Probate Notice.

STATE OF MINNESOTA.} ss.
County of Crow Wing. }

Probate Court, special term June 19, 1893.

In the matter of the estate of Annie Kramer, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Charles Kramer, of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Annie Kramer, late of Crow Wing county, on the 8th day of June, A. D. 1893, at Crow Wing county, died intestate, and leaving a real estate of this county at the time of her death, leaving goods, chattels and money in this county, and that she died without a will, and praying that administration of said estate be granted to Hiram S. Hitz, granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before this court on Monday, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1893, at o'clock p. m., at the court house in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, by publishing two weeks prior to the hearing herein, a copy of this order, and a copy of petition, in the Brainerd Dispatch, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Brainerd, in said county.

Dated at Brainerd, Minn., the 19th day of June, A. D. 1893.

THE GENUINE
KEELEY
TREATMENT
Authorized and under the direction of the LESLEY D. KEELEY CO., Dwight, Ill., for cure of Liquor, Opium
—AND—
Tobacco Habits

BY THE USE OF DR. LESLIE E. KEELEY'S DOUBLE CHLORIDE OF GOLD REMEDIES.

Indorsed by progressive physicians, philanthropists and divines, including Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, who recently visited Dwight and addressed the 700 patients in line. The United States government has adopted these remedies for use in all States and National Soldiers' Homes. Carefully kept records prove 95 per cent. permanent cures; 60,000 home already made happy. The objectionable features of Sanitarium treatment removed. No hospital; no restriction. All necessary liquors supplied during treatment. Patients are simply residents like ourselves. Terms (for entire home treatment) $7 to $15 per week, to suit purse and inclination. Good accommodations, including baths, at the Institute.

NOTE OF WARNING.

To the Public:

As a matter of justice to ourselves and to the reputation of Dr. Leslie E. Keeley's Double Chloride of Gold Remedies for the cure of the Liquor, Opium, Morphine and Tobacco Diseases, and Nervousness, we warn the public that these remedies are used by no institution or sanitarium in the United States, except those established by our company under the uniform name of "THE KEELEY INSTITUTE."

All others claiming to use our remedies are frauds and impostors.

We have now sixty Keeley Institutes established in various parts of the United States, where the Keeley Treatment is administered, and the Keeley remedies sold. We, however, caution all to examine well and know that they are dealing with GENUINE REPRESENTATIVES, authorized by us, before taking treatment or purchasing remedies.

The misleading establishments use the name of "Dichloride of Gold" or similar titles. The newspapers often fail to discriminate sufficiently to know that they are imitators. This is a matter of public welfare, and hence this warning.

We desire inspection of our Institution and invite correspondence, which is strictly confidential.

Incorrectly Yours,

THE LESLIE E. KEELEY CO.,
PROPRIETORS OF
THE KEELEY INSTITUTE,

A Railroad Sues For Trespass.

A lawsuit entirely out of the common course is reported in Cumberland county, being one brought by the Maine Central Railroad company against a Windham man for trespass. During the recent blizzard this man had occasion to drive from Mallison Falls to Windham village. The highway was blocked and hard to travel, so when he reached the railway crossing near Mallison Falls, seeing that the Maine Central snowplows had made a fine track, he turned his horse in that direction and drove up the path of the railroad to his destination. This was very dangerous business, and the man submitted the company as well as himself to a big risk. The suit is for $500, and doubtless is intended as an object lesson.—Bangor (Me.) Commercial.

A Snowball Starts a Fire.

A snowball thrown at a telegraph boy by a companion was the cause of a fire Thursday afternoon. The boy, when struck, remarked, "That's a good shot," and stooped down to gather snow to return the shot. He stood up almost immediately, exclaiming that he was on fire, and it was found to be true, some matches in his pocket having ignited by the blow of the snowball and communicated the fire to his clothing.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

Failed by Falling Inc.

The Rev. C. A. Bartol, the venerable clergyman, while walking down Chestnut street Tuesday evening, a few doors above his home, was felled to the sidewalk and rendered unconscious by a piece of ice which fell from the roof of the building he was passing. He received a bad scalp wound and had one side of his face slightly bruised and his left shoulder hurt by his fall.—Boston Journal.

How Some Medicines Are Obtained.

From the horns and bones of various animals may be procured, by distillation, muriate of ammonia, commonly used in medicines for both internal and external use. From burned bones comes phosphate of soda, so valuable in physic, and prussic acid, used medicinally as one of the most powerful narcotic substances, may be obtained from animal matter in a state of decomposition.—London Tit-Bits.

The Loss of the Whaler Helen Mar in the Arctic Sea.

The wreck of the Helen Mar, a whaling vessel, in the Arctic seas, is among the many serious marine tragedies of the winter. Boat Steerer Antonio Pangalina, one of the five survivors, recently reached San Francisco and gave sad details of the awful event. Captain E. P. Hunter and thirty-four men lost their lives by drowning. No whaling vessel has in years has had any more sensational events connected with it. Pangalina says that a gale from the south was blowing at the time the Helen Mar crushed against the ice bank, and that the bark had a 4 or 5-knot current also to help her to destruction. While on the ice, two hours before the Orca came along and rescued the five survivors, three polar bears who were in the water tried to get at the shipwrecked sailors and devour them. The bears were beaten off with a blubber spike.

"In the rush to get the head of the second whale which he had taken that day hoisted on board," said Pangalina, "we not only lost sight of the fact that we were drifting toward an immense ice bank, but that the weather was threatening. When Captain Thayter noticed the dangerous position which the bark was in' it suddenly began to blow from the south, and in a few minutes the wind increased in velocity to what had a gale. Quite a sea rose and the waves broke over the edges of the ice cakes. The moment the bark struck Fifth Mate Ward, Boat Steerer Nelson and myself made our way over the bow of the bark, while the cook and the Japanese went into the main rigging. When the vessel careened and the mast snapped the cook and the Japanese reached an ice cake, and when the piece of ice I was on bumped against theirs they joined the fifth mate, boat steerer and myself. We could do absolutely nothing to save our shipmates who were in the water, and we turned to stand by and see them perish.

"The ice cake which we five were on was no larger than a good sized dining table on the surface, although it must have had a depth of thirty or forty feet.

"Fifth Mate Ward broke down early in the night and cried like a child. He was disheartened and helpless from the start.

"Kanawa, the Japanese, was so warmly dressed and tough that the cold did not seem to affect him in the least. Ward had become almost helpless, his hands and arms having also been partly frozen, so the Japanese was told to look out for him. Kanawa slipped off one of the several pairs of overalls which he had on and tore them into strings, with which he made a rope and tied one end around the waist of Ward. Then, when jumping from one piece of ice to another, we took the other end of Ward's rope and drew him off the ice bank on to through the water and landed him where we were.

"We had nothing to eat, and our thirst was quenched by breaking off small pieces of ice and letting them melt in our mouths. The second night was something awful, and we moved about the best we could, and when we could; for we were getting pretty well used up."

After the rescue by the Orca, Ward was carried into the cabin and several men set to work rubbing him. He never rallied, although he spoke a little, and on the second day quietly went off to sleep and never regained consciousness. He was sewed up in a tarpaulin with a heavy weight and buried in the Arctic ocean, 1,000 miles from any land. Ward was a single man, a native of Canada, and about thirty years of age.

A gale coming on haste was made to get out of the ice, as the captain feared that the Orca might see the fate of the crew of the ship of the Helen Mar. The survivors were kept in ignorance of the fate of Captain Hunter. Nelson was transferred to the whaling bark Reindeer, and the cook and the Japanese sailor went to the Orca.

