VOLUME V. BRAINERD, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1885. NUMBER 1.

EARTH TO EARTH.

The Remains of Vice President Hendricks Most Impressively Entombed at Indianapolis.

Many Thousands of People from Abroad Witness the Last Solemn Rites.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 1.—The mortal remains of Thomas A. Hendricks, the fifth vice-president of the United States, lay in Tarkington's store of clothing, were conveyed to the home of his family. The event was unusual memorable in many respects, by the greatest and most silent spectators of the funeral cortege. The weather was ideal for such a procession as this funeral was, the sun shining brightly, and a thick atmosphere hanging like a pall over the city. The streets and sidewalks were crowded to overflowing with people, and the procession was a most imposing one. The military escort, which was composed of the Indianapolis Light Artillery, Battery A, Fifth United States artillery, Battery B, Fifth United States artillery, Battery C, Fifth United States Brainerd Dispatch.

Issued every Friday morning at Brainerd, Minn. Terms $1.50 per year in ADVANCE.

N. H. Ingersoll, } Editors and Proprietors.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF CROW WING, CASS, and Itasca counties

Five on Monday destroyed $60,000 worth of property in Livingston, M. T.

Something over 100,000 bushels of wheat have been marketed this season at Hawley.

There will be no extra session of the legislature this winter. Gov. Hubbard says the state can't stand the expense without making a loan.

Strange as it may seem, the Pioneer Press commends President Cleveland's decision not to attend the Hendrick's funeral, and the Globe condemns it as an insult to the people.

The new dam and flouring mill belonging to the Long Lake Milling company at Hubbard went out Tuesday at 8 o'clock. A leak was discovered in the dam, and dispite the efforts made to save the mill, everything went down stream. The machinery had just arrived and had been temporarily placed in the building. The loss is estimated from $8,000 to $10,000.

About dusk on the evening of Dec. 1 at Fargo, a handsomely dressed and very ladylike girl about 20 years of age went to the Russell hotel on Broadway, with an infant some 10 days old, called for a room, left the baby in the parlor when she went down to supper and then slipped off, probably going on a train, absconding the child, which is believed to be of high toned parentage. It is a bright healthy child.

At a convention of citizens of Norman county held at Ada Tuesday relative to the transfer of the Red Lake, Mille Lacs, Leech Lake and Winnebagoshish Indians to the White Earth reservation, so that the pine on those first named could be cut, a memorial to congress was unanimously adopted protesting against such transfer and asking the government to purchase such part of the lands as are good for agricultural purposes which the Indians wish to sell.

The land sales of the Northern Pacific road for the month of November show a gratifying increase over those of the same month last year. They amounted to 25,874 acres, netted $97,520 against 14,380 acres for $70,000 for November of 1884. The sales of last month were divided as follows:

Minnesota and Dakota	6,473
Montana	2,977
Washington and Oregon	11,325
Total	33,883

The report in the St. Paul Globe that $1,000 had been raised by the saloon keepers and sporting men of Wadena for the prosecution of John Walton the minister charged with rape on a little girl is certainly without foundation. Every business man of the place, we care not who it is, have their own interests at stake and not one of very apt to put up $1,000 for the prosecution of such a man—Wadena Tribune.

From one of the most experienced Rum river lumbermen, the Anoka Herald has secured a very carefully prepared estimate of the amount of logs to be cut this winter on Rum river. The timber that will be cut this winter is all on "long roads" and will have to be hauled on an average of four miles part being as far as seven and a half miles. The average cost of cutting and hauling to the river will be about $4 per thousand. It will cost about another dollar per thousand to drive the logs to the Anoka boom. These logs when landed represent a value of $400,000, and when manufactured into lumber about $725,000 more. To cut and haul these logs about 600 men, 300 horses and 250 oxen will be employed. Wages will be about the same as last year, ranging about $26 per month for men, $20 for a pair of horses and $10 for a pair of oxen.

