Dr. Parsons has moved into his new rooms in the rear of the new photograph gallery, where he may be found to attend night calls.

Owing to the great rush of work at the office last week, preventing a sufficient attention to the proof-sheets, several bad errors occurred.

Reports of a terrible freshet at St. Louis, Mo., are now wafted northward. This seem to be a pretty good year for floods, washouts, etc.

Mr. Luther Osborn, publisher of the Glyndon News, dropped down on us yesterday for a friendly call. Bro. Osborn reports everything lively in the Valley.

I understand there is in this town a man answering to the same name as mine. If so, will he please call on me at Headquarters Hotel.

Handsome illustrated catalogue and price-list issued by Burts' Eastern Agency, 363 Grand Street, New York, has been received. The illustrations are all new and prices moderate. Sample copies mailed free upon application from above address.

Wanted, immediately, two apprentice girls for millinery at Mrs. Grandelmeyer's store.

Dr. J. H. Linsley, formerly of Brainerd, has recently been appointed city physician of Burlington, Vt.

The Mandan Citerion says: "Brainerd is having a building boom, according to the TRIBUNE, which reports sixty buildings in course of erection." The Criterion is slightly off of base, as the TRIBUNE reported and correctly too, one hundred and sixty. Please stand corrected Bro. Robinson; only a slight error.

A local newspaper man is generally expected to be everywhere, see everything, and catch every item afloat, simply because it is his profession. But he can't do it. His friends can help him through by bringing or sending such items as are of interest. All manner of legitimate local news goes to make up an interesting paper, and will be received with thanks.

The pines on the south side of the track are all being cut down and the grounds cleaned up generally. Now, that the location of the shops is a certainty, we may safely calculate to see a big boom in building this season. Parties desiring to erect residences and business establishments have delayed so doing on account of a faint fear that something would transpire to prevent the erection of the shops at this point; all doubts being now dispelled, it may be expected that people will at once go ahead in their contemplated enterprises.

POLL-TAX POINTS.

No "Free List" to be Allowed This Year Says Overseer Davenport.

In the town of Brainerd it is estimated that there are over one thousand males who have arrived at their legal majority, and who are subject to assessment for poll-tax. On the poll list there are 602 names, consisting of those who have virtually lived up to the compliances of the law regarding this subject of vital importance. Those who dodge this matter, and elude the vigilance of the overseer of highways, have not the interest of their own vicinity at heart. In fact, they unwittingly trample upon their opportunities to enhance their own public as well as private interests. There is ample opportunity for improvement in the town, and not a copper could be easily misspent, or applied to work on enterprises about town, which would not redown to some advantageous and specific result. Many have avoided the payment of poll-tax in the past through a possible opinion on the part of the overseer, but if that little game is undertaken this year, we fear not very satisfactory results will arise from such effort, and very probably it will cost them much more in the end than it would had they discharged their proper duty at the onset, honestly and manfully. Those who opine that they are unably, through imagined or real poverty, to pay the diminutive pittance assessed, have an easy remedy; two days' work with ax, pick or shovel will suffice just as well. Cash, or an equivalent in labor, to the small amount of three dollars for each subject is all that is required or asked. For the benefit of those doubting the legal authority for enforcement in this matter, a few quotations from the law may not be out of place. The first, which indicates what those not complying with the regulations of the law in this matter are to be considered, from a legal point of view, will give every one an opportunity of placing himself before the public in whatever light he chooses, and is taken from the statutes of Minnesota, relative to roads, cartways and bridges, as follows:

PERSONS AND PROPERTY LIABLE.—Every male inhabitant being above twenty-one years, and under the age of fifty, excepting paupers, idiots, lunatics, and such others as are excepted by law, shall be assessed not less than one day, nor more than four days in each year. Supervisors shall assess a road tax on all real estate and personal property liable to taxation of the town, to any amount they may deem necessary, not exceeding one dollar on each hundred dollars of value, as valued on the assessment roll of the preceding year.

The following will be sufficient to place all parties on guard, so that they may be aware of the authority of their orders to begin work, and also, as to locality of labor:

NOTICE TO WORK OUT TAX.—Overseers of highways shall give at least three days' notice to all persons assessed to work on highways, and living within the limits of their respective districts, at the time and place, when and where they are to appear for that purpose, and with what implements, but no person shall be required to work on any highway other than in the district in which he resides, but may elect to pay any land road in labor in the district in which said land is situated, and shall be allowed one dollar and fifty cents for himself, and a like amount, for the use of a team and wagon, or plow, such labor shall be at the disposition of the overseer of their respective districts.

Now, a word or two as to the penalties for neglecting or refusing to satisfy the assessment:

PENALTIES FOR NEGLECTING ROAD DUTY.—Every person so assessed and duly notified, who does not commute, and who refuses or neglects to appear as provided, shall be fined for every day's refusal or neglect, the sum of two dollars.

Overseers are required to make complaint before a justice of the peace, who shall immediately issue summons directed to any constable of the county, requiring him to summon said delinquent forthwith, who shall be required to show sufficient cause for any neglect or refusal to obey orders of overseer. Fines can be collected on goods or chattels of defendant, and also costs of proceeding.

The overseer of highways, Mr. P. D. Davenport, is determined that this matter shall not be dealt leniently with this year, and proposes that many of the much needed improvements our town demands shall be brought about by a strict attention to business, and a rigid enforcement of the law in all contrary cases, and he so desires to notify the general commonwealth of this village. Therefore, beware, and take heed ere it shall be too late. The people in the town in themselves should have self pride enough of their own to look well to their personal interests, and cannot increase the tendency to elevate and enhance the interests of the community in general in a more positive and definite manner, than by looking at these affairs which spring up every now and then, and a strict compliance with the law may save many a finger from being pointed in the face of Overseer Davenport's determined grit.

CARWYN CAUGHT.

Sheriff Mertz Outruns a Railway Train, and Deserves the Belt.

Sheriff Mertz had quite a lively chase down the track last Wednesday noon, but outrun a railway train, and accomplished his design. A young man named Charles Carwyn, who had been employed as a palister in the N. P. shops, had been boarding at the residence of Mrs. Lyons for some time previous, and on Wednesday morning concluded that he didn't care about remaining any longer, and accordingly made himself somewhat scarce and far between. He also wished to go prepared for flight, either with bullets or pen, as he purloined two revolvers, loaded to the full, and a fine gold pen and holder. With this heavy and dangerous booty he was ready to launch out upon the broad expanse of this great universe, and was, doubtless, intending to equalize himself in the finish of an editor, or organize himself as a military company for the frontier. His movements indicating that a scarcity of presence in the neighborhood was contemplated, the sheriff was placed on the lookout, who laid low for his man. A deputy was stationed at the bridge and another on the route to Aitkin, and just as the train started, the sheriff spied his man dodge out from some hiding place and jump aboard the rear end of the train. Long lower extremities often come in good play, but in this case longer ones served better. Just to have seen our worthy sheriff at this juncture would have been better than to have paid 25 cents for a sight of Adam Forepaugh's Colossal and Combined London Circus, Unequaled Superiority of Organization, Gigantic Hippodrome and Thirty-eight of the Largest Shows in the World, Combined in One Ponderous, Prodigious and Never-to-be-thought-of Caravansary of Man and Mammal. Checkers on coat tails were not to be thought of. The individual upon whom the clutches of the law were about to fasten, was very much amused at the gigantic strides of the to him supposed passenger in his attempt to catch the train. Said sheriff got there, saw, and he conquered and captured his man after a good deal of chin music, and a large display of sand on the part of the captive, who stands only about five feet in his shoes. The train was brought to a halt, the man searched, the property recovered and identified. He was thereupon piloted back to Brainerd, and given lodging in the county hotel until Thursday morning, when he was brought before Justice Sleeper, and assessed to pay a fine of ten dollars and costs amounting to some six dollars, and also required to pay his delinquent board bill of nine dollars. He departed twenty-five dollars poorer in funds, and doubtless a great deal wealthier in wisdom as to the ways of the world.

Be Brief.