A Sedalia Experience.

"I had an experience at Sedalia the other day that gives me a cold chill whenever I think of it," said Frank Hasselmann, of St. Louis. "My wife and five-year-old daughter accompanied me on my last trip. We Sundayed at Sedalia, and during the afternoon drove out to the cemetery. Naturally our conversation drifted to a little daughter we lost a year ago. One of the first things to attract our attention after we entered the cemetery was an open grave dug for a child. We walked up to it and stood for some moments looking at it. The sexton came up and we asked him whose it was. The sexton's face grew painful indeed, and my wife broke down and cried bitterly. 'Little May took me by the hand and led me out of sunshine of her mother. Then she said, while her chin quivered and her eyes filled with tears, 'Papa, why don't you put me in, cover me up and take mamma home?' I was astounded. I bent down to kiss her, and she whispered, 'Tell mamma goodby for me; I can't do it.' The child actually thought that we had come to the cemetery to bury her, and that she was standing beside her open grave. It was the most magnificent exhibition of nerve I ever witnessed."

Getting Even.

Strawber—I've just got a check from The Startler for that poem of mine that was published this week.

Bingerly—Congratulations, old man. I suppose you'll set 'em up now.

Strawber—Not much. That check just pays for all the money I've spent buying copies of the paper since I first sent in the poem.—Brooklyn Life.

Expense of Handling.

A man who had been appointed receiver went to a lawyer and asked:

"Out of $20,000 passing through his hands how much ought a receiver to profit?"

"Well, about $19,000," was the reply.

"Only $19,000?" he exclaimed. "Who is to get the other $1,000, I'd like to know?"—Texas Siftings.

The Teacher's Advantage.

Little Girl—I don't want to go to school today. It was freezing cold there yesterday.

Mother—Then why didn't the teacher dismiss school?

"Oh, she was warm enough. She kept herself warm—walkin around th' room and marking us when we moved."—Good News.

Unappreciated Philanthropy.

Friend—What's the strike in your factory about?

Workman—The boss wants to turn it into a co-operative institution and make work for a share of the profits.

"Well, what's the matter with that idea?"

"There aren't any profits."—New York Weekly.

Only Practicing.

Ethel—When does your broach of promise suit take place, Clara?

Clara (sobbing)—T-t-o-morrow.

Ethel (sympathizingly)—I am sorry to see you so overcome, Clara, dear.

Clara—Oh, it's nothing, Ethel. I'm simply practicing for the jury.—Texas Siftings.

Unprotected.

He—Do you know what I am thinking about?

She—No. How should I? What?

He—I was wondering whether it would be safe to steal a kiss?

She—I am helpless and alone.—Yankee Blade.

Lost His Desire For Flight.

A stump orator wanted the wings of a bird to fly to every village and hamlet in the broad land, but he collapsed when a man in the crowd sang out:

"You'd get shot for a goose before you flew a mile."—Exchange.

A Long Engagement.

Clara—Why doesn't Kitty Spinler marry the Russian noblemam? She has been engaged to him three years now.

Maude—My dear, she is learning how to pronounce his name.—Brooklyn Life.

They Went After Him.

"You played Hamlet last night. Did the audience call you out?"

"No, they were too impatient for that. They rushed behind the scenes and drove me, but I got away."—New York Press.

Another Alexander.

He—There is but one thing that mars my happiness.

She—What is that?

He—To think that I cannot marry all the girls who love me.—Truth.

One Thing Settled.

Criticus (looking at a picture of the impressionist school)—If that's high art, then I'm an idiot.

Cynicus—Well, that is high art!—Exchange.

A True Woman.

I searched the world in every zone
And laid at my love's feet
All diamonds that were ever known
Its one was hoar—emerald
Not
But when she viewed the gems she sighed
And kicked them harum scarum.
"Now that I own them all," she cried,
"I do not want to wear 'em."

How the Consumption of Sweets Has Affected the Forms of Women.

The relationship between sugar and beauty may seem rather remote at first, but after all the dependence of beauty on this sweet is intimate. People who have no fat show the projections of their bones through the muscles and skin. The typical "Uncle Sam" is a raw-boned, lean fellow, and in early days this was the typical Yankee—that is, a person without fat. Now, sugar is composed of 96.7 per cent. of carbohydrates, or the material that gives to you heat and vital force, and the surplus of this that gets into the body above what is required for immediate use, is stored up as fat.

In the olden time people ate little sugar; indeed they had little or no money to pay for it, and their fat had to come from meals that they ate, possibly from salt pork, admitting that fat is stored up in the body as such, which is denied by good authorities.

It can readily be seen what the effect would be when a people began to increase their fat forming food beyond the point of its combustion in the body. Sugar being a highly concentrated food of this character, it is capable of putting many pounds of fat on the animal body if eaten regularly and not necessarily in large quantities, because eaten, as it is, in conjunction with the starchy foods. The 23,000,000 of people in the United States in 1851 ate 602,000,000 pounds of sugar, or 26 pounds apiece on the average. In 1884 the 55,000,000 of people ate nearly 3,000,000,000 pounds, or 54 pounds apiece on the average.

The average per capita consumption more than doubled in just thirty-three years, and in getting this average we must include a very large portion of the population who do not use little more sugar per capita than it ever did on account of poverty, infancy and other causes, so that the consumption among those people who are left to account for the great increase in the average must be much larger than a pound a week, which is now less than than the general average.

When the water in a river is high, a little addition to it makes a freshet. So it is with the sugar eaters. The starch they eat makes necessary the storing up of a considerable portion of the sugar they eat as fat. This is what rounds out the body and the features, and has made over the old time lean Yankee into broader men and women physically. With this has come the beauty of gracefully curved lines and the obliteration of sharpness and angles. Squalor and wretchedness do not go with well rounded bodies and features of pleasing lines, because not enough food that makes fat after enough has been burned as fuel is eaten. A great deal of the beauty of fair women is made up of fat, and to this sugar largely contributes.—Good Housekeeping.

The Old Scamp.

GENTLEMEN:—I was traveling in the western part of Minnesota, and one Sunday morning woke up with one of my old-fashioned headaches, to which I have been subject for many years. I could not take any food on my stomach, was almost blind and could hardly walk. I staggered out on the street to find a drug store. The first one I came to I boiled in and told the druggist how I felt pains in my head and how sick I felt, and asked him if he had any thing that would relieve me. "Yes," he says. "I have," and handed me a box of Kranse's Headache Capsules. I took them according to directions until I had five of them down. The old scamp in my head did not know what it meant to get cheated out so quick, and in two hours I went to sleep; awoke, my pain all gone. I could take food on my stomach and was free from all pain. When I left that city, Redwood Falls, Minn., I took two boxes home with me. Such medicines are North Star, and my prescriptions that are put on the public and have no medical value.

Yours respectfully,

we don't mean choice cakes or fruits, but the ware to hold them, all in solid silver, rich, elegant and beautiful. Silver is a portion of table silver—here, including knives, forks, spoons, sugar bowls, water sets, etc., all in the most tasteful, novel and artistic designs. Silverware is costly because somewhat high in price, and cheap because you buy it for a lifetime. What wears so long should be bought with judgement and care. The fall in the value of silver places solid ware within the reach of all. We have a full line.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,} ss.
County of Crow Wing. }

In probate court, regular term, held June 5th, 1893.