Supreme Disgust.

Young Hole-in-the-Day's application here for a place at West Point, says Carp in the Cleveland Leader, brought out the following story, which is told me by a retired army officer who was formerly employed in the great northwest. The general said: "It was away back in the fifties when I knew the chief of the Chippewas very well. He was a short, weazened up old man, with an ugly temper and a wonderful power of satire. He was one of the most accomplished orators I have ever known. I have listened to him for hours and while he was addressing a council of Indian chiefs, though I did not understand a word he was saying, his facial expression surpassed that of Tom Corwin, and he could hold a crowd of Indians for days. His control he spoke upon occasion too, but he did not scruple to show his disgust when displeased. One day I was sitting talking to Gov. Gorman and Chief Hole-in-the-day in a hotel at St. Paul. Hole-in-the-day was dressed in citizen's clothes and a richly colored Indian blanket. While we were talking a tall, fine looking man with military bearing came up, and Gov. Gorman introduced him to Hole-in-the-day as General Sanborn of New York. Chief Hole-in-the-Day bowed like a dilletante, and a smile of pleasure shot over the wrinkled features as he seized Sanborn's hand. As he did so he said: Ah! Gen. Sanborn! I am always glad to meet a warrior, and by the way, general, in what war did you serve?"

"I have never been in the war," was Gen. Sanborn's reply; 'but I am major general in the New York militia.'

"A look of supreme disgust came across the Indian Chief's face. He drew his blanket around him as though he would wrap himself away from all human kind, and looking up and down the big form of General Sanborn, he ejaculated in contemptuous tones, 'Militia general; oh, pshaw!' and with that he stalked away.

Charles d' Autremont jr. of Duluth, attorney of St. Louis county, writes the attorney general, for the benefit, seeking pay for the hanging of John Wesienen, and urging that if a county was put to the expense it would have a tendency to prevent a jury from condemning a man, and that a sheriff, knowing he was to receive no pay, would be liable to let a condemned man escape. The attorney general replies that there is no appropriation made by the state for such payment, and that heretofore all such expenses have been met by the county.

Swallowed Her Teeth.

Mary La France, a Lockhart woman, had a nightmare on Monday night last, during which she thought her mother was a pin cushion of a needle and a camel was trying to get through. During the melee she swallowed an upper set of false teeth of the people in the room, thought her doom was sealed sure enough. Dr. F. H. Stuart was called post haste and when he arrived the woman was on the verge of death. A hasty glance showed him what was wanted, and before you could count ten he had his case unstrapped, his sleeves rolled up and a knife in the poor woman's throat. This surgical operation is called "tracheotomy" and is considered a very difficult and dangerous performance. This case is a particularly dangerous one. Ordinarily such large obstructions stick in the throat, but this plate was found to have worked itself much lower down, and it was necessary to open the neck just above the collar bone. This operation was successful, and the woman is to day as well as ever, save the soreness of the cut in the throat. These cases occur very often as we are informed, and about nine cases out of every ten are strangled by the operation.—Ada Journal.

"GOING HOME."

"Will you give us lodging to-night?" she asked the farmer, who was standing in his front yard. "Me and little Emily has come a right smart way since daylight."

"Where are you goin'?"

"I mustn't tell that," she said in a low voice.

James Lee looked at her pale face and trembling limbs. "I had an old mother myself; she went to heaven last year, and for her sake, mother, you're more than welcome to a meal and bed in my house. But what are your folks thinkin' about that they let the baby go wanderin' about the country?"

"My folks?" she repeated. "Why, they're all gone. The last was Sam, Emily's father. When he went to California he said, 'Mother, I'll be back in a year or I won't be back.' He's been gone three year, so of course he's gone, with Mary and Jane and Jacob. All my children is there, you see."

The restless look wandered about, and her thin fingers twisted together nervously.

Good Mrs. Lee was as unsuccessful in finding out anything about their guest as her husband had been. The poor old woman answered all questions freely save those which touched on her destination, but they seemed to excite and distress her.