Some people have to get over about an acre of soil before they can turn around; in other words, they have to belch forth an eruption of Webster, ere they can make known what they want to say. Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibleness, coalescent consistency, and concatenated cogency. It is best to beware of plenilunidious pondrosity, and assiduously avoid all polysyllable profundity, pompous prolixity, pilfacacous vacuity, ventriloquial yurbosity, and vauliloquent vapidity; also eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, inane babblement and asinine affections. It is also best to let your extemporaneous decantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Shun prudent jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent, and don't use big words, when little ones will answer as well.

Business is Business.

A certain prurient biped of the genus homo species makes his principal avocation nowadays the persistent assault of the TRIBUNE and its management. Now, to this party we would respectfully announce that we have come to stay—for a time at least, and it will take more than the spasmodic effervescence of skim-milk brains to frighten us out of the country. A persistency in this matter indulged in as ardently in the future as in the past, may cause a slight eruption at some unexpected crack in the volcano and an overflow will follow. If you can do us no good, leave us alone, and we will endeavor to return the affection with similar deference. Otherwise, our wishes are for you to be an element of a personal scarcity in our neighborhood, or, in other words go to a climate where thermometers would boil in the shade.

WARDS, WICKED WAYS.

A. R. Ward and Peter Daum, of Ward King & Co., Have Been Lately Agitated.

The community was somewhat agitated last Monday morning, as the report was bandied throughout the streets that two of the firm of Ward, King & Co., proprietors of the Fifth Street Hotel, Messrs. A. R. Ward and Peter Daum, had skipped the town during the preceding night and gone, whither none but themselves knew. It was soon discovered that they had played a very clever game on their partner, Mr. King, who, it seems, will be compelled to bear the brunt of the affair. They had gotten everything, evidently, in complete readiness during Sunday afternoon, and along towards evening quietly slipped out separately for a walk about the town, but have not since shown up. They had taken with them, we are informed, all the spare cash on hand, as well as all cigars, champagne, etc., they could well carry off, without being detected. Various rumors are afloat relative to the man Ward, touching on his former character and previous affections, but as to this we are ignorant. Ward left numerous unpaid bills behind him; among them the TRIBUNE comes in for a share of what we won't get. Strenuous efforts are being put to bear to capture the miscreants, but as yet all endeavors in that direction have been without avail. The Adelphi Theatre, which was under the control of this firm has since changed hands, being now in the charge of Mr. Tom Flanigan. Bills against the old firm are doubtless 'no good,' at least we have been so informed by parties interested. It is to be hoped these two erring individuals, who are fleeing from justice, may be apprehended, and that the measures of the law be strictly enforced in bringing them to an appropriate standing in the eyes of the people of Brainerd, and that Mr. King may find redress and relief thereby.

Amateur Actors.

Last Saturday evening the Dramatic Club repeated "The Poachers Doom," and also presented a farce known as "The Boston Dip." The first piece was greatly improved upon by the repetition, and the farce was presented in an admirable manner. The Characters in "The Boston Dip" were as follows: Mr. Moses Mulligrub, once proprietor of a fish cart, now a rich speculator; T. R. Congdon; Monsieur Adouis, a dancing master, E. O. Webb; Mr. Richard Dasher, a fast man, C. V. Wadham; Mr. Lavender Kids, an exquisite, C. D. Johnson; Mrs. Moses Mulligrub, Miss Adella Seelye; Miss Ida Mulligrub, Miss Blanche Sleeper; Miss Eva Mulligrub, Mademoiselle Kidkrofts. The parts were all cast, and the result was exceptionally commendable. Tom Congdon as Mulligrub did the funny business to perfection. Miss Seelye as Mrs. Mulligrub was tolerably droll and mirth-provoking. Her impersonation of this character was as comical and appropriate as it could well be. All the other characters were carried in an able and efficient manner. One very attractive feature of these entertainments was the music by Miss Jennie King, who is an accomplished pianist. Miss King received many hearty compliments on the thorough and pleasing manner in which her portion of the amusement was rendered.

Somewhat Scorched.

The following is an extract from an article in the New York Evening Telegram, of April 24: "At three o'clock this morning a fire broke out in room No. 19 at Woodhead's English tavern, situated at the corner of Ninth street and Sixth avenue. The occupant of the room, George D. Drummond, a Scotchman, who resided at No. 146 West Forty-sixth street, was burned to death. He was known in the tavern as a Wall street curbstone broker. The deceased had imbibed freely of intoxicating drinks before he went to bed. He took a candle to his room and by some accident set his bed on fire. Drummond was, it is thought, suffocated by smoke. His neighbors in adjoining rooms heard him shout, but did not understand what was the matter with him. Major Orange H. Stevens, of Brainerd, Minnesota, of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company Construction Department, who was sleeping in the opposite room, was nearly suffocated by the smoke. When rescued he was almost unconscious. He lost all his effects. Major Stevens has escaped previously from the burning of the Galt House in Louisville, from the Clarendon Hotel fire at Buffalo and from the Brooklyn Theatre fire."

Church Social.

The regular bi-weekly social given by the ladies of the Congregational Church was held this week at the residence of Mrs. W. H. Leland, and was a very pleasant and enjoyable time. Although not quite as many came out as have been present at some of these pleasant gatherings, yet the ardor and zeal of those in attendance in suggesting and carrying into effect various amusements, were none the less profitable or appropriate. Mrs. Leland knows just how to do the agreeable as hostess to perfection, and spared no pains to make all feel at home and at ease as soon as in the lady's presence. Cake, sandwiches, coffee, etcetera, were served in their proper order, and in quantities to satisfy all. A slight indisposition and a doctor's prescription prevented the TRIBUNE from indulging very heavily in these luxuries, but we know by the amount of good things some of our near neighbors at the board got outside of that everything served must have been par excellence. The proceeds of the evening were about five dollars.

HEINOUS HELLSHEEDS.

An Old Man Horribly Beaten and Robbed of His Money.

Last Wednesday evening about half-past seven o'clock, we are informed that a Swede named John Berglund, who has been in the employ of C. F. Kindred for several months, and who is a man about sixty years of age, was walking in the vicinity of the railroad bridge, when some of the festive cyprians in one of the houses in that neighborhood, motioned to him to "come in." The old gentleman shaking his head in the negative, one of the "fellows" of the institution came out and deliberately knocked the old man down, and before he could recover himself, a second man appeared and the two went through the old man's pockets, robbing him of about one dollar in silver. Mr. Berglund had considerable money in the inside pocket of his leather vest, which these human hypocrites failed to discover. The old gent was pretty roughly handled, and bears several severe bruises and contusions as the result of this brutal assault. How long will the authorities of Brainerd and vicinity outrage upon the peace and dignity of the community? When it comes to the public robbing of old and unprotected men on the public thoroughfare, is it not about time to take some active measures? A warrant was issued for the arrest of the two men, and as they are well known, as also their capabilities for general cussedness, they had better look a little out, as our officials are watching them, and a trip down the road might not exactly coincide with their views of enjoyment and easy times. Other parties of similar inclinations, and proclivities had better be on their guard, as a new departure in various matters is about to be inaugurated, and there's vengence and justice in the air. The old man's story, as above, is generally believed.

Spaulding's Genuine Georgia Minstrels.

Arrangements have been made by Mr. T. C. Lindsley, the agent for this troup, whose popularity is know the world-wide, for a three nights' entertainment, in Brainerd, the time to be Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 12th, 13th and 14th. A reputation of being one of the best troups that travel should warrant this troupe abundant success wherever they go. Thirteen star actors, and an excellent reputation is all that is required to insure them success in this place, as it is known their entertainments here will be their best. Let everybody attend. Admission 50 cents; reserved seats 75 cents. Remember at Dip's Hall, next week.

CURRENT TOPICS.

THE Supreme Court of Pensylvania held in a recent decision that bargains in stock by way of margin, where no intention exists of actually delivering the stock at issue, are "wagering contracts, and therefore utterly void."

BY a vote of 116 to 25 the Massachusetts house appointed a committee to investigate the recent discharge of two spinners at Fall River for testifying before the committee on the ten-hour law adversely to the interests of the mill-owners. It is hinted that the corporrtions involved may lose their charters.

A LETTER has been received at the Treasury Department from an enterprising German citizen, of New York city, offering the government $10,000 for the privilege of running a small lunch-counter and a beer saloon in the lobby of the postoffice, of that city. In a postscrip he added that if his proposition was entertained he would make it "all right with the proper parties."