In the matter of the estate of Thomas Wadham deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Eliza Wadham, executrix of said estate, praying for the amount of personal estate that has come to her hands, and the disposition thereof; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, and a description of all the real estate of said deceased, the heirs of said deceased, and the condition and value of the respective interests therein, and praying that permission be her granted to sell a part of said real estate, and that the same be sold at private sale, and that there be no authority to expend assets in the hands of said executrix in the payment of debts, that it is necessary and expedient to pay the same, to sell a part of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that a copy of said petition be presented to the judge of this court, on Monday the 17th day of July, A. D. 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the court house in the city of Brainerd, and that notice of the time and place of said hearing, and of the petition, be granted to said Eliza Wadham, executrix, by the publication of a copy of this order, and a copy of said petition.

And it is further ordered, that a copy of said order shall be published for four successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the last of which publications shall be at least fourteen days before said day of hearing, in the Brainerd Dispatch, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Brainerd, in said county, and that notice be served on all persons interested in said estate, residing in said county, at least fourteen days before said day of hearing, by mailing a copy of said petition, according to law.

Dated at Brainerd, Minn., this 5th day of June, A. D. 1893.

By the court,
MILTON McFADDEN,
Judge of Probate.

CARNEGIE'S TURNOUT.

Triumphant Democracy as Practiced by the Multimillionaire in Long Acre.

A few minutes before 10 o'clock this morning, says the Pall Mall Gazette, one of the most perfectly appointed and splendidly horsed coaches that have been seen in London this year drove up to the door of the Metropole. The horses were four beautifully matched bright bays, with two good creatures at the pole. The coachman and guard were as perfect in their dress as the horses in wheelers. They were dressed in blue coats that fitted without a crease, with white breeches that did not crease even at the back of the knees. Their faces were round and smooth and ruddy as those of babies and their complexions were exquisite pink and white. They talk like those of Arthur Roberts' best Coddington, and as they moved about you could see their hands were as white as those of the coachman and footman of the Merchants' Transportation company, was arrested on an indictment for smuggling opium into Canada.

BUTTER OUTLOOK.

Washington, July 17.—There is general concurrence among officials of the treasury department that the financial situation has improved and continues to improve. So firm is this belief that notices received by the customs office of the currency that three more national banks had failed did not cause anxiety or even misgivings of a return to the critical stage of the last several weeks.

HEAVY HAIN RITOM.

West Union, Iowa, July 17.—There was another heavy storm with hail lightning last night. Nearly every telephone instrument in Fayette county was burned out. There is a big washout near Decorah, on the Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and another near Wadena.

TEMPORARY INSANITY.

Redwood Falls, Minn., July 17.—Fred Lauterback, living about fifteen miles from this city committed suicide by drowning in a well. There is no cause assigned for the deed except temporary insanity.

SOLD AT AUCTION.

New York, Special — The Central Trust company of this city, as trustee, sold at public auction on the stock exchange the various securities of the Richmond Terminal system and sold about the 5 per cent and 6 per cent consolidated first collateral mortgage was issued. The sale was made in accordance with the request of the holders of a majority of the bonds, and is in line with the proposed reorganization and a necessary step therefor. The sale was entirely of a speculative character and the securities were bought in by C. H. Coster, chairman of the reorganization committee.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

Springfield, Ill., Special—It is reported here that the Illinois Civil Rights Association, of which Judge Albion W. Tourgee is president, has interested itself in the case of C. E. Miller, hanged and burned at Hardwell. Backed by the association the Miller family, widow of the negro, will bring an action for damages in the federal court against the city of Hardwell and its boodlers of Sykeston, Mo., the sheriff of Carlisle county, Ky., his deputies and the lynchers. It is proposed individually who aided in the capture of Miller, all citizens of Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky who participated in the affair and the population of Hardwell in which it occurred.

AFTER REV. VERNON.

Duluth, Special—Deputy Sheriff Ireland of Pembina county arrived here with requisition papers for Rev. Leigh Vernon, who was arrested here with Mrs. Bel Pearson, with whom he eloped from that place several weeks ago, but Vernon's attorney applied for a writ of habeas corpus and it will be argued today. A Joplin, Mo., officer is expected to be on the way after Vernon, as he is wanted there for seducing several young girls while holding revival services in that town.

TORTURED A WOMAN

BARBARIC WORK IN A MINING TOWN IN MONTANA.

Money Placed in the Charge of a Woman Is Recovered Only After She Had Been Brutally Treated and Threatened With Death.

Helena, Mont., July 17.—The folly of trusting money to a woman instead of putting it in the house or carrying it about on the person is well illustrated in the mining town of Marysville. A stampede recently closed one local bank. Having got the money, the women made no better use of it than to squander it. Others hid it. One man with a sum of nearly $200 was placed in temporary possession of a woman of Granite for safe keeping. Subsequently calling for it the woman denied all knowledge of it. Exasperated, the owner of the money, with several pals, proceeded to force the woman, using barbaric methods to compel her restitution. Her hands were tied, her face slashed and disfigured, and as a final resort coal oil was poured upon her and the threat of burning her alive was about to be carried out. Then the woman confessed the place of the hiding place of the money and its recovery was effected. Several houses have been broken into by parties who hope for finding hidden treasures, and like men who make the attempt carrying their savings are tempted to drink, and they may be robbed, and invited to squander the money in all conceivable ways.

FOR BRAVE FIREMEN.

Chicago, July 17. — Notwithstanding the advantages far and wide that the proceeds of yesterday's ticket sales at the world's fair will be donated to the families of the firemen who lost their lives in the awful fire of last Monday, there was some unmanly grumbling. It was at first mooted as "heroes' day," and the total admissions of the day, according to the estimate of the people who keep tabs, will scarcely reach 25,000. Even Midway Plaisance was deserted and sombre. Sabbath-like nir. There was no music in any of the pavilions, and when the announcement of the Sunday Sunday of the fair, in the eyes of some of the officials at Jackson park, was pronounced, it not been that the hall was draped in mourning a small audience would scarcely have known the occasion was in honor of the firemen who gave up their lives in the performance of their duties. For some reason the work of clearing away the stinking rubbish and debris that remained in the ruins of the cold storage warehouse was suspended yesterday.

TOOK POISON.

St. Paul, July 17.—Saturday evening Joseph Beinach, a middle-aged German living at 131 East Fifth street, wearied of an unequal struggle to secure a competence for himself and wife, drank a quantity of laudanum and died an hour later in terrible agony. Before drinking the bitter draught himself he offered it to his wife, but she was incapacitated by the cup contained. The poor woman, in her frenzy, tried to but not swallow it and will recover.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT

Pittsburg, July 17.—Engine No. 329, driving wheels 80 inches, 28 on the Pittsburg & Western railway, ran into a mass of stone at the mouth of Tunnel No. 1, near Ellwood, Pa., completely wrecking the engine and six cars and fatally injuring Engineer Frank Bailey, Fireman O'Neil and Engineer Charles Angell, of the west-bound train, sustained injuries but not of a serious nature.

CUT HIS THROAT.

Philadelphia, July 17.—John A. Lonhard, fifty years old, manager of the Hero Fruit Jar company, died, was revived in the failure of Spring Garden National bank, and, while on the defendant in suits brought by the receiver of the wrecked institution, was found dead with his throat cut. He had been last night, having evidently committed suicide.

PROBABLY MURDERED.

Chicago, July 17.—The body of William Laudert, fifty-eight years old, a farmer and worth $100,000, was found a few rods west of the Lincoln station, on the Northwestern railroad. His clothes were badly torn, and evidences surrounding the body indicate that a struggle had taken place. Residents of the neighborhood are inclined to the theory of suicide and believe that he was murdered.

CHINAMEN AND OPIUM.

