A WOMAN suffrage bill was killed in the South Dakota senate yesterday. The boys are not very gallant out there.

RESUBMISSION has been defeated in North Dakota. It is evident they want prohibition there, even if it don't prohibit.

IT is proposed by a bill introduced in the legislature to punish drunkards by making them take the Keeley cure. It is a good thing. Push it along.

IF Harry Hayward is not convicted then the jury system is a farce. A more complete chain of evidence could not be imagined than has been wound around this inhuman brute by the state.

THE bill for the taxation of railroad lands has passed the house, and it is reported will have no difficulty in passing the senate. It looks now as if the railroads intended to make the contest before the courts instead of in the legislature.

Aluminum has the property when used as a pencil of leaving an indelible mark on glass or any other substance having a siliceous base. This property is susceptible of a variety of practical applications in decorating glass.

The power for mischief of the tussah shuttle is instanced by Mr. A. J. Lovejoy of Roscoe, who reports an experiment made by a friend of his in Gettysburg, S. D. While driving one day one of the thistles came unshipped along in his path. The happy thought came to him of sticking the thistle with a request to the person finding it to let him know where it traveled to. He did so and turned it loose again. In a few days word came from the thistle sixty miles away. It had distributed its seeds the entire distance.

New York's state engineer has great expectations concerning the coming utility of the trolley in moving canal boats. He says the trolley lines could be built on either side of a canal, the motor running on its own track, attached to row-lines as now used, controlled by the helmsman, and consuming no space on the boats. The track along the towpath could be used, thus giving room for the horses to tow by the present method when desired. In this case the motors might be made electric horses. This is but one of the practicable and inexpensive systems that have been proposed.

It is common in continental Europe to speak of December as "London's Black Month," or "the Dark Month of the British Isles," and on that account, December, instead of being "Christmas," is the month in which the world's metropolis receives the fewest visitors. The records made at Greenwich Observatory, which is the leading institution and would not purposely malign the climate, is authority for the statement that for the past ten years London's December has had an average of sixteen days of sunless days and an average total of only twenty hours of sunshine for the entire month.

The reception tendered to Mrs. U. S. Grant by the Confederate veterans of Georgia was an event which should have been fully chronicled in every Northern paper. It is such demonstrations as this which have a tendency to wipe out even the recollection of sectional bitterness. There are hot-headed zealots in the South just as there are cold-blooded political schemers in the North, but the great mass of the Southern people are loyal American citizens; and if their fathers, and perhaps some of them, did cross swords with the boys in blue.

Suing for Damages From Spooks.

One of the most peculiar law suits ever filed in the United States is on the docket at Crawfordsville, Ind. Three years ago a passenger train on the Illinois robin was wrecked near the home of John Elliott, north of the city. The train rolled down an embankment, and one coach was burned. Five persons killed and seventy injured. The property belonged to the heirs of Elliott. Now he wants $1,000 damages from the railroad because, he alleges, the health of his family has been bad ever since the wreck, and he claims he has heard the groans from the injured that vibrate through his house every night and then they come out at night the "spirits" of those killed in this wreck can be seen walking up and down the track in front of his house. He wants all these things stopped, and for the sake of peace, since which has caused sickness in his family he says he has spoken about the wreck every night since it happened.—St. Louis Republic.

Statistics as to Language.

Almost one-third of all humanity, or about 400,000,000 are speakers of the Chinese language. The Hindoo language and its dialects are spoken by perhaps 125,000,000, the third place being accorded to the English language, which is now used by not less than 119,000,000 people. The Russian language comes next with 80,000,000 people, and the Spanish of about 68,000,000. After the European language French takes fifth place, and German the language of the world is considered it is the seventh in the category.—St. Louis Republic.

THE HAYWARD TRIAL

THE OING MURDER TRIAL OF AT MINNEAPOLIS

Charles Bitzy, the Self-Confessed Slayer of the Girl, Takes the stand and Goes into Details of the Crime. Bitzy Breaks Down and Sobs Like a Child.

Minneapolis, Feb. 12.—When court was called to order Emil Ferrant was on the witness stand. He said he knew about the scene in the Ozark on the morning of the murder. He was asked said that at 11 o'clock he was preparing to go to bed, when he heard a commotion in the stable. He went there and he found Harry Goosman, whose horses were the livery stable, and the fleer Thomas Britt. Ferrant asked Goosman what was the excitement. The reply was that Miss Oing had been out riding that evening and met with a serious accident. Harry came in presently and made those singular remarks about his business relations with the girl, which have been testified to by several witnesses. He also produced a pistol and said he had used it on the girl.

When it came to calling the next witness Mr. Nye arose and said "It is the intention of the state to introduce the testimony of Adry Hayward at this time. He is not in the room, but he has just been sent for."