A CHARTER has been granted for an air-line railway from Ottawa to Toronto; a company has been organized with a capital of $1,000,000, and Engineer Lumsden has been ordered to complete the survey. The new road will be run in connection with the Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa and the Great Western, making another through route from Quebec to the west. Hon. Adam Brown, of Hamilton, is president of the new organization.

THE Illinois legislature has passed the bill for taxing the railroad companies of the state 2½ per cent. on their gross earnings. It is thought a much better way than the method of taxing them on their property, whose value it is difficult to determine. The estimated product of the tax is $1,000,000 a year. The Illinois Central, the largest and most important line of road in the state, is not included in the arrangement, as under its charter it has always paid 7 per cent. of its gross earnings to the state.

COTTON dress goods have had their ups and downs. At the beginning of the present century they were a comparatively recent production, and a printed cotton dress was fit for a princess. The invention and application of machinery made them so common that the wife of the poorest artisan would hardly consider one fit to wear in the street, and now through the improvement of the fabric, cotton is coming to the front again recovering the prestige and becoming one of the most desirable of summer materials.

MR. RAINER, who served as lieutenant governor of South Carolina, and subsequently represented his state in Congress, is now working in Charleston as a common laborer on the streets. While busily engaged the other day in handling his pick a garbage cart backed up to where the ex lieutenant-governor was at work and dumped a load of dirt on the street. Among the rubbish was a copy of the Congressional Record containing a speech made by himself on the civil rights bill while a member of congress.

THE disparity of the sexes in churces is placed by Zion's Herald at two to one in favor of the women, and the same paper also makes the following rather startling statement: "If we were to take the churches right through the country, we should find that not more than one-tenth of their number are men in the prime of life. The other nine-tenths are women, men who have passed their meridian, and youths who have not yet reached their maturity. It is also to be observed that in almost every other community the majority of the energetic, enterprising business men are not avowed and active Christians; and if they are identified with the church at all, it is usually in the most superficial way."

"IT is significant," writes George Alfred Townsend, "that all the statuary now being put up over the country is commemorative of the Union and none of it monumental of the rebellion. South Carolina has put up two statues since the war—one of Sergeant Jasper, on the battery at Charleston, the other of Daniel Morgan, near the field of Cowpens. There is not a public statue of Calhoun, nor is there likely to be In New Orleans a monument to Robert E. Lee was commenced some time ago, and is in an unfinished state in a public square. It was to have been about ninety feet high. Efforts are being made to finish it, but the respectable sentiment of the community discountenances it."

WHEN York, Pa., was invaded by the confederates in 1863, General Early, who commanded, levied a contribution of $100,000 upon the city. As nearly all the ready cash had been removed when he arrived, he only got $30,000. So confident was Early in the success of the campaign in which he was engaged, that he took the bonds of the corporational officers for the additional $70,000. He was beaten at Gettysburg, and the bonds were never presented. There is a story now in New York that Early still has the bonds and contemplates bringing suit against the city to recover the amount. This would certainly be a novel suit at law and raise some interesting questions.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

WASHINGTON.

Only United States notes will hereafter be received by the Treasury Department as security for the reduction of national bank circulation or the redemption of notes.

The Senatorial deadlock was broken May 4th, after a continuance of five weeks and six days. On March 24, the Senate first refused to go into executive session, and since that time a most decided reluctance by both parties has been evinced against such action. This ill-advised partisan measure has been the means of stirring anew the various party hatreds, and has resulted in no good, and the Senate should as far as possible make amends by expediting executive business, and adjourning at an early day.

The revenue cutter Corwin has been ordered on an Arctic cruise, and her captain is instructed by Secretary Windom to seize all vessels and arrest all persons detected in violating the revenue laws, as well as to confiscate fire-arms or liquors being illegally introduce into Alaska.

Attorney General MacVeagh has been instructed to obtain indictments against the members of the star-route ring, and more removals will take place in the contract division of the postoffice department.

It is probable that the grave of George Washington will be adorned with flowers on Decoration day, and that President Garfield will deliver an address.

The debt statement for April shows a decrease during the month of $9,690,900 and since June 30, 1880, o f $79,093,601 with $233,731,195 cash in the treasury. Coinage during the month, double eagles and half eagles $8,895,000, silver dollars $2,300,000.

A recent manifesto issued by the Nihilistic executive committee at St. Petersburg, says:

The verdict against the Nihilists who have just received martyrs' crowns, was dictated as well as confirmed by the Czar. The first act of his autocratic will thus has been the hanging of women. Without waiting for his coronation he has sprinkled his throne with the blood of champions of national rights. Over the graves of our colleagues we publicly affirm that we will continue our efforts for the liberation of the people. We will no more be deterred by the gallows than were [illegible] After the event of the 13th of March, the executive committee informed the Emperor that the only means of reverting to the path of peaceful development was by an appeal to the people. Judging by the execution the supreme power has decided to appeal to the hangman. So be it. The committee defers pronouncing any judgment on the general policy of the Emperor, but it declares that a reactionary policy will lead to consequences more disastrous than the event which took place in March.

The manifesto concludes by appealing to all who would shake off slavery to co-operate in the struggle for liberty.

A train on the Western Pacific road when near Hayward, Col., killed five children of a family named Nebas.

A locomotive and tender went through a trestle-work at Ringwood, N. J., which was being repaired, and Engineer Skully and Fireman Masker were killed.

A frightful calamity at Elgin, Ill., on April the 28, caused by the swamping of ferry boat used in crossing the river at that place. A few days before the bridge crossing the Fox River at Chicago Street gave way to the flood and a flat boat was hastily constructed to serve while the bridge was being rebuilt. It is estimated that thirty passengers were in the boat, and only fourteen saved. The boat was crossing from the west side, and when nearly two-thirds over began to flood with water. The passengers, in consternation, at once struck to the dry part of the boat, clinging to the railing, which gave way, precipitated them into the river. As the water poured in the boat sank below the surface, leaving thirty human souls battling for life in the angry current. The water rushes past this point at the rate of six miles per hour, and it was only by the most desperate efforts that any were saved. The boat was a clumey affair, and as it was ordered by the city council, and accepted by them. Much indignation exists against the city officers. The boat was condemned by the practical boat men, before it was put to use, which by the way, was only the day before the accident occurred.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

Extra Session.

SENATE, April 28.—The unfinished business came up and a motion for an executive session was lost by a vote of 20 to 21. Mr. Butler then took the floor for the purpose of proving his assertion of a few days previous that if he did not produce irrefragible evidence of the existence of a bargain between Mahone and the Republicans he would resign his seat. He then produced seventeen distinct charges of corruption between the contracting parties and concluding the speech with a reply to a portion of Frye's speech. He repelled the assault made by that Senator upon the state of South Carolina, and asserted that the people thereof were dwelling in peace and harmony, and read from newspaper reports to show that in elections held in Maine fraud, bribery and intimidation had been practiced by the Republican party. The Chandler murder in Maine he characterized by saying that in heinousness, in brutality, in beastliness it had never been equaled since the days when the Borgias had shocked humanity, and further charged that "school books and the Bible are the foundations of such a state of civilization. Messrs. Hale and Burnside then engaged the attention of the Senate and Mr. Butler for a few moments with replies. Mr. Burnside reiterated his previous assertion, that all charges of corruption on his side of the chamber were false. Mr. Hale said the difference between the people of South Carolina and the people of Maine was that where the offense occurred the people of Maine and its institutions punished those who had committed the vile deed. The Republican party was dedicated to this single proposition that everywhere all over the [illegible] should be permitted, if he wished, to exercise that right. There would never be a binding peace until that question was settled, and settled right on Mahone.

SENATE, May 2.—The unfinished business was laid before the Senate. Senator Farley called attention to the large number of nominations awiting action and moved to go into executive session. The people of his state of all parties were appealing to the Senate to consider important matters in which the were directly interested. Petitions were daily coming from California asking for consideration of the Chinese treaty. Senator Saulsbury denied the charge made by Dawes that Democratic Senators were responsible for delay in transacting public business, and asserted the contrary to be the truth. After reference to Riddleberger and "that bargain" he said he was not sure the administration could have one-half its nominations confirmed except for the aid which it expected from the Democrats, but if this thing was kept up, if the administration was to aid in strengthening the hands of repudiation in the Southern states, he (Saulsbury) would for one say unhesitatingly that the administration was not worthy his support. A motion to go into executive session was lost, yeas 19, nays 22. An hour wasted upon dilatory motions, and the Senate adjourned.