"Don't you talk about your child dyin', honey," she said, "but dyin' and dead means eternal life. She's a-waitin' for you and me. I'll get them a rest. I'll give her a message for you. I won't forget it," and the bright happy look came back. "You've been good to me and I'll not forget it."

Every now and then some of these thoughts came upon the woman and she seemed lost to all consciousness of her surroundings. When little Emily looked at her side for her evening prayer, she said, solemnly:

"Pray, God, dearie, we may soon get home."

The old woman looked at her with vague trouble in her eyes. She was trying to find some clue to something in her mind which evaded her.

The next morning, after an early breakfast, the old woman in her gentle manner thanked her kind entertainers and prepared to go.

"It's coming on to snow or freeze, mother," said the farmer, as he walked to the gate with her. "You'd better stop here with us to-day. In fact," looking at the gray sky, "I think that's what you can let you go. I'll keep you until the weather clears."

"Oh, I know the way, it's straight ahead and no turnin' to left nor right. I couldn't miss the way." She took the child's hand and trembling in every limb, started off. But when she had gone a few rods the woman and Mr. Lee, who was watching her with troubled eyes.

"You've been so good to me," she said, "I'll tell you where I'm going. Send nobody and let me whisper in your ear. Honey, I'm going to my children —there!" And then in pursuance of her idea to turn neither to left or right, she traveled straight before her on the long unused road, which led them into thorn bushes, and at last into a dreary wood.

"There isn't a mile-post nor signboard, dearie," the old woman muttered; "but I'm sure to be on the right road. I reckon this is the 'Valley of the Shadow,' and he promised to be with me."

"I don't see nobody," the child said, shivering. "And, oh, grannie, I'm so cold!"

"Come, let's sit under this tree, dearie, and I'll wrap you up till you get warm. No, you don't see nobody, and I can't see neither."

"I'm so cold, grannie," murmured the child.

"Can you walk on, dearie?" she said.

"No," sobbed the child, "my feet hurt, and I'm so tired. Let me get into your lap, grannie, and go to sleep."

Tenderly the old woman wrapped the child in her own cloak, leaving herself exposed to the cold, which was increasing, and chafed her cold hands, until the little one fell into a profound sleep. "She always heard me," she muttered, "it's darker and more stormy the hour before you get there. Perhaps we're very near now, and when the sun shines we'll see it.

"I see the paper was adopt. Through cloud and storm of comin' night. But hope is clear and faith's strong."

Two men found her late that afternoon. One was Mr. Lee, the other a tall, middle-aged man with a care-worn face.

"My God! here she is," said the farmer, "and we lost so much precious time going down the other road."

The other threw his arms around the insensible form, and the movement awakened the child, who opened her eyes and stared at him. But he saw nothing but the face that rested on his bosom.

"Speak to me, mother," he cried. "I've come back to you, your own Tom."

Her eyelids quivered, and with a deep sigh she opened her eyes. "It's my Tom," she cried, in tones of ecstacy. "And I've prayed the last!" Oh! there they all are. I'm there at last." Yes, she was there at last. She had gone home.—Youth's Companion.

There are 50,000 skating-rinks in this country. On an average they open six falls a day in each rink, this makes a total of 30,000 falls a day throughout the country, or 1,800,000 falls a week. In the face of this showing the fall of Adam's suicides into insignificance. But the iron American will by no means dismayed by these statistics. On the contrary, he exclaims: "O, my country, with all thy falls I love thee still!"—Boston Courier.

Love and Death.

Life may hold seventeen years; I would not die;
For he might come with smiles upon his lips
And I should greet him with a joyous cry,
Surprised and touched to find me in his arms.
And I should greet him with a joyous cry,
Surprised and touched to find me in his arms.
Death! for the sake of Love come back at last,
Love, Death has not been kind to you and me.

