease finally caused his death. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss.

Spaulding—Smith Nuptials.

On Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock the solemn words were spoken that united in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Calvin L. Spaulding and Miss F. Louise Smith, both of this city, the Rev. J. A. Gilfillan, of White Earth, officiating. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, at Perch Lake, and was strictly a private affair, only the immediate members of the families of the contracting parties being present, besides Miss Maggie Atherton, who acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. R. F. Walters as groom's best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony those present partook of a wedding breakfast, prepared by the parents of the bride. After spending the entire day at the lake, the happy couple came to the city in the evening and installed themselves in the home of the groom at the corner of Bluff avenue and Second street, where they will reside in the future. Cards announcing the marriage have been issued. They will be at home to their friends from 2 to 6 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon of July 15th and 22nd.

The above contracting parties are both well-known in this city, the bride being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Smith, and has long been a favorite in Brainerd society. She is a lady of more than ordinary intellectual force, handsome and accomplished, and has been engaged in educational work ever since taking up her residence here six or seven years ago, teaching some years in the public schools here and also at White Earth. The groom is at present postmaster of the city. He came here from Minneapolis some six years ago, where he had been quite prominent in business circles, and shortly afterward, in company with Messrs. Keene & Nevers, established the Lumberman's Exchange Bank, eventually buying out the interests of the other gentlemen, and for two or three years conducting the business alone. Mr. Spaulding has also stood high in Masonic circles of the state, and was also prominent in local politics, his present position as postmaster being the result of his earnest services for republican success.

The DISPATCH wishes the newly married couple life-long peace, joy and happiness in their new relation.

TIRED OF LIVING.

Peter Meagher, a Brick Yard Employee, Jumps into the Dam And Drowns Himself.

Last Thursday evening Peter Meagher, an employe at the brick yard, settled up with the foreman of that concern and drew the balance of money that was due him, the amount being $5.25. He said at the time to the men that he had got tired of working day in and day out, never making more than a living, and that he proposed to put an end to this sort of existence. No importance was attached to this remark by his fellow-workmen, as he has been frequently heard to make similar remarks. About 10 o'clock the next day, the 4th, he was seen on a pier just above the dam by John Douglas, of East Brainerd, who was going with ladies over to Gilbert Lake. This was the last seen of him alive. The next afternoon, (Saturday), some of the brick yard employes happening down at the dam discovered his clothes lying on the pier on which Mr. Douglas last saw him. Remembering his words when he left them Thursday evening, they at once come to the conclusion that he had deliberately undressed and drowned himself. The chief of police was at once notified, who caused the river to be dragged to find his remains. Finally, on Sunday, right after dinner, after exploding several dynamite cartridges in the water, his body was raised and recovered. Deputy Coroner Bain was at once notified, and on viewing the remains ordered their immediately burial, as they were already badly decomposed. A coroner's jury was then impaneled and an inquest held, at which evidence verifying the above recited facts was given, and a verdict of suicide rendered.

The deceased was comparatively a young man, being less than 30 years of age. He has lived about the city for three or four years past and was quite widely known. He was usually employed as a lumberman, but this spring found employment at the brick yard. He has no relatives in this vicinity, the home of his parents being in Boston, Mass.

Maude Granger in "Inherited."

The boards at the opera house were occupied on Monday and Tuesday evenings by Maude Granger and her excellent company, the intensely interesting melo-drama, "Inherited" being produced on Monday evening, and "Cora, the Creole," on Tuesday night. "Inherited" has been heralded by the eastern press as an unusually strong piece, and one in which Miss Granger has ample opportunity to display her wonderful emotional powers. And it is not too much to say that those who went expecting a rare dramatic treat, were more than satisfied. As an emotional actress, Miss Granger possesses few equals, and her magnificent rendition of the character of Helen Carruthers on Monday evening, sustains the justice of her exalted position in dramatic circles. Her support this season is good, Mr. Harry Mainhall being especially strong. On Tuesday evening "Cora, the Creole," was presented in a manner equally satisfactory. The attendance, considering the merits of the company, was unusually poor, and it is greatly to be regretted, as it seems to us, the manager of the opera house, in his efforts to secure such meritorious performances, ought to be encouraged by a more liberal patronage.