SENATE, May 3.—Unfinished business came up and Mr. Davis. ([illegible]) took the floor with a speech upon the debt question between Virginians, premising his remarks with an expression of regret that the speeches made by Senators from Virginia and Ohio, Mahone and Sherman, should have compelled him to discuss in this chamber what he considered to be purely a local matter. The debt question in West Virginia had never been made a political one, and he regretted that Republican Senators should make statements reflecting upon the action of Democrats in that state upon that question. He gave a history of the debt complication and said the Virginians and his people will pay their debts, and the sooner the better. He hoped the two states would soon come together and settle the question.

After a short debate on the debt of Virginia the Senate adjourned.

SENATE, May 4.—Unfinished business, the election of officers, was laid before the Senate. Mr. Dawes moved to go into executive session, and in doing so repudiated the idea that by so doing he and his associates were giving up the fight over the Senate officers, which he considered in its scope and character as presenting a question of great importance to the future welfare of the government, involving, as it did, the right of the majority to rule. Mr. Pendleton asked Mr. Dawes to withdraw that motion for a moment, which Mr. Dawes courteously refused to do. Mr. Beck suggested to Mr. Pendleton that it would be indecorous for him to disturb the funeral oration. Riddleberger and Gorham were a dead set Let them die. Mr Dawes trusted this was the funeral of the assertion made by the Senator (Beck), that the Senate itself should never pass on its own works. Mr. Dawes' motion was then agreed to—ayes 63, nays 0. When the doors were reopened the Senate adjourned.

The Executive Session.

The Senate in executive session, confirmed the following nominations: Robert Hitt of Illinois, assistant secretary of senate; Hiram Price of Iowa, commissioner of Indian affairs; A. M. Jones United States marshal for the northern district of Illinois; Sandford A. Hudson of Wisconsin, associate justice of the supreme court of Dakota. The foregoing were all confirmed by unanimous consent. Other nominations on the table were referred to appropriate committees. The Senate then took up the Chinese immigration treaty, Discussion ensued, in which Senators Miller and Hoar were the principal participants, the former advocating the ratification of the treaty upon the ground of its placing the subject of Chinese immigration within our entire control hereafter, and the latter opposing it with the argument that the underlying purpose of the treaty is contrary to the genius of our institutions and to the general doctrine of the "brotherhood of man."

The treaty was finally laid aside as unfinished business for to-morrow.

Casts from Animals.

"Takes it easy, don't he?" said a sharp-eyed man, patting a long, winding mass of clay hanging over a bench.

"You don't mean that it is alive?"

"Well, I should say so. Look here," he replied, and picking away a little clay at one end a bright, bead-like eye appeared, and a forked tongue that darted out for a second belonged to a rattlesnake.

The cast-taker was Joe Palmer, employed by the Smithsonian Institution to restore animals, etc.

The qualifications of the animal sculptor who works from life models are varied. Artistic talent, a cool head and steady nerves are indispensable, especially when the subject is a rattlesnake or a copperhead. Reproducing a snake in clay in former times, and preserving lifelike proportions, was an immense work, many of the scales having to be worked over and over with instruments for the purpose; but now the operation is much more simple, although dangerous. A living snake is chloroformed, and, after it is completely under the influence, placed on a limb or in a coil, and plaster quickly put on. If it shows signs of consciousness before the clay has hardened properly, more chloroform is given, and finally the cast is cut off and ready for the mold, which, when completed, is painted, making a perfect fac simile. The operation is not always conducted easily. A copperhead "came to" one day suddenly, and, throwing the clay aside, made a dash for liberty that created a stampede. He was recaptured later.

Among the larger animals are dolphins, porpoises, grampuses, and the white whale that was in the New York Aquarium. Twenty or thirty heads standing on the top of the cases in the Archæological Hall attract considerable attention from the variety of expression shown. In one the lips are drawn tightly together, and determination is shown in every lineament. Another looks as if it had lost all hope; while in others, fear, rage, astonishment, disgust and dogged imperturbability are seen. They are the heads of a band of Indians that visited Washington several years ago, and were coaxed by the sculptor to undergo the process of cast taking. They all declined at first, but, the chief finally consenting, the others followed suit, and their different emotions as they sat for an hour with their heads and faces plastered with clay (breathing through straws), are accurately recorded.—New York Sun.

Old People's Unconscious Jokes.

Long life and old habit create an amusing self-oblivion when comparison with others is suggested. It is something like the inebriate's phantasy which makes him change places with the world, and think every man drunk but himself—or like the simple unconsciousness of the old English servant, who, when his master, meaning to discharge him, told him, "We must part, John," asked, "Where do ye propose goin' to, sir?"

The old story of Thad Stevens saying to the stout young men who used to carry him in his chair to the House of Representatives: "Well, boys, who will carry me when you are gone? is older tha Stevens, however original it might have been with him.

An old gentleman, 70 years old, once remarked: "I take pains with my writing, so that when I am old I shall be able to read it."

Another, aged 77, at the head of a large publishing-house, on being remonstrated with for working so hard, answered: "I don't feel it now, but I expect I shall in after life."

The youngest daughter, of 72 years, having died, one of her parents, who was 100 years old, remarked: "I always told thee, John, we should never rear that child."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A FIRE at Minneapolis destroyed the feed mill of J. D. Osmer, causing a loss of $2,000. Several firemen were injured, by inhaling flames.

SEVENTEEN head of cattle belonging to A. Gooler, of Lamberton have died recently, and the owner thinks feeding them oats in the sheaf is what killed them.

GOOD work is being done by the committee of the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce for the sufferers by the Missouri river floods, several hundred dollars having already been collected.

Two men named Gustav Gunerius and a Mr. Hansen, were killed at South Minneapolis, a few days since by being crushed beneath the falling walls of a building, which they were raising.

BY collission in the yards of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Co., at Minneapolis, a few days since, one man, Joseph Snyder, was severely injured and three locomotives were rendered useless.

A DIFFICULT surgical operation was performed at St. Luke's hospital, St. Paul, a few days since, being the removal of an ovarian tumor weighing forty-five pounds from a lady named Mrs. Leigh, residing at Breckenridge.

A TERRIBLE case of sickness is reported from the town of Cresco, this state. A family named Weaver, eight in number, living on an island in the center of a large marsh, were found nearly all down with the most malignant form of scarlet fever ever known. Three in the family died in twenty-four hours.

A SON and daughter of John C. Smith, of the town of Parker, Morrison county, killed a bear the other day. The bear was in a hole, and the boy shot the animal, but the shot did not kill it. Miss Smith then armed herself with an ax and kept the bear in the hole by chopping its nose whenever it started to come out, until her brother had time to reload his gun and fire a shot that proved fatal.

THE time clock on the vault of the First National bank at Minneapolis got dead and stopped over Sunday, and was not running Monday morning. What they were to do about it became exceedingly interesting to the bank officials as the business hours approached, and they were about telegraphing to Chicago for currency, when the President chanced to think that clockwork can be started occasionally by shaking. A sledge-hammer and stick of timber were brought into use, and the time-clock responded in a gratifying manner, so that business went on as usual, and the financiers recovered from their cold sweat.

State Teachers' Institute.

The State Institute held its annual session in the Normal School building at Winona, April 26. About 100 teachers were in attendance. Prof. Shepard called the institute to order and asked D. Burt, superintendent of public instruction, to open the institute formally. He said the holding of this State teacher's institute was due entirely to the generosity of the faculty of the state normal school of Winona, who had assumed the control and direction of the institute after the term of their service as teachers in the normal school had closed, and without additional compensation. They had taught thirty-six weeks in the normal school, a longer time than eighty out of the eighty-six high schools of the state held, and yet voluntarily and without pay had consented to serve the state in conducting this institute. He thought it fortunate that this gathering of teachers could be held under such favorable auspices, having all the conveniences, apparatus and appliances of this grandly furnished institution, with its accomplished corps of teachers and instructors.

Professor Shepard then briefly outlined the work of the institute, which is to be confined mainly to the studies and teachings of the elementary and rural schools.

The Rochester Asylum.