Portland, Or., July 17.—The steamer Danube arrived here from Yokohama, R. C. Ship brings eighty-four Chinamen, who will be landed at the last lot of Celestials that will seek a landing at this port this year. On Saturday last the customs officers found seventeen pounds of mostanya opium. William Lowe, manager of the Merchants' Transportation company, was arrested on an indictment for smuggling opium into Canada.

BUTTER OUTLOOK.

Washington, July 17.—There is general concurrence among officials of the treasury department that the financial situation has improved and continues to improve. So firm is this belief that notices received by the customs office of the currency that three more national banks had failed did not cause anxiety or even misgivings of a return to the critical stage of the last several weeks.

HEAVY HAIN RITOM.

West Union, Iowa, July 17.—There was another heavy storm with hail lightning last night. Nearly every telephone instrument in Fayette county was burned out. There is a big washout near Decorah, on the Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and another near Wadena.

TEMPORARY INSANITY.

Redwood Falls, Minn., July 17.—Fred Lauterback, living about fifteen miles from this city committed suicide by drowning in a well. There is no cause assigned for the deed except temporary insanity.

SOLD AT AUCTION.

New York, Special — The Central Trust company of this city, as trustee, sold at public auction on the stock exchange the various securities of the Richmond Terminal system and sold about the 5 per cent and 6 per cent consolidated first collateral mortgage was issued. The sale was made in accordance with the request of the holders of a majority of the bonds, and is in line with the proposed reorganization and a necessary step therefor. The sale was entirely of a speculative character and the securities were bought in by C. H. Coster, chairman of the reorganization committee.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

Springfield, Ill., Special—It is reported here that the Illinois Civil Rights Association, of which Judge Albion W. Tourgee is president, has interested itself in the case of C. E. Miller, hanged and burned at Hardwell. Backed by the association the Miller family, widow of the negro, will bring an action for damages in the federal court against the city of Hardwell and its boodlers of Sykeston, Mo., the sheriff of Carlisle county, Ky., his deputies and the lynchers. It is proposed individually who aided in the capture of Miller, all citizens of Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky who participated in the affair and the population of Hardwell in which it occurred.

AFTER REV. VERNON.

Duluth, Special—Deputy Sheriff Ireland of Pembina county arrived here with requisition papers for Rev. Leigh Vernon, who was arrested here with Mrs. Bel Pearson, with whom he eloped from that place several weeks ago, but Vernon's attorney applied for a writ of habeas corpus and it will be argued today. A Joplin, Mo., officer is expected to be on the way after Vernon, as he is wanted there for seducing several young girls while holding revival services in that town.

BOLD, BAD BURGLARS.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 18.—Burglars dig by several pieces of business in this city last night in fine professional style. May ar Writer' hardware store was entered and revolvers, razors, cutlery and other goods to the amount of $500 were taken. The burglars gained an entrance through a rear window. D. H. Koresdahl's tailor shop was entered and thirteen bolts of cloth, fine suits and other goods valued at over $300 were taken. Koresdahl's tailor shop was also burglarized of several bolts of cloth, together with about four suits ready for delivery, all valued at from $300 to $400. Saturday night burglars attempted to enter the Milwaukee freight depot but were locked away. For weeks the city has been infested by a gang of thieves and toughs. Many petty robberies have occurred, but this last was the climax, when no less than five stores were burglarized. The arrests have been made for vagrancy, but no evidence was at hand to connect these fellows with the burglaries. The large amount of the goods stolen from Loucks' jewelry store, consisted in a manner pin near Hotel Kennard, and a quantity of that taken from Koresdahl's store was found in possession of the city marshal. Thieves also entered the residence of W. F. Mason and secured a small amount of money.

DISREGARDED ORDERS.

Fort Smith, Ark., July 18.—A rear-end collision occurred here on Saturday, a small station on the San Francisco road yesterday in which "Dad" Hunter, one of the oldest engineers on the system, was instantly killed. The freight train collided, smashing both engines and eight freight cars. The trainmen jumped to save themselves, all escaping except two firemen who were slightly injured. Hunter was caught under his engine and killed. The accident was caused by a disregarded order.

FOUR DROWNED.

Mount Vernon, Ind., July 18.—Four persons were drowned in the river here Sunday night. Alfred Allen, Ella Allen, Bogco, aged eight and nine, respectively, and Ella Allen, aged twenty-five. Mrs. Allen sprang in after them but found herself helpless in the rushing current. Her screams attracted a passer-by who went to her aid and all four were drowned before help could reach them.

BADLY SHAKEN UP.

London, July 18.—The prince of Wales met with an accident last evening which, while it had no serious result, gave him a bad shaking up. While the prince was riding in his private hansom cab through Pall Mall a passing vehicle that was debouching from King street, collided with it. The prince was dashed against the side of the cab and was hurt so as to seriously injured. He alighted from the cab and walked the remainder of the distance to Marlborough house, his London residence.

TOO MUCH EXPANSION.

Elmira, N. Y., July 18.—The boiler on the Tuscarora, a steamer at Athens, Pa., exploded this afternoon. Andrew Benjamin was instantly killed, Ross Hazlett died in a few hours and Frank Bennett was severely burned and bruised. Benjamin was a Methodist preacher and thought to be in the ruins. The plant was owned by W. H. Godchariux, and the loss is estimated at $25,000, about half covered by insurance.

FIGHTING IN SIAM

Paris, July 18.—The governor general of Annam informed the foreign office that a detachment of Siamese troops attacked a force of Annamese militia on July 14. The Siamese were driven back pulsed with great loss. Eleven of the Annamese were killed. People everywhere in the force district, which lies to the northwest of Siam proper, are according to the dispatch, siding with the French.

NEW DICTATOR.

Washington, July 18—Secretary Gresham has received a cable message from Minister Baker, dated Managua, July 16, as follows: "The Nicaraguan president has resigned. Vice President Sacasa is still in prison at Leon. A meeting of the cabinet proclaimed Zavalla dictator. A large number of Nicaraguans support the government."

WORK OR STARVE.

Tonawanda, N. Y., July 18.—About 850 men have been laid off from work on the docks this morning, ten hundred have been having arrived yesterday. An effort was made yesterday by some of the officers of the union to hold the men together and allow them to remain out longer, but it failed, the men realizing they must work now or starve next winter.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Pine Bluff, Ark., July 18.—John Cotton, a negro seventeen years old, attempted to outrage Mrs. John Tucker, a white woman at Corncorville, twenty-eight miles east of here, but his design was frustrated by the timely arrival of the woman's husband. The negro was arrested and taken to Pine Bluff, and his dangling body riddled with bullets.

THE STORY DENIED.

Berlin, July 18.—The Woman Gazette officially denies the story that has gained wide circulation that the grand duke of Hesse, brother-in-law of the Czar, has about a reconciliation between the German emperor and Prince Bismarck.

SHOT DEAD.

Chicago, July 18.—Joseph Miler of Little Rock, Ark., was shot dead by Louis Dillon. Miler was fumbling around the latter's room at 2 o'clock this morning, when Dillon, awakening, pulled a revolver from under his pillow and fired, striking Miler in the temple.

MAILED TWELVE YEARS AGO.

A Postal Card Which Reached Its Foreign Destination After a Long Delay.