Child, Fate has not been kind to you and me!
I'm older now; still not one penny richer;
Love is richer; richer I look'd in vain.
The hopes of what I knew could never be.
Often I've cursed you in my sleepless pain,
Come again to me, O kind and careless one,
For life has not been kind to you and me.

And Death is coming fast; will he be kind?
Love, have you never known one bitter hour?
Never been sad with tender, vague regret?
Or that past happy summer when we met,
When first I knew my beauty—fatal power—
Had crushed your roaming fancy? What a dower
Of woe in sadness from despair and pain,
And wrong and loss to kill all else but—

Child, listen to me; Love is worse than Death;
Death takes all, but Love with a cruel front and bosom
And hatred to the worthless hurt to set us free.
It takes the crown from life; the worry freeds
Must labor on until Death brings relief.
And hints out all the weariness and grief.
Ah! Love is cruel; merciful is Death.

—Chamber's Journal.

SANDY'S DIAMOND.

"Now, Sandy, it's your turn; why don't you read? Have you lost the place?"

Sandy straightened the tails of his ragged coat with an air of conscious virtue; he was not given to losing his place, whatever the others might be. "Now, Judas said this, and teaches he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and had the bag," he read out in a shrill treble. "It's an awful pity they let him keep the bag, then," he added, by way of comment.

"Maybe they'd no law to hev was a thief," suggested his neighbor, who was much below Sandy's chief friend, "and maybe you wad have helped yourself a bit now and again, Sandy, if you'd had the chance."

"Speak for yoursel, Sam Knox," was Sandy's lofty retort. "I'm no thief, at any rate."

"Boys, attend to the lesson," interrupted the teacher, and the debate had perforce to be postponed for the present.

Sandy marched home after school, swelling with intelligent pride, utterly declining Sam's usual escort. Decidedly, the man was to be understood that he was not to disparage his superiors in public with impunity.

The occasion was long in days, and might have lasted much longer but for a startling adventure that befell Sandy. Trudging round the dock at the edge of dusk one evening, his foot struck against something—something that glittered in the dim light. "Just a bit of glass," he said to himself, turning it over with the toe of his boot, and then he dropped his burden with a crash and swooped down upon his "find."

It was a heavy, dull set tarnished with mud, but neither crushed nor broken, and the "bit of glass" was the stone.

He rolled it up carefully with the treasure-trove of the morning that even his mother, worthy woman, did not know of, shouldered his package and delivered it at the door looking round, at the end of the quay, sturdily argued out the question of an additional penny on account of it as an "find," the child, and got it, and then he took himself to a solitary corner of the dock-wall and sat down behind a sugar cask to consider matters.

He had heard of rings being worth hundreds of pounds, and if this was worth but one, or even, to be safer still, fifty-one. The tide rippled in below his feet unheeded, the long line of gas-lamps twinkled like yellow stars in the black, restless sea.

For two whole days he carried the secret alone, then its responsibility became too heavy, and, tacitly ignoring the difference he waited on the quay one dinner-hour for Sam Knox.

He showed him the ring and told him how he became possessed of it.

"How much d'ye think it 'll get for it?" he asked, deferring to Sam's judgment for once. He was much older, and might reasonably be supposed to have some little experience in valuables—other people's if not his own.

"I mind of hearing a man say once that he gave £20 for one not near as big as that; but you'll not get as much, for I'm going to believe you didn't steal it!"

"Steal it!" echoed Sandy, in angry dismay.

"Ay, but you've got to make folks believe you're honest, and who are you going to get to buy it?"

"I thought you might ken of some dealer," faltered Sandy, rather crestfallen.

"Well, I ken of one or two; I'll look out and let you know."

And then the conference broke up, and the two went back to their parts.

Sam pondered the matter over as he lounged about the docks that day. Steady work was not his strong point, and the diamond had taken powerful hold of his imagination. He did not with all his heart it had been his luck instead of Sandy's to have found it; he felt he could have made far better use of it. "If there was any hope of his sharing it with a fellow it would be different, but he'll just keep every penny to himself. Serve him right if he went and lost it again."