The Second hospital for the insane in Rochester is constantly undergoing enlargement and improvement. Mr. H. E. Horton has just completed the plans and drawings for a new engine house, the contract for which will be let soon, so that work on it may be commenced within a couple of months and completed this season. This new structure is to be located 100 feet in the rear of the present engine house, which it is to supersede. It is for the accommodation of the engine and a set of Fenerrick boilers of 300 horse power already in position on the grounds, which are upright, and are twenty-six feet in height. The building will be 40x65 feet on the ground and will consist of a stone foundation nine feet in the ground and twelve feet in height to a water table, above which is to be a brick wall thirty feet high with brick cornice; the roof is to be iron, and the whole structure strictly fire-proof. The smoke-stack will rest on an octagonal stone base eighteen feet in diameter, and starting twelve feet below the surface of the ground; on this foundation is to be built a shaft eighty feet in height, consisting in fact of an inner and circular chimney, enclosed by another in the shape of an eight-pointed star. This shaft is to be eleven feet eight inches in diameter at the base, tapering to nine feet and flaring at the top to a diameter of thirteen feet and capped with cast-iron plates. The entire height of the smoke-stack above the ground is to be eighty-seven feet. It is estimated that the cost of the engine house and smoke-stack will be $5,000. The engine house will be connected with the main building by an underground passage 4x7 feet, through which the steam is to be conveyed by a main eight inches in diameter, It is expected at some future time to build a laundry adjoining the engine house.

Indian Epicures.

In the summer of 1875 I stood one evening near the Quartermaster's office at Fort Wingate, New Mexico, when two Kiowa Indians applied for permission to water their famished horses at the Government cistern, offering to accept that boon in part payment for a load of brushwood which they proposed to haul from the neighboring chapparal. The fellows looked thirsty and hungry themselves, and while the Quartermaster ratified the wood bargain, one of the officers sent to his company quarters for a lunch of such comestibles as the cooks might have on hand at that time of the day. A trayful of "Government grub" was deposited on the adjacent cord-wood platform, and the Indians pitched in with the peculiar appetite of carnivorous nomads. A yard of commissary sausage was accepted as a tough variety of jerked beef, yeasted and branless bread disappeared in quantities that would have confirmed Dr. Graham's belief in natural depravity; they sipped the cold coffee and eyed it with a gleam of suspicion, but were reconciled by the discovery of the saccharine sediment, and the cook was just going to replenish their cups when the senior Kiowa helped himself to a vinegar pickle, which he probably mistook for some sort of an off-color sugar-plum. He tasted it, rose to his feet, and dashed the plate down with a muttered execration, and then clutched the prop of the platform to master his rising fury. Explanations followed, and a pound of brown sugar was accepted as a peace-offering, but the children of nature left the post under the impression that they had been the victims of a heartless practical joke.—Popular Science Monthly.

About to eat her up,
"Stop!" cried the sparrow; "gentlemen
Should wash before they sup."
Grimalkin paused; to be presumed
So she was rather nice.
"Quite true," he said, and dropped the bird
To follow her advice.

Off flew the sparrow. "Ah, you rogue!"
Cried pussy, in a rage,
"So that's your game! But I'll be wise
In future, I'll engage!
I'll never wash before I eat,
But after." Which is still
A fashion that cats keep up,
And, doubtless, always will.

SCARLET FEVER.

The Scourge of the Nursery and How to Treat It.

[From the New York Times.]

Beside the character common to the group known as exanthemata, scarlatina is almost always attended by sore throat, and the scarlet rash or eruption, which gives the name to the disease, breaks out as early as the second day after the appearance of the fever, and ends on the sixth or seventh day in the separation of the cuticle. Nearly all medical writers mention three varieties of the disease—scarlatina simplex, in which scarcely any throat trouble attends the fever and the rash; scarlatina anginose, in which throat trouble is more prominent than in either of the other affections and scarlatina maligna, in which the system is immediately overborne by the violence of the disorder, and the patient exhibits great weakness and loss of vitality. The disease begins with chilliness, lassitude, headache, rapid pulse, dry, hot skin, flushed face, loss of appetite and furred tongue. Presently the throat feels irritated, grows red, and is often swollen. The small points of the rash so increase that the skin soon seems almost uniformly red, extending from the face, neck and breast to the trunk and extremities. The separation of the cuticle in the scales usualy ends in a fortnight or more from the declaration of the distemper. The fever continues with the rash; is sometimes accompanied with delirium or even coma. In the malignant, or third form, the rash comes out late and partially, being at times barely perceptible. At other times it may abruptly recede, or be mingled with livid spots. The skin is cold, with feeble pulse and extreme prostration, and death may occur—frequently from blood-poisoning—in a few hours. In such cases the tongue is dry, brown, tremulous; the throat is livid, swollen, ulcerated, gangrenous; breathing is impeded by viscid mucus that collects about the fauces, and medicine avails little. Even in scarlatina anginosa there is considerable danger. It may prove fatal from the inflammation or effusion within the head, or from disorganization of the throat and sloughing off of adjacent parts. Teeming women are in imminent peril from the mildest phase of the fever. When it seems to be cured its consequences are hazardous. Children, to whom it is mainly confined, of course, are subject after a severe attack to permanent ill-health, and to some of the many forms of chronic scrofula, as shown by boils, sores behind the ears, inflammation of the eyes, glandular swellings, and strumous ulcers. Scarlatina is often followed by a peculiar dropsy, affecting the subcutaneous cellular tissues and larger serous cavities. It occurs, like all the exanthemata, as an epidemic—sometimes in very virulent type. In the simple variety, remaining within doors, non-stimulating diet and regulation of the bowels are generally found sufficient. In the second variety, leeches are often employed. especially where delirium supervenes. The two principal sources of danger in the malignant variety are from the primary effect of the contagious poison upon the body and from gangrenous ulceration of the throat. The final result is always uncertain. Whether it is contagious throughout its course, or at one period alone, has never been ascertained; but that the power of contagion remains in clothing, furniture, etc., is unquestioned and unquestionable.

How to Mind a Baby.

First a man must have one to take care of. It isn't every one that is fortunate enough to have one, and when he does his wife is always wanting to run over to the neighbor's five minutes, and he has to attend to the baby. Sometimes she caresses him, and oftener she says, sternly, "John, take good care of the child till I return." You want to remonstrate, but cannot pluck up courage while the awful female eye is upon you; so you prudently refrain, and merely remark: "Don't stay long, my dear." She is scarcely out of sight when the luckless babe opens its eyes, and its mouth also, and emits a yell which causes the cat to bounce out of the door as if something had stung it. You timidly lift the cherub, and sing an operatic air; it does not appreciate it, and yells the louder. You try to bribe it with a bit of sugar; not a bit of use, it spits it out. You get wrathy and shake it. It stops a second, and you venture another, when, good heavens! it sets up such a roar that the passers-by look up in astonishment. You feel desperate; your hair stands on end and the perspiration oozes out of every pore as the agonizing thought comes over you, what if the luckless child should have a fit! You try baby talk; but "litty, litty lamby" has no effect—for it stretches as if a red-hot poker had been laid upon its spine, and still it yells. You are afraid the neighbors will be alarmed, and give it your gold watch as a last resource, just in time to save your whiskers; though it throws down a handful of your cherished mustaches to take the watch, and you thankfully find an easy chair to rest your aching limbs, when down comes that costly watch upon the floor, and the cause of all the trouble breaks into an ear-splitting roar, and you set your teeth and prepare to administer personal chastisement, when in rushes the happy woman known as your wife, snatches up the long-suffering child from your willing arms, and, sitting down, stills it by magic, while you gaze mournfully at the remains of your watch and cherished mustache, and, uttering a malediction on babykind in general, and on the image of its father in particular, vow never to take care of the baby again—until the next time.

Ireland's Great Land-Owners.

The following figures in regard to the ownership of Irish land are interesting: One man owns 170,000 acres; three men own 100,000 acres each; fourteen men, 50,000 acres each; ninety men, 20,000 acres each; and 452 men, 5,000 acres each. The Association of Salters own 19,000 acres; the Drapers, 27,000 acres; the Merchants, 21,000 acres; the Skinners, 24,000 acres; the Fishmongers, 20,000 acres; the Ironmongers, 10,000, and the Grocers, 10,000 acres. It is not, therefore, any exaggeration to say that, of the £21,000,000 which is annual Irish rental, at least £12,000,000 is spent out of the country; and where, as in the case of Ireland, the country is not wealthy, and has no other industry except agriculture, this state of things, until remedied, will be productive of want and misery.—London Truth.