Doings of Brainerd Men Abroad.

The Grand Rapids Eagle contains the following items concerning business ventures of Brainerd citizens in that booming little burg:

S. Walker, one of the solid men of Brainerd, will build a meat market immediately and has been made a low rate on stock in car lots by General Freight Agent Rowley.

Hon. G. G. Hartley will erect immediately a handsome brick block, 25x100 feet, two stories and basement, front of St. Louis pressed brick, with plate glass, and building steam-heated throughout. A bank with adequate capital will occupy part of the block.

One of the finest hardware stores in the state will be put in immediately by W. J. & H. D. Powers, of Brainerd. Mr. Powers, Sr., is a skilled hardware merchant, and H. D. Powers, his son, is a thrifty young business man, and widely known as a Captain in the 3rd Regiment, M. N. G. They will make a specialty of sportsmen's and hunters' goods.

They Packed With Another Man's Ox.

Among recent visitors to Grand Rapids, Hon. Leon E. Lum and W. E. Seelye, of Brainerd, made a trip to Pokegama Lake, and finding, on their return, an ox grazing along the trail, they appropriated his ox-ship, and tied their "donnage" and tussacks into couples over his broad back. Presently the owner of the ox overhauled them; but when he saw their blood-thirsty appearance he made no objection to their scheme, but meekly followed along until miles from his ranch, when, as they were nearly into town, they having suspected its ownership, asked him if he would like his ox. He replied, cautiously looking them over, that if they would let him have him it would save him considerable travel back. He had evidently no intention of having any trouble with the hard looking characters their travel-stained rigs made them seem.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

A Peculiarity of the Genial Doctor.

The county officers were thrown into a mild state of excitement last Saturday, the occasion being a telegram from Dr. J. R. Howes, asking them to remain in their offices until the arrival of the train from Duluth at 7 o'clock that evening. The Doctor was met on arrival of the train by Geo. Knox with horse and buggy and rapidly driven to the court horse where it transpired that the Doctor wished to file notice of his pendens on a piece of land at Grand Rapids, being fearful that a certain deed for the same piece would go on record before his arrival, hence the haste. The joke lies in the fact that there was no necessity for the booming Doctor to get excited.—Aitkin Age.

Railway Employes Club.

R. J. Eggleton and W. S. Reed were in the city yesterday and made arrangements for a meeting to-morrow night a 8 o'clock, at the N. P. Library Room, for the purpose of organizing a Railway Employes Club. W. S. Boody, of Minneapolis, will arrive in the city to-morrow and assist in the organization of the club. All railway employes are invited to attend. The object and principles of this organization are fully stated in the following preamble that precedes the constitution governing clubs:

"The highest court in several of the states has decided that the Railroad Commission may make, according to the present laws, any rate they please for the railroads, whether it pays for the service or not. A majority of the legal voters make the Commission by electing the Governor. The railroad employes are voters, and have the right to help make the rates. We are entitled to a fair day's wages for a fair day's work, and we cannot get, or expect it, unless the roads get a fair price for services rendered. The tendency of late is towards a heavy reduction in rates. Those who make such demands of the roads do not stop to consider the vast army of employes and their families who are directly dependent upon the earnings of the road which employs them. This condition has assumed such proportions, that our railways are getting neither fair nor living prices, and, as a result, their employes cannot get fair wages or steady employment. In union among ourselves we shall find strength to protect our interests, and we shall find it in no other way. We, the Railroad Employes in the United States and Territories, agree to form an association to promote our interests, and our social and intellectual improvement, and to prevent by all legitimate and honorable means, any hostile action from the Legislatures, the Commission and the Courts, and invite the earnest co-operation of all railroad employes in America for those purposes."