Over and over that reflection crept up. Sandy had already strayed from the right path for the sake of the diamond. Sam was the next to fall a victim to its fascination.

He thought of it hour after hour, till it seemed as if he must have it, by fair means or foul, and he doubted fair means would avail little with a lad like Sandy.

Saturdays were busy days on the quays, and the next day both Sam and Sandy were hurrying backward and forward all long after dark. It was a gusty, stormy night, and as Sandy went down one of the gangways on his last journey the slimy feet of the sodden lurch that sent him and his packages flying across the dock; worse still, out rolled the contents of his pockets, and before Sandy had recovered his feet his sister's scanty sense of the value of paper shrouding the precious ring was lodged inside Sam's waistcoat. He picked himself up, then stumbled just under the gangway, and lost no time in availing himself of the unlooked-for chance.

It was all the work of a minute. Sandy gathered up his parcels and went back to shore without observing his friend Sam fairly glowing with satisfaction at the beautiful way things had arranged themselves, quietly retired to the dock wall to congratulate himself at leisure. No other parcels packages to drag up and down those steep bridges, no more supperless nights and breakfastless mornings. Sandy had built no taller castle around that diamond than he was building now.

"Sam, Sam!" broke in a pitiful voice. "I've been looking everywhere for you. I've lost my diamond."

"Your diamond, what?" cried Sam, with incredulous stare that reflected credit on his powers of dissimulation.

"Lost it—in that hour, and she's away now, and I'll never get it back. It's hard."

Sandy put his head down on the iron rail and groaned aloud in bitter disappointment.

Sam looked on in silence; he was naturally not a hard-hearted lad, and for a moment the impulse to "own up" to give the ring back; the feel of his empty pockets brought back more prudential considerations.

"After all, it's only what he did himself," he argued. "He found it and kept it, and that's what I'm doing."

He made one or two ineffective attempts to console poor, miserable Sandy, and got himself away as speedily as practicable into a back street, where dwells a kind of money-lending and general exchange and barter establishment for the benefit of sailors and emigrants. Saturday night was far advanced, and, if he (Sam) meant to reap any immediate benefits from his possession it was necessary to come to time.

He slipped softly in and addressed himself to the proprietor:

"I picked up something in the dock to-day and was like to ken the worth of it, but I never to parry with it."

"What is it?" demanded the man, bringing.

"It's a ring—a diamond one," answered Sam, speaking under his breath.

"Where is it?"

Sam slowly unfolded the wrappers and laid it, with a sort of gasp, in the man's dingy palm. He held it between the gas-light: Sam watched it with eagle eyes. "A nice thing to have now and given that away again," he said to himself.

The German looked at the treasure under the gas-jet for a moment, and then turned it with his fingers; then he threw it down on the counter with a short laugh.

"Diamonds, indeed! a bit of glass."

"It's not!" ejaculated Sam, with dry lips. "Give me back my property."

The man knocked it smartly against the iron scales. Alas! the unfortunate diamond vanished many likes dusty powder.

"But the ring—that's gold!" cried Sam in despair. It was the one last forlorn hope.

"Take it away; no one would give you six-pence for it."

Sam picked it up without a word. When he got outside he flung it into the nearest gutter. Was it for this he had shouted Sandy, and made himself afraid to meet him—for this? Why couldn't he have left him to find out the miserable cheat for himself? It was the very first time he had ever played a friend a shabby trick, and in wrath and bitterness of spirit Sam registered a solemn resolution that it should be the last.

The night Sandy's woe-begone countenance when they met at the school next morning also helped to embitter Sam. Sandy was a kind, unsinking heart, that he would never be able to explain to him how little cause for sadness they really had. Two weeks and months—even years—he might look for Sam to the full lamentations over that unparalleled loss.