THE OLD BROWN SCHOOL HOUSE.

BY THE REV. DWIGHT WILLIAMS.

In memory's hall hangs the picture,
And, years of sad cares are between,
It hangs with a mournful pleasure,
And well do I love it, I ween.
It stood on a bleak country corner,
But boyhood's young days made it warm;
It glowed in the sunshine of summer;
Twas cheerful in winter and storm.

There were the sports of the noontime,
When winter winds frolicked with snow;
We laughed at the freaks of the storm-king
And shouted him on, all aglow.
We dabbed at his beautiful sculpture,
Regardless of all its array;
We plunged in the feathery snow-drifts
And sported the winter away.

We sat on the old-fashioned benches,
Bespoiled with our pencil and knife;
We thought of the opening future,
And dreamed of our manhood's estate.
O, days of my boyhood, I bless ye,
While looking from life's busy jostling;
The treasures are lingering with me
I gathered in life's early time.

O, still to that lone country corner
Turns my heart, in weariness yet,
Where, leading my gentle young sisters,
With youthful companions I met.
I cast a fond glance o'er the meadow
The hills just behind it I see;
Away in the charm of the distance,
Old schoolhouse, a blessing on thee!

ONE DEBT'S PAYMENT.

It was the dusk of evening, and night's shadows were quickly gathering in the little German village through whose outskirts two lovers strolled.

They had left behind them the cottages, and had wandered off among the green fields and under the shade of the trees, behind which the sun had almost sunk to rest.

It was an old story, the story of their loving. They had been betrothed since the girl was 14. It was well-nigh five years now, and on her 19th birthday they were to be married.

She was an orphan, and her snug dowry, lying so safely nestled away in the village bank, she had accumulated by the labor of her own hands. But a shade was on her lover's face to-night, and even in the shadow her quick eye discerned it.

"Sing to me, Hans," she whispered, knowing that in song Hans Werter forgot all else.

After a moment's silence, he obeyed her, and the sleepy birds woke in their nests and almost indignantly drew their heads from beneath the soft shelter of their wing, to listen to this strange, wonderful rival to the sweetness of their notes. The air was filled with the exquisite melody. It rang full and clear and sweet. It sank down to the violets, as they stirred in the listening wind, then scared to the stars.

Poor little Marguerite! Hans' music always brought the moisture to her blue eyes, but to-night it seemed filled with something she had never heard before, and her little hands were tightly interlaced, and her red lips parted in a sort of painful ecstasy.

But at the close she was all unprepared to see him end the last note in a dry sob, then fling himself down on the sward and bury his face in his hands.

"Hans, what is it?" she cried, sinking herself down beside him, and trying to raise his head upon her breast.

Was he weeping? She had never in all these years seen him thus moved. His powerful frame seemed shaken to its innermost center by the torrent of emotion that swept over it.

Almost rudely, in his unconsciousness to all but his own suffering, he repulsed her, only the next moment to be filled with remorse.

Conquering himself by a mighty effort, he drew her to him with gentle force.

"Forgive me, dear," he said, softly, "but never ask me to sing again, Marguerite. It only teaches me what I might have been, and what I am. Think what it would be if I had the money to reach Italy! I could have the world at my feet, Marguerite—I could be great and famous. I know it—I feel it. But I am chained here, tending my herds and feeding my cattle, powerless to break this chain. I need the money—so much—and I have so little. Though I sold all I have in the world, it would not bring me to my journey's end. No, no! I must give it all up; but never—never ask me to sing again.

The girl answered him nothing, as she stroked the hot brow with the little, cool hand, which, all browned and hardened as it was, fell very softly, very lovingly.

In her eyes he was a King, this shepherd lad. Instinctively she knew that silence is oftentimes more healing than speech; and, beside, a wonderful, dazzling thought had crept into her own busy brain, and driven all lighter thought away.

Still silently they rose, and walked silently home. At the door of her little cottage, he stooped and kissed her on the brow, as they stood beneath the stars.

In two more months he was to share her cottage—the home left her by her dead parents—so they both had thought sacred an hour again. To-night, Marguerite knew differently.

How much would it bring, the sale of this humble little she'ter?

It was this problem which banished slumber through the long night hours. It was solved three days later, when the sum for its possession by strangers lay in her hands, and, added to it the nest-egg from the bank, made in the child's eyes a fortune.

What mattered it that she was beggared? It was for Hans' sake! It was now her turn to be silent, as, hand-in-hand, they walked, beneath the gold-studded sky.

She felt, for the first time, timid, almost afraid, in his presence. That she had performed an act of almost heroism, she never dreamed. He was a hero; she was but a little, humble maiden, whose prondest duty was to serve him.

"Hans," she said at last, very softly, "I have been thinking, dear, since the other night, and—and, Hans, we won't be married yet awhile. A wife would only pull you down, instead of helping you soar the birds, where you belong. I don't want you to think of me. I want you to go away and study to be a great singer!"

In the gloom, the man could see the pallor on the sweet face, as it grew reflected on his own.

"Are you mad, Marguerite?" he questioned, at last. "I've crushed the dream, child! Don't float it again before my fancy."

"You couldn't crush it, Hans, for it is no dream, but a very part of yourself, and just as the highest, noblest part! Nor is it madness, Hans. See here!" and she unloosed the string of a little bag she had tightly clutched in her trembling hands, and showed to his dazzled eyes the glittering gold pieces lying on a snug little pile of notes. "It's enough, Hans!" she said, in answer to his gaze of utter bewilderment. "It's more than what I heard you once say would let you be taught for a whole year. And it's yours, Hans—all yours."

And, as she spoke, she strove to thrust the bag within his grasp.

"Marguerite!"—she shrank from the sternness of his tone—"how did you get the gold?"

"Honestly!" she answered, proudly, "The gold was to have been my dowry; the notes—I—I sold the cottage for those."

"You did this for me, and you think so meanly of me as that I would accept such a sacrifice?"

His voice quivered as he spoke.

"Hans, I was to have been your wife," she whispered. "Who had the right, if not I? Oh, I shall be so proud—so proud, some day, when you come back for your little Marguerite and I shall be the wife of the great singer! They will point at me and say, 'Yes, he married this little nobody, this little Marguerite, but they say he love her,' and they will think it strange that you should love me from your great height. But you won't forget to do that, Hans—ever, ever—will you, my love?"

"Never, until my voice forgets its music. I would pray God to still it forever, could my heart prove so false. Something within me, Marguerite, conquers myself. It is hope springing within my breast. I will take your money, little one, a sacred debt. Wait for me two years, fraulein. Then I will return to give richest interest. I swear it, and I seal it with this kiss."

Hans had gone, and Marguerite was left alone. She lived now in one little room, high up many stairs—up which she toiled wearily in the evening's gloom. There were no more restful walks under the stars now. She might have had lovers, like other girls; but no—Hans must find her without reproach on his return. All day long, she toiled from early dawn, even for the humble shelter now here. Sometimes she was hungry, sometimes cold, but all mattered not to her. It was for Hans' sake.

The winter's icy breath but hastened the spring's blossoms, and their first fragrance would herald the incoming summer, which would make the year complete since Hans had left, and then there would only be another year to wait.

At long distances apart, letters came. Oh, how eagerly Marguerite spelled them out! She lived in them under her pillow by night, and they sank and fell with every pulsation of her heart by day. Labor grew lighter, when she got her loneliness, for they told her that step by step Hans was nearing his goal.

Then there came a long silence, when she heard nothing, and the child's figure grew thin and her cheeks pale, while every night she knelt, breathlessly up to her room, only to find the table vacant and that the postman had had no errand for her.

But one evening, when she had almost given up hope—when the great dread lest Hans should be ill, dying or dead remorselessly shadowed her pathway—the silent messenger smiled her a welcome. She burst into a passion of tears as she broke the seal. It seemed as though the joy must kill her.

But at last she unfolded the sheet, when something white and fluttering fell to the ground. She stooped to pick it up.