A postal card which has been to Europe and come back has just been turned in at the postoffice department in Washington, to give the officials there a chance of discovering who is responsible for its long delay in transmission. It was mailed in Washington late in December, 1883, addressed to a bookseller in London, directing him to send to the writer a large number of books which were even then sufficiently rare not to be readily accessible in the smaller towns. The card reached its destination late in May, 1882. The bookseller, apparently without notifying the disparity between the date written on the card and the date of receipt, filled the order, after taking time to hunt up the books, which, in the course of ten years' interval, had grown still rarer. The surprise of the author of the card may be imagined when, so long after having concluded that the dealer could not fill his order, he suddenly had his large supply of literature dumped upon him from the postoffice. When he charged the dealer with neglect, the date of the card appears to have been established for the first time; but it was admitted that a dealer would be justified in filling such an order in spite of the antiquity of the written date, because he would have a right to assume that his customer had himself been careless about dating the card, a slip of the pen making 1881 read 1883. The New York Evening Post thinks that the card must have got into the old postoffice in Washington, been postmarked and then lost, slipping possibly into one of the many cracks and crannies of that office. When the office was moved from its old and shabby quarters into the building it now occupies some one doubtless came across the card, and, not noticing its date, dropped it into a mail bag bound for London. The responsibility for the accident is obvious; post fixing, and the bookseller in London and his customer in America will have to settle their dispute without the assistance of the postoffice department.

Too Trivial.

Judge Chase of Vermont was a man of excellent sense, and a great stickler for the dignity of courts.

At one time a case of very trifling importance, which had wearied him the gauntlet of adjudication, came before the highest court in the state. The counsel for the plaintiff was opening with the usual apologies for a frivolous suit, when the subject matter, "a mere one turkey," at last value, caught the ear of the judge.

"Mr. Clerk," he called out, in an intense tone, "strike that case from the docket. The supreme court of the State of Vermont does not sit here to determine the ownership of a turkey!"

Pushing Trade.

It is not alone in America that barbers show extraordinary resourcefulness and ingenuity in pressing their wares upon customers. An American who has been traveling in France relates that in Paris the barber who was shaving him stopped two or three times upon the edge of his foot.

At last the customer called out:

"Please don't do that any more! I have a corp."

"Exactly what I was trying to find out, monsieur," said the barber, blandly. "We have an excellent preparation for removing corns, for sale at one francs per bottle!"

New Method of Aluminum Plating.

It has long been recognized that if an effective method of gilding and plating an aluminum vessel were discovered, that material would lend itself to very wide utilization in decorative arts. It is said that such a process has been invented by Dr. G. Leimert. Aluminum may now be gilded and plated either by galvanic deposit, in the same manner as is adopted for other metals, or by direct application and heat. The process involves the covering of the aluminum with a special metallic film, and it is completed by the usual electro plating methods.

NIGHT ---OF--- TERROR

By Catherine S. Macquoid.

It had been a bright and bitter cold day. Toward sunset, however, the wind had gathered, the sky grew pitch black every hour more intense in its icy chill, soon spread these clouds over the upper part of the sky and banished this brightness which had made the cold seem more endurable.

A lad about twelve years old was standing on the ridge that crested the side of a steep valley. He drew up the fur collar of his coat about his ears and pulled his fur cap down over his face before he began to descend to the river, which almost encircled the town of Fretteberg standing on the heights opposite.

Behind him the sun was still shining in full splendor; ten minutes ago, before the clouds spread over its brightness, it had gone, with its walls and numerous gate towers, had been bathed in gold. Now this had changed to a deep gray, gilded by the vanes of the Rathhaus and those of the twin church spires, and against this massive background carts and horses and figures burrying out of the city by the Regen Thor showed, with startling distinctness. While the boy on the opposite hill gazed at the miniature scene came thronging out of the gate, he saw of they did look the same people which led down the steep cliff to the one-arch bridge, and so on to the road below where he stood.

"What can have happened since I went away?" he said to himself. "It is only a week ago."

The way to the town took him out of the field where he had been engaging to a wood on the side of the house; river and road were alike hidden from view by the close-growing tree stems; and the boy hurried on, eager to learn what this concourse meant.

"There is no fair till Easter," he thought; "and it is not even market day."

Then he smiled, for he well knew that market day never brought such a throng of people into Fretteberg.

Long before he left the wood his mind told him that the crowd was passing along the road below, and when he had reached the gate of leading into the saw with increased wonder that these hurrying people were not strangers, but fellow townsmen and townswomen. He looked first at one face, then at another, but they were all hurrying by, and there was the same look on every face—a look of terror.

"Hullo, Heinrich!" he called out. "What is the matter and where are you all going?"

The man, a big, brawny-limbed smith, shook his head, and pointed to the cart beside which he walked. In it were his wife, two children, and a heap of household goods that seemed to have been flung any how into the cart.

Franz turned to walk beside the smith.

"No time for words, my lad; have you not heard the French are marching on Fretteberg? They will be here to-night. Put in for your life—run!"

The woman in the cart began to sob.

"No, Lorens, I Must Take My Chance and God Will Watch Over Me."

"The Frenzy of Detection," she cried, and she hugged her little ones closely.

"Thank you, Heinrich," the boy said; "I must go home to see if I can see after my grandmother."

"Grandmother! will see to her," the smith answered. "You are foolish if you go into Fretteberg."

"How long have this been known?" the boy asked.

"To-day," answered Heinrich briefly, and he whipped up his horse.

Franz left him and went rapidly towards the bridge. Everywhere he saw sullen, sometimes terrified men and sobbing, despairing women. These he asked but not one answered to his question.

"The French are coming—they are even now at the gates—that devil's crew—the worst of all that came out of Moscow."

In spite of his excitement the boy was slow in climbing the opposite hill, for the severe frost had made the steep road slippery. The gate was so thronged that he could not see over it round outside the walls until he came to a smaller gate, a sort of postern, and through this he entered the town.

Here was all hurry and bustle, making a strange contrast with the looking colored amescence of the sky; and by this time the clouds had thickened so low that they seemed almost to touch the high peaked roofs of Fretteberg. Under this canopy the red roofs looked taller than ever, and every detail of carved wooden gable, of projecting story, of mullion and the plaster ornament between the mullions and irregularly placed windows, showed out vividly. Many of the houses of this small city seemed made for princely habitations; they were so lofty and so fretted; though the lower stories were chiefly made up of courtyards, or both, as they were called.

These larger houses were in the Herrengasse—a broad, handsome street, with the Rathhaus at one corner leading down to the small gate by which Franz had come in. The market place was at its farther end, in front of the Rathhaus, and Franz ran on to it, for, though the Herrengasse was deserted, he saw a crowd of people at the corner of the market place, and as he reached it the concourse came out of one of the front stone doors of the Rathhaus and said a few words to the crowd. Then he, too, hurried round the corner and entered the Herrengasse.

Franz Fretteberg he turned out of it into a much narrower street on the right and then into a curiously twisted alley lined on one side by gable ends, for some of the houses were large, too, all had high pitched gable ends, but the front of the old large hofs, and the living rooms were on the ground floor, barely two houses were alike in either of the narrow streets. At the angle they made stood a house remarkable for its carving on the gable and on the oriel at one side. Two great vines were used as brackets to support this window. In a niche above the nail-studded door was a figure of the Lady with the Holy Child in her arms. The windows were low and square, protected by grammatical iron bars.

Franz opened a little door made in the large carriage gates and went into a small covered court yard. He stopped and looked around, but there was no sign of departure here. Then he closed the door behind him. The court yard was dark, only lighted by the window of a great stone stair case at the further end; and on this murky afternoon, if Franz had not known his way well, he must have stumbled against the steps leading up to a door on the left of the entrance; but ever since the death of his parents, some years ago, he had been round in his grandmother's old home, she hurried up to the steps and opened the heavy door, pushing aside the curtain that screened its inner side and went in.