They had the conclusion of the Judas and Iscariot lesson ensuing. The lads wandered round the quay afterward almost in silence, each privately expending his own fashion.

"If I had taken that diamond to the station," soberly remarked Sandy, breaking into a long pause, "I might —I might have got taree or four pounds for it instead of nothing. It served me right. I'm thinking maybe there was some allowance to be made for Judas. After all, riches are awful snare—nobody knows till they get them."

"They are," ejaculated Sam, with great fervor. "There's no depending on them, and I'm thinking we'll be just as well without any."

"Ah, but you never had a diamond," retorted Sandy, with a sudden burst of sorrow for his lost treasure.

"No, I never had," was Sam's truthful answer.

Clock-Mending Tramps.

"All the old days are played out and it takes an active life to live like we used to. I really believe the chickens and daylighters than they did in the good old days. Oh times is getting awful dull! The fellow retired to a cave of gloom, metaphorically speaking, as he made way to the flood of memories of the time before tramp business had been prostated by overproduction. "A man has to either steal or work some fake, like mending umbrellas or mending china—that's about as handy as any.

"Oh, there ain't much to it. All a man's got to carry is some samples, which must be straight, and some brass screws, and a screw driver, and something to hold the dishes together till the man gets out of the neighborhood. Then he sets up the dishes on his bench and tell 'em they must let 'em alone at least twenty-four hours to dry, which gives you time to skip. I'm sort of a glue water cent and I cemented my dishes with molasses, which I got out of a farmer's pantry. It was mighty much the same.

"Clock-mending is another good fake, only it has been worked to death. One of us goes ahead and tinkers up the clocks, and he's followed by a man ticking it up with a feather, and setting it with ile or lard or something. I always, when I'm on the road, carry a bo constrictor ile or yak ile for the clocks. It's coal ile or lard, just as it happens. When the clock is put together if I don't know exactly where the pendulum ought to hang I just know how, and if there is any overflow of wheels with holes to put 'em in as is usually the case I just quietly slip 'em into my pocket. I then hand-spike the hands ahead a half hour and tell the folks it is unhealthy to turn them back and that they had better wait until the time comes pointed by the clock before they start running. This saves disarrangin' the innards, I have found, and gives the clock time to and I goes if the clock don't."—Erie Dispatch.

She Will Be His Mother-in-Law.

There is a young man in this city, a good looking young fellow, who has a sweetheart who lives about three miles, and he spends two evenings each week in her society. He did last night, and he stayed to the usual hour, and, as he passed out the front door, he discovered that it was moonlight and dark. He did not relish the idea of driving alone through the gloomy night, and finally about a quarter of an hour after he left the house he returned and got an invitation to remain, but it was not for long. Both the young man was equal to the emergency. Going down the steps he artfully contrived to slip and fall upon the ground. The ruse worked admirably. The girl screamed, the men folks jumped out of bed and carried the young man tenderly into the house. His horse was put up and he was assisted to undress and deposited in the spare bedroom. He had hardly begun to chuckle over the success when the girl's mother put in an appearance, armed with a mustard plaster a foot square and ten-horse power found. The plaster was applied, proceeded to clap on the small of the young man's back, where he had intimated he would have the pains in the frame. For two mortal hours that young man lay by the bed, and was not satisfied till she believed that he would give a blister an inch deep. The young man is now a reformed liar.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

D. 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "C" of mortgages on page 145, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of three hundred and twenty-one and 40-100 dollars, and interest from the 8th day of December, A. D. 1884, besides the costs and disbursements of foreclosure, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and the power of sale contained in said mortgage having become operative by reason of such default, and the said mortgage having been duly assigned by said Andrew Nelson to Albert C. Cobb, by assignment bearing date on the 8th day of December, A. D. 1884, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds aforesaid on the 9th day of December, A. D. 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "C" of mortgages on page 146, which said assignment is now owned and held by the said Albert C. Cobb, and no proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to foreclose said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described as all that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the county of Crow Wing, state of Minnesota, and known and described as the south half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-six (26) and all of section twenty-seven (27) and all of section thirty-four (34) all in township one hundred and twenty (120) north of range twenty-four (24) west of the fourth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof, with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the court house in the village of Brainerd, in the county of Crow Wing, state of Minnesota, on Monday, the 14th day of December, A. D. 1885, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest thereon and costs and disbursements of foreclosure and sale, including the attorney's fee as stipulated in said mortgage, if any be allowed by law.