What did it mean? It was a little slip, with some figures in one corner. They represented the exact amount she had given Hans. Bewildered, she turned to the letter. Its words explained:

I pay you my debt. Think, my little love, what it cost me, yet I earned it—earned it, Marguerite, in the very night of my debut. I have sung, and people have listened. I looked about among all the faces—all the learned and beautiful women, with their eyes fixed upon me—but nothing inspired me. Then I thought of you, and, looking straight into space, I forget them all, darling. There was your sweet, pale face floating in the air, your blue eyes looking, not as theirs looked, but down into my soul, and I sang to you, darling—to you. The flowers rained at my feet. Great ladies tore the roses from their breasts; but I would have given them all, darling, for one little wild blossom your hand had plucked. They say I will be rich and famous. I cannot tell—the world is fickle. The village banker will cash your order. But you must be back the little home. I am coming for you soon, to bring you to a cage better worthy my mountain-bird.

Again and again Marguerite read and reread the precious words. What cared she for the money? It had made Hans great.

* * * * * *

"Going back to your native village—you, who have the world at your feet!" sighed one of Florence's most famous beauties, as she looked into the young singer's eyes.

Six months had passed since he had paid his debt to Marguerite, and still he lingered. He had spent thrice the amount since then on a trinket to clasp some fair lady's arm. Did he, in holding it so lightly, forget that once it had been a girl's all? Why, then, did the sigh the lady uttered find a response in his own breast?

"It is duty which calls me."

"Duty!" she murmured. "Are you sure it is not mistaken duty? All your life has changed, Herr Werter. If, in its early time, you pledged it to some rustic maiden, think—could she fill its measure now?"

The beauty's voice trembled. The cool softness of her flesh pressed lightly against his burning palm.

"And if I give her up," he said, "what then? You will be mine?"

But the "Yes" she uttered was hushed by the madness of his kisses.

And Marguerite watched and waited. He was coming, therefore he did not write.

"He is great now, Marguerite; he has conquered the world. Shall we not be worthy of him?"

It was the second anniversary of the day which was to bring Marguerite her lover back to her side, when she looked upon them as the golden sands beneath them which he turned her back upon them, while he storeton you, the couple said adieu, the wedding, when they burst into her room.

"He, ha!" they said, "did we not tell you so?" pointing, as they spoke, to the paragraph in the paper, which announced the betrothal of Herr Werter and the greatest beauty in all Florence.

"Leave me," she said at last, when they looked to see what she would do. "I wish to be alone."

But one of kinder heart, after some hours had passed, stole back into the darkened room.

The child lay tossing in delirious fever, and the physician, when called, shook his head.

The strain had been too great, he said. She must die.

On the third day after, as the watchers sat about the bed, a step sounded on the stairs. A man, pale and worn of dust of travel, burst impetuously into the room.

"Marguerite!" he exclaimed—"Marguerite!" Then he stopped and gathered the import of the scene before him.

"I did but falter," he cried, falling on his knees beside her bedside. "I came back, my wild German daisy, to tell you so. Oh! Marguerite, is it thus I pay my debt?"

Then, as though that voice must penetrate even the mists of fever, the blue eyes opened, a wonderful ecstatic light in their depths.

"Hans," she whispered—"Hans! Forgive me for the doubt which killed me!"

And with the words—a dagger-thrust in his own remorseful heart—the spark of life flickered and went out.

Marguerite was dead. She who had lived for him died for him. They found the paper he had sent her among his letters.

"Thus had he redeemed his debt! An empty slip of paper, worthless to all, to return to him, but bearing the interest of a broken heart.

Phases of Washington Society.

It is the most striking characteristic of Washington life, the unwillingness, the apparent inability of men who have held office of any kind, even the highest, to have shared their honors, to go back to the comparative obscurity and privacy of their former homes. It is quite often true that men, tired of the turmoils of political strife, of the inadequate rewards of legislative and official drudgery, turn with a sense of relief toward the quiet law-office which years before they left, off amid the hills or on the plains, or to the lucrative personal business that may have suffered while they were national honors; but the wife! the daughters! the cousins and the aunts—the whole feminine phalanx—bears down on the man; and what is any man, beset, overpowered by women? but repeatedsay, "They give up dear, darling Washington!—its revels, its pleasures, its privileges, its powers—for a little dull country school, the sewing-circle, the home missionary society, or even the village literary society, for the humdrum round of Mrs. Smith, give up the multitudinous ring of the dear ten thousand, bearing with due humility the dull cant, the social and state gossip in Washington of social inferiority! Mudtown, with such sacrifices, never!" The result is, Washington is full of gray-haired men, who have stepped down from office, more or less lofty, to go into inconspicuous places, to earn a stipend and to stay in Washington.

Nicotine Poisoning.

A rather unusual case of poisoning by nicotine occurred in a Paris suburb. The victim, a man in the prime of life, had been cleaning his pipe with a clasp-knife; with this he accidentally cut one of his fingers subsequently, but as the wound was of a trivial nature he paid no heed to it. Five or six hours later, however, the cut finger grew painful and became much inflamed. The patient had to bake himself to bed. Medical assistance was called, and ordinary remedies proved ineffectual. The sick man, questioned as to the manner in which he cut himself, explained the use to which the pocket-knife had been applied, adding that he had omitted to wipe it after cleaning the pipe. The case was now understood, and the patient's state becoming alarming, he was conveyed to the hospital. There the doctors decided amputation of the arm to be the only hope of saving the patient's life, and this was immediately done.

Charles Nelson, Esq., Proprietor Nelson House, speaking to us recently, observed: I suffered so much with Rheumatism that my arm whitened, and physicians could not help me. I was in despair of my life, when some one advised me to try St. Jacobs Oil. I did so, and as if by magic, I was instantly relieved, and, by, and, continued use of the Oil entirely cured. I thank heaven for having used this wonderful remedy, for it saved my life. It also cured my wife.

Disorders which Affect the Kidneys

Are among the most formidable known. Diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel and other complaints of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely medication. A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has ever been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their vigor and secretive power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of rendering the blood less impurious which it is the peculiar office of those organs to scientific and pass off. The Bitters is also a purifier and strengthener of the bowels, an invigorant of the stomach, and a matchless remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm.

IT is said that a Matanzas company, owning the Bay of Nipe, in Cuba, has found in Paris capitalists ready to furnish 15,000,000 francs for colonizing that territory, which contains about six leagues of rich soil.

TRADE MARK.

Is a sovereign remedy for all forms of Liver and Stomach troubles, and is the ONLY SAFE and ABSOLUTE cure for Malaria in its various types.

Dr. Holman's Pad is a genuine and radical remedy, WITHOUT TAKING MEDICINE.

It was the FIRST article of the kind that was introduced to the public generally. It was the ORIGINAL PAD, and was devised by DR. HOLMAN alone.

He struck out from the beaten path and made a NEW WAY. No sooner had he received the undertaking a CERTAINTY than the IMITATORS and PIRATES who hang to and infest ever successful enterprise, started up and have since followed in his footsteps as closely as the law will tolerate.

Against these Dr. HOLMAN gives SPECIAL WARNING. Not only do they FAIL TO CURE, but in disappointing the purchaser they bring contempt upon the principle of a Remedy Cure. Dr. Holman's Pad is the GENUINE and ONLY TRUE EXPONENT.

Every imitation or counterfeit is a confession of the substantial worth of the genuine article. A poor one is never copied.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

(This engraving represents the Lungs in a healthy condition.)

WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY.

DR. W. S. HOBAN, M. D., of Logan Co., Ohio, writes that "Allen's Lung Balsam gives perfect satisfaction in every case within my knowledge. Having confidence in it I freely use it in my daily practice and wish unbounded success."

DR. FLETCHER, of Lexington, Missouri, says: "I recommend your "Balsam," in preference to any other medicine for coughs and colds."

DR. J. R. TURNER, of Montgomery, Ala., a practising physician of twenty-five years, writes, "It is the best preparation for Consumption in the world."

For all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Pulmonary Organs, it will be found a most excellent Remedy.

As an Expectorant it Has no Equal.

It Contains no Opium in any Form.