Mr. Erwin was on his feet at once. "May I please be counsel," he began in his suave way, "this is somewhat of a surprise to us. We wish to have extended to us a little courtesy because of Adry Hayward. One of them is sick and could not attend court. We believe that, if possible, some other witness be put on at this time, so as to save me the inconvenience of having the bulk of the proceedings read and explained to me by my associate counsel. I feel it is not the testimony itself that is of so much importance, but the manner in which it is given."

Judge Smith observed that the case must go on, and suggested that if he had any other witness who could be put upon the stand at this time Mr. Nye said that he objected to changing the order of the testimony, but would call another witness to save inconvenience the defense.

The strongest testimony the state has brought out, aside from the confession of Bitzy, came when most unexpected. The defense has inferred right along that Miss Ging was mixed up with a gang of low men, and that Harry knew nothing. From all the state witnesses it appeared that the girl was seen, that Harry did not know of Miss Ging's rides the two nights previous to the murder. The girl was seen by herself, had said that Harry asked after Miss Ging. Then Bitzy, the fighting from a clear sky came the blow to the defense. Miss Ireland was called on the stand, and she said that Harry had told her aunt not to let her have any more rides with Bitzy in the evening. Her aunt had said that was his wish. Her aunt had then informed her not to "give it away" that she knew Miss Ging was out with Harry, as he wished it to be known the niece had been told of their relationship. Then was Harry called upon to testify himself, and

HER DEATH-BED

By Annette Marie Mallard.

In all this time Lora Lyons suffered; for, Basil gone, her memories were sad indeed. Who might deliver her from the fear of seeing a man who so much despised as she did Mr. Lyon? Long her life had been miserable. Slave, rather, consulted in nothing, and her failing to this time was doubled from the fact of his having in the first instance sought to inoculate himself (unknown to her) with the shallow idea of Mrs. Evelyn. Mr. Lyon had been much attracted by Alice's graceful beauty, and having in his mind the memory of the daily attacks continually levied against his celibacy, he imagined that here he could assuredly not fail; a simple girl she was, and he flattered by his regard, and would gladly accept him. It was then when all sorts of considerations than aught else that he once more spoke in plain terms the hitherto unconscious girl that she found herself perplexed enough to be sociable of his friend, and, the more emboldened by her silence, he ventured to pass an arm around her waist, and call her "his own Alice." Unfortunately for himself he found he hitt been rather precipitate in his proposition, for she started from his embrace and, with the energy before her eyes of Basil's voice the previous night when he uttered those very words, she indignantly asked him, "How he dared touch her?"

Mr. Lyon recovered himself as well as he could, and this was awkwardly enough, and, as he left the room, from whom he intended to honor coldly and decidedly rejected him another and forever. Little as he was used to anything of this sort, and he felt it was very poorly, and his pride in mind hurtled her from that hour. Alice never spoke of this to Basil, and he felt, persuaded her that life would be easier and happier when her mother was married; for he thought Lora so long tortured feel, quite forgetting that none are so really wicked as those devoid of sense to know their own little-ness. The widow married and departed on her wedding-tour, and this month was Alice's fading remnant of comfort; for the housekeeper, and she, and the evening the two dear friends, she and Lora, sat in confidential chat in the little green arbor, and the former felt as if she had never felt happier than her half in the joy she witnessed, when bearer of a letter from Basil to Alice, the housekeeper had watched at the little garden gate for the coming of her friend. Lora's presence leads in into far more danger and seeming than if we were actually dating. Will anyone be surprised; how should three mere children in the world's wide-spread ocean of measures around them? Lora knew not how to receive Basil's letter, for Alice unknown to her husband, and without her aid they could not correspond; she was transport of anything of the sort, and it was the emergency of the case, which made Basil suggest the assistance of her mind. What harm could there be in the son of a husband's friend, a gentleman, a man who, as she knew, received written to her? especially when it was a duty incumbent upon her as being so much better off than him to secure his happiness, for which she felt Mr. Captain Oliver would some day thank her.

With perfect simplicity she tell her mind that Alice should, and Basil to write to her about something his father knew nothing of yet, and he thought would be sent to her, the servant. The woman could not refuse, and she was one feel disposed to do so; menials are never sorry when they see their masters deluded themselves.

We do not in the class of menials rank the good old honest servant who was in his master's house and interest his own. We speak of the hirelings whom money may purchase, and cannot any fault. No three persons ever more complicate the situation than these, as a fatal net than these three. Lora's private meetings were watched by Basil, who never knew of the letters pass between her and Alice; and the man, by his mother's aid, was aware of the insinuations of others, at once concluded that she was the whole affair, and, in spite of her hatred, knew that

The rooms of the First National Bank are being re-decorated. The work is being done under the supervision of J. C. Congdon, who has a reputation for artistic work in this line. Organized a Senate.