The large, low room looked gloomy, but it felt warm and comfortable to the lad who had been walking so many miles. Thick woven curtains were drawn in front of the windows, and a log fire blazed on the wide flat stone chimney, showing the dark recesses, the projecting cabinets and the stalls resting between them. The cumbrous table and chairs were all of dark oak, black with age, and the walls, too, the room was the cooking as well as the living room, and although it had a stove stood in the corner, there was a broad open hearth. Beside the hearth the old woman was sitting in a somewhat wooden chair. Behind her was a huge folding bedstead, screened by spinning wheel was at her side. She was not spinning; her white hands were folded together on her knees, and she sat quite still and silent. When the boy entered, however, she rose with a quick glance toward it, but she stilled at the sight of her grandchild.

Franz went up to her and kissed her forehead.

"Well, my boy, has your time passed pleasantly?" she said.

At the same time she drew on his fair hair and unbrowned face her smile of welcome. Franz felt that she was seriousness in his bright face.

"What is it, my child?" she said. "Tell me, Franz, what has happened to you?"

The boy looked round the room and then he said abruptly: "Nothing has happened to me and I left my uncle well; but the French are in Cape St. Vincent, and much greater depths have been sounded at distances but little greater than those of the western shores of the Iberian peninsula.

COST OF BEING IN THE SWIM.

Occasionally It Involves a Visit to the Pawnshop—A Queer Case in Point.

To be in the swim in New York. To be in the swim in New York year. Thousands of people from all people adjacent to that charming circle struggles to maintain a position against the inroads of extravagance would be extremely pathetic if they were but known. The mere cost of the plumbers who supply the necessaries is always open and it sometimes overwhelms the owners of small fortunes. Speaking of the subject to a Press reporter, a Union League club man, who is a backer with a large income, a free liver and a wide circle, latter, recently unbent himself with a few anecdotes.

"New York society of these days really needs a Warden of the Fleet. The tradesman begins to shut down the trouble commences. I remember a year or so ago a friend of mine called upon a family acquaintance on Fifth avenue. He was fashionable with a large income, a free liver and a wide circle, latter, recently unbent himself with a few anecdotes.

WOMEN WHO SMOKE.

A Man Gives Us Views of This Sex on That Subject.

"I don't mind women smoking cigarettes or, if they are old women, smoking hard tobacco in clay pipes," said Allthorpe Thistle of Cincinnati as he puffed at a cigar. "I don't like to hear anything about our idols in the feminine line that detracts in the least from their charm. I don't like to see a lot of women smoke cigarettes, and some women hit the clay pipe, too, and I don't like to see them do it. But I remember that when some years ago I was in Paris I was surprised to learn that who told me that she had just left Mme. Anderson in the Burnsi Hotel, and that our Mary had her feet on the table and was smoking cigarettes. I confess that I felt so wretched that I had to go down into the cellar and hide my face in a barrel.

"I could imagine such a desecration of the good and the glorious Mary Anderson with a cigarette in her lips, but that Mary should be found in a cafe, and that there was something wrong with a woman who made it possible for such a thing to exist. That's the way I feel about cigarettes when suggestion is made that any woman I like or love smoke them. All the women on this planet are entitled to the use of the 'gentleman's lamp' if they desire it, but I don't want any of my female relatives to be found by me to touch them with their lips."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A PUZZLING QUESTION.

What Becomes of the One-Legged Man's Odd Shoe.

Just what becomes of the shoes which should adorn the missing foot of a one-legged man is a matter of some interest, and should furnish food for thought to minds of a speculative turn. While the number of men who actually have but one leg is not very great, there are yet seen lots of one canes or another wear but one shoe, or from some discrepancy in their feet they find it easier to walk about it. But I remember that when some years ago I was in Paris I was surprised to learn that who told me that she had just left Mme. Anderson in the Burnsi Hotel, and that our Mary had her feet on the table and was smoking cigarettes. SPEED ACROSS THE SEA.

DARIUS DAVISON PLANS A VESSEL TO SAIL 30 MILES AN HOUR.

It Is to Be 1,000 Feet in Length, With a Extended Keels That Be Claims Will Prevent Her Rolling or Break the Force of the Waves.

The plans of men of ideas in these days of large projects on sea and land will come as no surprise. Those of a Darius Davison for a 1,000 foot vessel to carry passengers and freight at a speed of 30 miles an hour, proposed by marine architects or proposed by practical shipbuilders.

"There is in his scheme, however, so much that is new, so much that is the scientific expert, appears worthy of trial that he has actually begun negotiations who are warmly seconding his efforts to build a new ocean greyhound. He is now organizing a company to put his plans into execution. Should they be carried out with success the recent trials of the Paris and Campania would sink into insignificance.

Mr. Davison is a man well along in years, which he has spent in the study and practice of naval and mercantile architecture. Many of his ideas are already worked out in practical experience by the government and private navies, and he has the satisfaction of seeing many features of his work in use, or adapted to practical use in modern vessels. The Atlantic ocean is the highway of the government is one of the vessels embodying plans made by him years ago. In the office of Mr. Davison are details called by Mr. Davison to the attention of the Navy Department, and yet he is no material incongruity or internal congeity, and below the stern end of the deck it is 46 feet beam, thus giving similar advantages there obtained at the forward end.

A large, deep ocean vessel of any ordinary model, where the deck in all cases is full and rounding, the sides of the vessel, and for speed is cut away sharp at the bow and and also cut away at the stern end, cut under for the rudder and further cut under for the propeller, with an overhang beyond all, with no material displacement of water, the buoyancy under the sure to support the useless, expensive, heavy and top heavy superstructure above, both at bow and stern, in addition to all other disadvantages, lands down the deck, and the sides of the vessel and body of the vessel the same as so much paying freight, but prospective states.

In this type of vessel this is all avoided under similar conditions. The hull is cut under and the projecting bow and stern unobstructed and without resistance, and projecting and only to be immersed in water a moment, and when crest and falls over, either at the bow or stern, the water swashes off their upper flatback surfaces the same as does from a flat back of a fish as it rises above the water's surface.

The very low ends of this type of model of vessel above the load line, with no top heavy structure to weight down, permits this style of vessel to be high above the water in its main body, not subject to be overflowed by heavy seas, and still have the vertical number of gravity at a very low point, thus giving stability to the vessel in chief part by that element.

Mr. Davison said about the model and prospectus when I saw him yesterday:

"Ocean steamships constructed and propelled, capable of carrying on each trip a large amount of freight in weight or bulk and a great number of passengers, with great speed, and transporting such freight and passengers at a low rate, when necessary, compared, with what is now required to be paid, and still be very profitable, are fundamental necessities of all of the business on the routes on which they run.

"There is now nothing in the way of building ocean steamships of any desired dimensions and capacity deep of light draught, with all the improvements pertaining to them, for freight or domestic commerce, long or short voyages and be more profitable, but the contrary, when speed, light draught and run than any other type, model or class of steamship now afloat or likely to be built."

Value of Good Cooking.

We masculines have yet to learn that the kitchen is the most important place in the house. We think it is wrong the whole establishment is wrong. It decides the health of the household, and health settles almost everything else. It determines the frequency of plum pudding, mingling of lemonade and nectarin, immaculate beef, have decided Cue tate of sergeants, legislative bills and the destiny of empires. The kitchen habit has often cut off the highest prospects. The kitchen grindstone has often dimmed a continental enterprise. The kitchen bath tub has made a great man in hot water. It will never be fully known how much the history of

BE FRUITFUL AND MULTIPLY.