THE BEST FIELD —FOR— EMIGRANTS

AN IMMENSE AREA OF RAILROAD AND GOVERNMENT LANDS. OF GREAT FERTILITY, WITHIN THE REACH OF PERMANENT MARKETS, IS NOW OFFERED AT LOW PRICES, and offered for sale in EASTERN OREGON and EASTERN WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

These lands form part of the great GRAIN BELT of the Pacific Slope, and are within an average distance of only 30 miles from Portland, where steamships and sailing vessels are constantly loaded FOR ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

GRAIN AT PORTLAND, OREGON, IS SOLD AT ALMOST THE SAME PRICE OBTAINED IN CHICAGO.

The early completion of the Northern Pacific R. R. is now assured, and guarantees to settlers cheap and rapid transportation and good markets both East and West. The opening of this new overland line to the Pacific will be the signal for a rush of settlers to the fertile valleys of the Columbia, Snake and Clearwater, the great Columbian and its principal tributaries, which will cause a rapid increase in the value of the lands now open to purchase and pre-emption. There is no better time than the present for a visit to the Columbia River region in the Immigration Season.

HAMLIN'S WIZARD OIL

THE GREAT MEDICAL WONDER.

The Best Medicine he ever Tried.

TO THE PUBLIC.—I conceive it to be a duty which I owe to the afflicted, to state that I have used "Hamlin's Wizard Oil" for the cure of chronic sick headache and Neuralgia, with which my wife has suffered for months, and also for Rheumatism in my shoulder. In both cases it acted like a charm. Indeed, the effect seemed to me and my family most wonderful. It effected a perfect cure in a few days. I cheerfully endorse all the properties my of it, and recommend all sufferers to try it. LIMON BUCK, Reading, Pa.

PEN AND PASTE.

THE stained glass alone in Cornelius Vanderbelt's house cost $70,000.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD has withdrawn all the New York nominations excepting Robertson's. Proud and haughty Roscoe's feathers droop.

A RUMOR was out that Hon. Carl Schurz had been offered the Presidency of the Northern Pacific Railroad, but this is contradicted on good authority.

SECRETARY WINDOM has informed the New York sugar importers that the government will appeal from the late decision of the court which compels the fixing of duties upon sugars upon a color test for purity instead of the polariscope. Under the color test, sugars that pay 4 1-2 cents duty would be rated at only 4 1-4, the color having been purposely darkened. The department will adhere to the polariscope test till the appeal has been decided.

IT is becoming common nowadays for the large newspapers to lease telegraph wires for their own special use, so that they will be able to obtain in the quickest time possible important news from a distance. The London Times is supplied with a number of short ones; the New York Tribune has a wire between New York and Washington, and the principal papers of Cincinnati have nine wires extending to Washington. Probably the longest wire yet controlled by any newspaper is the one recently leased by the Chicago Inter-Ocean, which connects its editorial rooms with its news bureau at Washington. This paper employs its own operators, and all messages over the wire are sent direct.

The Star Mail Route.

As the nefarious features of this gigantic swindle are gradually being unearthed, some of the democratic papers are inquiring why President Hayes did not take this matter in charge and expose the villainous proceeding during his administration. Another question equally pertinent is involved, viz: Why did not the democratic majority in Congress who had facts before them that have formed the basis for the action of the present administration, take steps to secure a reform of the great abuse? They certainly were not induced to stay their hands from any consideration of charity or affection for President Hayes' administration. They had as chairman of the Senate post-office committee, Maxey, of Texas, supported by Saulsbury, of Delaware, Pugh, of Alabama, Farley, of California, and Groom of Maryland; while the House committee comprised such democrats as Money, of Mississippi, chairman, with Cook, of Georgia, Evans, of South Carolina, Shelley, of Alabama, and Jones, of Texas, members. The facts of Brady's extravagance and the enormous increase of compensation to certain of the Star routes were before these committees, and they had it in their power to have secured a complete investigation and the disgrace and punishment of the thieves. Why they did not compel this is a matter for them to explain, but the probability is that if they were aware of the true state of affairs, there were such influences brought to bear upon them by members of the ring within their own party that they were constrained to hold their peace. Both democratic and republican members of congress appear to have sustained the extravagant Star mail appropriations, many of them innocently no doubt, having full confidence in the management of the department, and being influenced by the petitions and representations received through the manipulators of the ring from among their constituents, while there are doubtless other members who will find it very difficult to clear their skirts of culpability, especially if Brady should fulfill his threats to drag down others in his own ruin.

THE following iron-clad, copper-bottomed and no back-action form of note is going the rounds, and is thought to be one of R. J. Burdette's productions:

"$75. MARSHALTOWN, IA., Sep., 10, 1880.—After date, for value received, I promise to pay John Jones Smith, or order, $75, without relief from appraisement, stay, or execution laws, and in case suit is instituted for its collection, anything and everything in my possession can be levied upon and sold, including the last suit of clothes, the school books and food of the children, the coffin or coffins any of the family may be buried in, and in case that after every article is sold there remains anything due on the note I agree that the service of myself and family shall be sold until the demands of the note are satisfied. And I further agree that in case suit is instituted for its collection, to pay reasonable attorney fees, together with board bills, hack hire, saloon bills, and other miscellaneous expenses for himself and family and near relatives while suit is pending. And I further agree to live on corn bread and sorgum molasses from date, until demands of the note are satisfied with interest at the rate of 10 per cent. from date, payable annully.

ABRAM BROWN."

The New Bible.

W. W. Hartley, of the Post-office book store, has received sample pages of the revised new testament and history of its revision, which will be sold only by subscription, and is now prepared to receive orders for this very interesting work, which will be an exact reprint of the authorized additions of the University presses of England, and much superior to them or any other editions extant. It will contain a complete history of this revision movement, with the rules that governed it, the reasons for undertaking it, the advantages of it over that which produced the old version the talent that has been engaged upon it, sketches of the distinguished men who have made it, and all other items of interest regarding it necessary to determine every mind upon the question of its orthodoxy.

It will contain a summary of the facts concerning the origin and transmission of the new testament scriptures, with sketches of all the prominent versions of all ages and countries, especially of King James' version which is so widely accepted and so warmly loved.

It will give specimens of the several thousand errors which have crept into the text of the new testament, with a history of their origin, means of detection, correction, etc.

Everybody will, of course, have a copy of the revised new testament, if not for its specific use as the word of God, at least for the gratification of curiosity, and none can really afford to buy any other than this edition, which is the only edition which will embody in one volume the new version and all points of interest connecting it. The prices are extremely reasonable and within the reach of all: Fine English cloth, sprinkled edge, (600 pages,) only - - - - $1 50
Fine Arabesque binding, gilt edge, (600 pages,) only - - - - 2 00
French morocco, gilt edge, (600 pages,) only - - - - - - - - - - 3 50

Subscriptions will be received by Mr. Hartley or any of his assistants, at the post-office.

A little New Britain girl, thoroughly imbued with the manufacturing spirit of the town, answered her Sunday School teacher's question last Sunday by saying that He who was crucified "was hung on a cross between two manufacturers."

Senator Mahone is said to pass a good deal of his time in the Republican cloak-room. Democrats say that he changed his coat there. The readjustment don't suit. It gave the Democrats particular fits, at least.

I have a few Glazed Windows, Building Mouldings and Eve Gutters which I will sell at cost, less freight, to close them out. Come at once if you want a bargain.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

AN Encyclopædia in 20 vols., over 16,000 pages, 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopædia ever published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent in book publishing, map be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopædia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopædia in the field.

SPECIMEN VOLUMES in neither style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of postpaid price per volume.

SPECIAL DISCOUNTS to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.

Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:

I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one-half what it was a few years ago.
III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
FOO CHOO'S BALSAM OF SHARK'S OIL
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.
This Oil is extracted from a peculiar species of snaffish Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Cucharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 400 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address, at $1 per bottle.
Only Imported by HAVLOCK & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS FOR AMERICA. 1 Dey St., New York.
Be virtuous are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the testimonials are personally tested by both from experience and observation.
"Our good friend, the editor of the Review is one part and member of the country, it is probable that nine-tenths are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said "Write at once to Haycock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive in return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Mercantile Review, Sept. 25th, 1880.

A Lecture to Young Men
ON THE LOSS OF MANHOOD
A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M.D., author of the "Green Book" &c.
The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without the dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or medicines; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by a low, easy, inexpensive, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