A new literary and debating society was organized in this city last night at the Y. M. C. A., which will be known as "The Senate." The object of the organization is to familiarize its members with parliamentary rules and practice, and to aid them in public speaking. The meeting was called to order by C. A. Albright, and Prof. Carter, was chosen chairman and W. G. Percy, secretary. On motion it was determined that the name of the organization be known as the Senate. A committee consisting of C. A. Albright, David Cohen, Geo. Growcox, John Congdon and Geo. Smith was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws. A prepared bill was ordered read, the same being "A bill to set apart Feb 12 (Lincoln's birthday anniversary) as a legal holiday," and upon motion it was made a subject of debate following the business of next meeting. On motion the senate resolved itself into a committee of the whole to discuss matters pertaining to future business of the society. After a lengthy discussion of several points of interest, a unanimous motion was made dissolving the committee of the whole which was carried. The meeting then adjourned, upon motion, until Wednesday evening, Feb. 20th, at 7:45 sharp.

From the above it will be seen that it is the object of the organization to introduce bills and go through the whole legislative process of considering and passing the same, in order to get its members acquainted with the mode of procedure in such bodies. Several people of experience are expected to assist. Hon. W. A. Fleming and Hon. H. C. Stivers have been invited, and will no doubt lend their aid. It is a splended idea, and it is hoped all the young men about town can be interested.

Teachers' Examination.

Teachers' public examination will be held at the Court House, in Brainerd, on March 5th, 6th, 8th, 9th, 12th and 13th. No private examinations will be granted before April 1st.

DIED.

Chas. Baker died at his home in this city at 1 o'clock this morning, of consumption, aged 29 years. Deceased was well known, having resided here from boyhood. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn the loss of husband and father. The funeral services will be held on Sunday, at 2 p. m., at the Episcopal church. The Ancient Order of Foresters, of which organization deceased was a member, will attend the funeral in a body and have charge of the ceremonies.

Mrs. Susan B. Young, of Gull River, died on Tuesday, the 12th inst., aged 76 years. The funeral services were held at the school house in Gull River, Rev. Edmunds conducting the ceremonies. Mrs. and Mrs. C. A. Young desire the DISPATCH to express their heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly assisted them during the sickness and death of their mother.

An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Olson died of la grippe last Monday, aged 3 months.

An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McGraw, of West Brainerd, died on Sunday, aged three months. The funeral occurred on Monday.

What Editor Drawz Saw.

During a short visit to Brainerd Tuesday we met a number of old friends; all of whom seemed to be prosperous and happy. Among the number were: Col. R. R. Wise, our former alderman, who, as proprietor of Brainerd's leading hostlery, the Arlington, saw that nothing was wanting to cheer and nourish the inner man. L. M. Koop has a well selected stock of dry goods, and seems to be doing a fine business. One of the clerks is Henry Linneman, and he is still a popular salesman. Miss Reilly is also clerking in the store. W. A. M. Johnson has been appointed deputy by the new clerk of the court, Sam H. Parker, and seems likely to hold his position for the next four years. Those who have business to transact at the clerk's office will always find him pleasant and obliging. J. E. Ireland, who has been here so often in the past that he now seems one of us, is now grand secretary of the Workingmen's Mutual, and is principal business manager of the institution. The title of "grand," however, has not affected his genial nature in the least. He has a pleasant suite of rooms in the Bank block, and would be gratified to have any of his old friends call on him when in town. Harry Treglawney is attending to business in the N. P. bank, and says he is satisfied with his post of duty. Of course we called on the pencil pushers of the City of the Pines, including Mayor Halstead, of the Tribune. The cares of office seem to rest lightly on Bro. Halsted's shoulders as he seems younger and handsomer than ever.—Staples World.

At Boom Lake Ice Rink.

Next Saturday, Feb. 16th, J. E. Andrews, of Stillwater, and Frank Howe, of this city, will jump on ice from a spring board, a long distance ice jumper of the world. They will jump for a solid gold medal, which is now on exhibition at Sundberg's jewelry store. Frank French and Aug. Ellison will skate a mile and John Reed, of this city, and Andrew Carlson, of Duluth, will skate a two mile race. On Sunday, Feb. 17th, John Goeddert, Aug. Ellison, Frank Howe, Frank French, John Reed, of this city, and Andrew Carlson, of Duluth, and J. E. Andrews, of Stillwater, will race for the championship of Northern Minnesota. These contests will be exciting from start to finish, and those attending will see some fine jumping and skating. There will be barrel and other races both days. Admission, gents, 25, ladies, 15, children, 10 cents.