A Biblical Injunction Which Has Been Observed in Many Cases.

The palm for multiple child bearing is awarded by the St. Louis Republic to Mrs. Elsworth Miller of Cold Springs, N. Y., who has been married less than ten years, but who, within that period of time, has become the mother of seventeen children. The last edition to this was a set of triplets, born on March 12 of this year. Mrs. Miller was married on Oct. 10, 1883, and since that time has given birth to this numerous family, which cut down as follows: Three sets of triplets, nine; three sets of twins, six, and two singles, two. Mrs. Miller is not yet thirty-one years of age. In according the palm of the world for material that will attest the appropriateness and peculiar fitness of the above title it is found that Mme. de la Riva of Florence, Italy, gave birth to eight children on Sept. 9, 1567. Mme. Frescobaldi, another Florentine lady, who died in 1570, was the mother of fifty-two children, fewer than twelve being born at any one time, four and five at a single birth. Coming down to modern times, Mrs. Mary Ann Mc Donald, who married with the madame, and at one time sex. In Aubrey's "Natural History of Wiltshire" (England) there is an account of the Roham family, Thomas and Rebecca, who had twins and triplets on numerous occasions, and finally astonished all Wiltshire by giving birth to seven children at one time. "There is a tradition," to quote from the record, "that they made an in parish register, that all the seven children were baptized at the west door of the church and there baptized." The Gentleman's Magazine for March 17, 1798, is authority for the statement that the wife of Pierre Dulouin of Verdun, Lorraine, France, was the mother of six children, born at one birth, all of whom were born at a single birth. "A lady" name not given—see "Statistical Inquiry" Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 1, 1835, in the year 1850 gave birth to five children at a single birth. Mrs. James McElmore, who lived at Texarkana, Ark., in the year 1888 had become the mother of a family of nine children, all within the short space of three years, the last arrival of which was born on the 7th of March, 1888, and died on April 30, 1888.

THE SHY MAN.

If He Still Blushes He Is Not Without Adventures.

One of the characters in a modern novel is made to say: "I love a shy man. He is not without adventures."

Perhaps that is why he is so really delicious.

When he blushes palpably, but without boldness, he is sure to be drawn toward him by a certain sentiment of affinity, and so long as he is just shy enough, but not too shy, he wins more and more upon one.

To dare a really shy man out of his shyness is a pleasing task, and the more so he is generally enchanted to give expression to the sweet, generous ideas that he usually keeps locked fast away within himself. One comes upon a stray jewel or two now and then in such cases in the shape of an unexpected thought that astonishes the discoverer because it seems so different from the genuine shy man he is known by.

I assure you I would think shy men are sometimes very charming, but then one must be a little bit shy one's self in order to appreciate them.

The shy lover may also ones, and do you know that they only come out of their shell in the presence of and always then, so that there is a pleasing element of uncertainty about it. Shy maid adds an interest they inspire!—London Truth.

Suffered Every Minute

Since I came out of the war, with catarrh in my head, chronic diarrhea and rheumatism; very deaf, and in addition, bronchitis. I was pale as ever one, my appetite was capricious, sometimes ravenous, and I could not walk a block before my wind would be gone. The food I ate would lie like a stone in my stomach. The doctors said I was in the right way for consumption and I was fast going to my grave. I took Pyro-Pin and found it good; everything I eat digests easily, and I am free from pain. Pyro-Pin is the most important discovery of the age.

The publication of the list of lands against which a judgment for taxes has been entered, under a law passed by the legislature last winter, occurs this week and no one but a printer can estimate the amount of work necessary to place it in type. The entire force has been at work upon it the greater part of the past two weeks and it was only by the greatest exertion that it was gotten ready for publication today. Next week we will present the usual amount of local matter.

Ira Doney, a brakeman on the Brainerd & Northern Minnesota railroad was instantly killed yesterday while in the act of coupling cars, his head being crushed between the logs. The accident occurred at Monroe station. The deceased was about 30 years of age and married, his family living in this city. A coroner's inquest is being held this afternoon at Lossey & Dean's undertaking rooms.

When C. B. and I. U. White get the improvements completed at their new business place in the Walker block it will be very attractive. They carry the finest line of sporting goods in Northern Minnesota.

It is now understood that the bluebeary war will not be celebrated in Brainerd this year, the St. Paul gentlemen having decided that they ban not attend.

They are Coming in Hacks.

The Wadena Pioneer last week contains the following concerning Dr. Lum, a brother, of County Attorney Lum, of this city, who is also quite well known here:

Some kind friend sent Dr. C. E. Lum a very valuable present through the mail the other day. It was none other than a rabbit's foot, and its power as a mascot is well known and undisputed. It was taken from the left hind leg of a jack rabbit caught in a grave yard, at exactly 12 o'clock, in the full of the moon, on the night of the 29th day of February, and in consequence, it people notice, that they are "coming in hacks" for the genial doctor, they will not be at a loss to account for it. The doctor prizes it highly, and takes a good deal of stock in its wierd charms.

Gull River.

Lyman Whipple has moved in his new house and is correspondingly happy.

Henry Ramsay is looking after a farm near Sylvan Lake and will buy if he finds anything that suits.

The Gull River depot will be moved to Sylvan lake this month.

There was an ice cream sociable held at this place last Wednesday evening. A general good time is reported.

Miss Jennie Mix our popular "School Mam," has taken a homestead west of Sylvan lake, and will hereafter make this locality her home.

Our new county commissioners seem to have lots of business to attend to. We see they had to hold two meetings this month to do about a half hours work. Don't you think gentlemen that it would be better to hold a few less meetings and do a little something when you do meet? Of course your names wouldn't get in the papers quite so often, nor neither would you draw as much pay. But you would stand lots higher in the estimation of your constituency.

Our annual school meeting was called to be held at Pine Grove school house last Saturday at 7.30 p.m. We have'nt heard whether it was held or not, but are informed that it was not and consequently there will be another one called at Gull River.

Haying will commence next Monday. There is a big crop and the marshes are in excellent condition for cutting.

Abe J. Phillips returned home from Minneapolis last week where he has been the last six weeks working in a saw mill. He reports times very dull there at present.

The Magic Number.

From the earliest ages, men have attached something of a mystery and magical character to the number seven. The classic world had its seven wonders, Greece had her seven chief cities and her seven sages. The law given from Mount Sinai made the seventh day a holy one. The rainbow presents seven colors. It was a favorite number in the abstruse calculations of the ancient astrologers, and has been much used as a basis for those who attempt to unravel Biblical prophecies. The Burlington Route has on its line seven cities which are foremost in the Great West and well worth a visit—Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver. Between all these the Burlington Route, with its magnificent vestibuled trains, is the popular means of communication. For maps, time tables, etc., call on local agents or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Comedy Off the Stage.

"The funniest thing occured in Buffalo last week," said Jessie Bartlett-Davis.

"The company was staying at the Iroquois hotel. The dining room has a tiled floor, and one of Mr. Barnabee's weaknesses is dancing on tiles, particularly when they are a little loose. Mrs. Barnabee, my sister and I were at breakfast and waiting for him. It was his first appearance in the restaurant, and about sixty people were having their coffee or lunch when he came in. Well, the moment he stepped on the floor a tile or two gave, and the impulse that seized him set his feet flying, and I never saw him dance better. His wife knew that if she tried to stop him he would persist just to tease her, and so she smiled and said nothing, but frowned whenever he looked our way.