Dated October 8th, A. D. 1885.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Nelson, of Crow Wing, Minnesota, to Andrew Nelson, of the same place, dated the 8th day of December, A. D. 1884, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Crow Wing, Minnesota, on the 9th day of December, A. D. 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book "C" of mortgages on page 147, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of three hundred and twenty-one and 40-100 dollars, and interest from the 8th day of December, A. D. 1884, besides the costs and disbursements of foreclosure and sale, including the attorney's fee as stipulated in said mortgage, if any be allowed by law.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so by the said mortgage conveyed and intended to be sold, are the lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the county of Crow Wing, in the state of Minnesota, and known and described as the south half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-six (26) and all of section twenty-seven (27) and all of section thirty-four (34) all in township one hundred and twenty (120) north of range twenty-four (24) west of the fourth principal meridian, according to the government survey thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage and all the statutes in such case made and provided will be foreclosed by sale of the said premises described in the said mortgage at public auction, in front of the Court House in the City of Brainerd, in the county of Crow Wing, state of Minnesota, on Monday, the 14th day of December, A. D. 1885, at 10 o'clock a. m., to satisfy the sum secured by said mortgage and costs and ($320) attorneys' fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, together with the costs and charges of foreclosure.

The Bonds.

A special meeting of the council called by the mayor was held on Monday evening. The aldermen were all present except Graham, Dorde and Keene. The meeting was called for the purpose of taking final action in regard to the sale of the $10,000 in bonds, which are to be issued by the city. Several letters were read from parties desiring to bid for the bonds. For some reason it has been generally understood by S. A. Kean & Co. and also by the council generally that this firm should have said bonds at par when issued, but it seems that in the meantime other parties have been offering a premium for the same, and on motion of Aldermen Taylor and Howe the clerk was instructed to write S. A. Kean & Co. to that effect, and forward the communications from other parties to them, and if they would meet this offer they could have them, otherwise they would be advertised for sale. All the aldermen voted in the affirmative on the motion with the exception of Alderman Hemstead. This being all the business to come before the council it adjourned.

China and the Chinese.

On the evenings of Dec. 25th and 26th Tank Kee, the great Chinese lecturer will hold forth in this city under the auspices of the Congregational church. The first lecture will contain a description of the geography, population, language and literature of China and including a full description of the great wall, the grand canal, street scenes, etc. The lecturer will be in costume, and paintings of the various places of interest will be exhibited, together with many curiosities. The second lecture will contain a description of the penitentiaries, school system, laws, punishment and the army of China. The lecturer will appear in this lecture in full military costume and also full suit of armor, and maps of the eight different modes of punishment and torture, and other interesting subjects will be exhibited. The lectures will be interesting and instructive, and undoubtedly will be well patronized. Further particulars will be given later on.

The Library Association.

The reading room of the N. P. Employes Library Association is in running order and the organization is getting fairly under headway. Of course, as in all undertakings of this kind, at the outset the finances are low and in order to get started in good shape, cash is necessary. In view of this fact a committee has been appointed to procure the necessary funds, and this committee has decided on an entertainment to be given at the roller rink on the evening of January 1st, 1886. The matter is in the hands of a number of gentlemen who will do their utmost to make a success of it as they always do. After the association gets fairly underway the proceeds from membership will keep the institution running in fine shape. It is to be hoped that this entertainment will be liberally patronized.