Railroad News.

John Dorsey, Supt. of the Yellowstone division of the N. P. at Glendive, died the first of the week after a short illness. He was road master of this division at one time during which time he resided here, and he has many friend here who are very much grieved at his death. His remains were interred at Detroit yesterday, a great many of the officials of the east end of the road being present.

E. G. Pearson, formerly assistant division superintendent of the Yellowstone and Missouria division of the Northern Pacific at Glendive, Mont., has been made superintendent of the same, vice John Dorsey, deceased. Mr. Pearson is a young man, and has risen rapidly in the railroad service. Before last summer he was principal assistant engineer of the Wisconsin Central, when the Northern Pacific was operating that line. Afterwards he was chief engineer of the Chicago & Northern Pacific. In 1892 he commenced service, at the age of eighteen, as engineer in the construction of the Rocky mountain division of the Northern Pacific. He was assistant superintendent of the Portland terminals from 1892 to 1894, and superintendent or bridges and buildings of the Minnesota division from 1884 to 1889 and division engineer between St. Paul and Livingstone between 1889 and 1891. He is strictly a Northern Pacific man.—Pioneer Press.

Florence Rebecca No. 111, was organized in this city on Tuesday evening last in Odd Fellow's hall, by Mrs. Speelman, of Verndale, district deputy, assisted by Editor Drawz, of the Staples World. The following were installed as officers:

N. G.—Mrs. Anna Skinner.
V. G.—Mrs. Hunton.
R. S.—Miss Minnie Merritt.
P. S.—Mrs. R. G. Vallentyne
Treas.—Miss Crow.

After the ceremonies were concluded an elaborate supper was served.

Stole Sleds.

Chas. Gravel swore out a warrant on Saturday, charging Herman Frank and Albert Knel, of Crow Wing county, with stealing two logging sleds and a box stove from a camp in the northeast corner of Ripley town. The warrant was put in the hands of Sheriff Rider and the men were caught at a lumber camp near Mille Lacs lake. They were brought to the city Sunday night and tried before Justice Shaw on Monday. Herman Knel plead guilty and was to pay a fine of $25 or spend ninety days in the county jail. The others were discharged.—Little Falls Transcript.

Garrison Items.

T. Conwell, of White Fish Lake, is buying quite a few logs of the settlers in the this vicinity.

There have been quite a few small articles missed around here for the last few years, but the sheriff of Morrison county was up recently and made a cleaning out of the family that was mistrusted, and found two pair of logging sleds and a large heating stove. We hope it will stop their little petty thieving for a time.

There has been more sickness in town this winter than ever before.

There seems to be quite a lot of saw mills in the county this winter looking for location. There is one in town now and two more expected. Now is the time for the farmer to do his building.

L. R. Lothrop left Wednesday for the terminus of the Brainerd and Northern Railroad, near which point he will at once commence the construction of a bridge 2,000 feet long over the southwest arm of Leech lake. The Brainerd and Northern now extends from Brainerd in a northwesterly direction about 80 miles, the terminal station being Lothrop, which is within five miles of Leech lake. The road is owned mainly by Minneapolis lumbermen. The construction of this bridge is said to be the first move towards the extension of the Great Northern from Fosston to Duluth. It is said that when this is accomplished the Brainerd and Northern will become a part of the Great Northern system.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Famous Portrait Painter.

The following item clipped from the Chicago Tribune will be of interest to our readers from the fact that Mr. Thorp has recently purchased a large tract of land up on the road in this county, and will come here to live in the spring: Mr. Thorp is the author of several articles that have appeared recently in the Chicago papers concerning the desirability of making homes in this vicinity. The Tribune says:

Freeman Thorp, the artist, has just finished a replica of his portrait of Mrs. W. C. Newberry. This portrait was painted partially from a photograph of Mrs. Newberry that was taken some time previous to her death and from descriptions furnished by different members of the family. The likeness was so perfect the relics were ordered. An interesting testimonial of Mr. Thorp's ability in this direction may be formed from the following incident: Jacob Perkins, a Cleveland multi-millionaire, wished the portraits of his dead parents painted. He had only some old daguerreotypes, and Mr. Perkins was loath to let any American artist undertake the task.

He traveled through Europe and visited a number of studios of famous portrait painters. Some refused the task, and others were reluctant to guarantee a first-class piece of work with regard to likeness. Mr. Perkins at last visited the Berlin Society of Artists, of which Mr. Thorp was made an honorary member in 1871. One of the artists, on being approached by Mr. Perkins on the subject, said: "You are from America, are you not?" On receiving an affirmative reply, the artist said: Go to Mr. Thorp in your own country; he is the man you are looking for.