"The head waiter thought he was crazy until he began to sing jig music and dance round him. The guests put down their knives and forks and laughed and applauded while their coffee and chops got cold. When he had gone over the floor and had all the fun he wanted with the loose tiles he stopped, sent ed himself and ate his breakfast with all the affected severity and mannerisms of a senior wrangler. Mr. Barnabee's comedy off the stage is a public loss."—New York World

Zola and the Late Emperor.

M. Zola, in The Figaro, in reply to some critics, insists that the emperor rouged his cheeks at Sedan. The emperor's friends, he says, have talked as if to have done so would have been humiliating—"the role of a buffoon." "On the contrary, this seems to me a great mistake. I find the act superb—worthy of a hero of a Shakespearean play, heightening the figure of Napoleon III to a tragic melancholy of an infinite grandeur." That is a characteristically French exaggeration. We presume M. Zola means that it was noble of the emperor to take the trouble to conceal from his troops his desperate physical weakness. But even granted that it was a prudent thing not to show a cheek of ghastly pallor, we fail to see that it was heroic.—London Spectator.

JOHN UPTHEGROVE.

Apart from the repulsiveness of anything in our food that even suggests the possibility of fingering and fiddling, think of the valuable time and materials wasted in spoiling an otherwise eatable piece of meat, fish or fowl by this misguided practice of overdressing. Have had the misfortune to be confronted with a dish of fillets of sole so utterly improved off the face of creation by the artist in vegetable colors that, to save my life, I could not have said what I was eating, and at dinner parties I find myself continually shying like a horse at some bright red thing, black striped green thing or spotted brown and magenta thing—each with a brand new and incomprehensible name—which is handed to me upon a richly emblazoned edifice erected upon an exquisite alabastar socle fantastically designed out of compostite candle or mutton fat and flour. —Nineteenth Century.

Hard to Understand.

The meekness with which the passengers in a crowded street car will allow themselves to be shut tightly in the car without chance of ventilation except the occasional opening of a door is one of the marvels of public travel. It is often the case that fifty or sixty people are thus penned up and no one asks for or attempts to secure a supply of pure air, no matter how vitiated the air inside may have become. A delay of two or three minutes arouses everybody in the car and there is a general eagerness to ascertain the cause, but cubic yards of impure air will be inhaled by each one without a murmur. Such conditions are breeders of disease and ought to be carefully avoided.—Boston Journal.

A Story of Swedenborg.

A respectable man in Stockholm bought an estate of another, paid for it and received an acknowledgment. The purchaser died soon after, and not long after the seller demanded payment of the widow, threatening, that noncompliance would cause him to take possession again. The widow was terrified, for she knew her husband had paid, but after making a most minute search she was unable to find proof anywhere. As the deceased had been on kindly terms with the Russian ambassador she had recourse to him, who, being well aware what assistance Swedenborg had afforded in such cases, promised the widow that he would talk over her case with him.

Some days after Swedenborg came to the embassador and bade him tell the widow that on a certain night her husband would appear to her and give direct information where the receipt was secreted. This was awful to contemplate but, as impending ruin stared her in the face, she determined to sit up on the night in question, keeping her maid, however, with her. But the latter fell into a deep sleep, and all efforts of the widow were unavailing to keep her awake. At midnight the deceased appeared. He looked grave, as though displeased, and then pointed out the place where the receipt lay in a little desk in another room attached to the wall, after which he disappeared. The widow went the next morning to the place he had indicated and there found the receipt. —Chicago Mail.

McCoy's Encore on the Gallows.

"Speaking of bravado on the scaffold reminds me of a one legged man I saw turned off in western Pennsylvania when I was a boy," said Roger Blakeslee. "He was known to have killed five men. He had lost a leg while trying to add a sixth to his string, but finally recovered, was tried and sentenced to hang. The execution took place in the court house yard, and several thousand people gathered to witnessit. McCoy, for that was the criminal's name, ascended the scaffold with no other assistance than that afforded by his crutch. When asked if he had anything to say he replied that he would like to say goodby to his fiddle. It was brought, and standing on the deathtrap he played a lively air, handed the violin to the sheriff, and with the aid of his crutch danced a jig on the trapdoor. He then announced that he was ready.

"His arms were pinioned, the black cap drawn over his head, and the trap sprung. The rope broke, and after being carried back on the scaffold more dead than alive he asked how long it would take to procure another one. He was told about ten minutes. 'Well, give me my old fiddle while I'm waiting,' he said. His arms were unpinioned, the cap removed, and he made his best bow to the audience, saying he had not expected an encore."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Washington, July 15.—Over 2,500 pensioners have been suspended under Secretary Smith's ruling requiring pensioners to prove total disability when they are drawing $12 a month under the act of 1890. The suspensions are not confined to any particular locality, but are well distributed throughout the country. No pensioner had yet been dropped under the decision, for the reason that sixty days allowed the pensioners in which to make proof of disability have not elasped. Many of the cases suspended will not result in the dropping of the pensioner but may be confined to a reduction of pension according to the degree of disability and its cause, as by the proofs submitted.

The Paradise Grass.

"The most beautiful country I ever saw was under the water," said Captain Ezra Whipple, who formerly sailed the salt seas, but now has his stateroom at the Southern. "Coming from Kingston en route to Baltimore, in 1867, I collided off the coast of Cuba with a Dutch three master. A hasty examination was made by the carpenter, who reported slight damage, and we kept on our way. The Dutch vessel had no more than got out of sight when my ship began to fill, and we soon had to dessert her and take to the open boats. The sun beat down upon us with terrific force and I became a victim of that peculiar hallucination called by the sailors 'paradise craze.'

"The sea appeared to be transformed into a mighty meadow, bright with flowers and musical with song of birds. Cool springs burst from crystal rocks and trickled over golden sands, and men and maidens lay about beneath the trees. They seemed beckoning me to join them, and I plunged over the side of the boat into forty fathoms of brine. The bath brought me to my senses, and I reached the Cuban coast more dead than alive. The mania is of frequent occurrence in tropical seas and is often referred to by the poets. It may be that to this species of madness the old Greeks were indebted for those beautiful fancies of gods and goddesses reigning in regal splendor beneath the ocean's brine."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Leigh Hunt's Love of Color.

The late Mrs. Duncan Stewart, who knew well most of the English authors of the last sixty years, used to say of Leigh Hunt that she believed him to be the only person who, if he saw something yellow in the distance and was told it was a buttercup, would be disappointed if he found it was only a guinea. Yet those were Leigh Hunt's days of greatest privation. Mr. Carlyle was very poor, too, at this time, yet a friend who knew him very well and went often to see him told Mrs. Stewart that one day going to Carlyle and seeing two golden sovereigns lying exposed in a little vase on the chimney piece he asked what they were there for.

Carlyle looked—for him—embarrassed, and gave no definite answer. "Well, now, my dear fellow," said the visitor, "neither you nor I are quite in a position to play ducks and drakes with sovereigns; what are they for?" "Well," said Carlyle, "the fact is that Leigh Hunt likes better to find them there than that I should give them to him."—New York Tribune.

Forbearance Ceased.

"See here!" yelled the wrathful man as he took off his hat and showed a head as bald as a campaign lie.

"Yes, I see," said the druggist. "Did you every try my unparalleled capillary renovator?"

"That I must, or what I did," answered the baldheaded man in tones of wrath, "and here's the result."

The druggist mused a moment.

"It works that way sometimes," he said. "The hair grows so fast, you see, that it pulls itself out by the roots. Now, if you want to strengthen your scalp by using a few bottles of my acmeistical scalp balm——"

At this point they clinched.—Indianapolis Journal.