Hartwick's Record in Duluth.

From the Duluth Tribune.

All the readers of the Tribune, and in fact almost every in Duluth, are probably acquainted with Chas M. Hartwick. That gentleman came here some time last spring to work the life insurance racket and stayed until some time in August, when circumstances forced him to change his base of operations to Superior. He was quite along in years, with grey hair and grey beard, which gave his naturally benign countenance an additional look of solemnity and sanctimoniousness. Of suave and pleasing manners and a plausible talker, he apparently did quite a business, and should have been able to pay his way. On the contrary, however, he ran up just as large a board bill at the Merchants as the proprietor would allow him to, and when kick out of that house went to the La Peri. He soon victimized Gierich in the same way, and having reached the end of his tether in Duluth went across to Superior, where he boarded with Kuykendall, and, if reports as true, defaulted on his bill as usual. Besides his board bills he owed other amounts in Duluth, one of them, at least, being over $60. Of late he has been operating in Brainerd, and has succeeded in getting himself in trouble there also.

A. V. Snyder sells boots and shoes the cheapest.

They Did the City.

Messrs. Fred S. Parker, S. P. Alderman, W. A. Fleming, Dr. Camp, Fred Stanley and W. S. McClenahan, of Brainerd spent Saturday and Sunday in St. Paul, the guests of Fire Commissioner C. N. Parker. While here partly on pleasure, the gentlemen came also to inspect certain public departments of St. Paul, with a view to modeling similar departments in Brainerd after them. Mr. Alderman, as president of Brainerd's fire board, will recommend, on his return to Brainerd, the purchase of piston engines for fire protection. Messrs. Camp and Fleming spent some time in the health department and will take back numberless monthly health reports to circulate there. The party was made up entirely of Brainerd capitalists, who are interested in the development of the blooded stock interests of Northern Minnesota.—Pioneer Press.

E. N. Donaldson of this city has a son at La Crosse, Wis., who amuses himself by allowing Dr. Frank Powell, mayor of that city, to shoot small corks off his head and nose. The most dangerous feat being in the shooting of first the ashes, then the fire and lastly the cigar, while the same is held in the mouth of the nervy youth. Some time the doctor's nerve will be unstrung and he will shoot the brains out of the young man's head.

The attorney general has sent out blanks for the report of the county attorneys of the state. The blanks have been prepared with a special reference to the new penal code, which goes into effect Jan. 1st, and attention is called to the fact unless reports are in by Jan. 10, the county auditor is prohibited from issuing to the delinquent attorney the warrant for his December salary.

Died.

FULTON.—In this city on Saturday, Nov. 28th, 1885, Mrs. Rebecca Fuller, aged 55 years.

The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Baptist church, the Rev. E. J. Brownson, officiating. The remains were laid to rest in Evergreen Cemetery.

Wants to See Her Pa.

Married.

GALLUP—McDOUGAL.—At the Merchants Hotel, St. Paul, by the Rev. E. E. Evans, on Wednesday, Dec. 2d, 1885, A. G. Gallup of this city, to Miss Ida McDougal, of Dover Center, Minn.

Both parties to the above contract are well known in this city, the bride being a sister of Mrs. Geo. Bondy, and spent the greater part of last summer in Brainerd. The groom has been a resident of Brainerd for some time and is known as a square, upright young man. The couple arrived in Brainerd on Wednesday and will remain here until the latter part of next week when they will go to N. P. Junction for the winter where Mr. Gallup has a contract for getting out timber to be used by the railroad company at the Duluth docks. The newly married couple are receiving the congratulations of a host of friends, and the DISPATCH extends wishes for long life and prosperity.

Mistletoe for Kissing Purposes.

No English lady considers her home decorations for Christmas complete, until a little sprig of Mistletoe, no matter how small, is hung over one of the doors on the inside of the house. Upon this day, "if a gentleman discovers a lady standing under the mistletoe, he has a right to kiss her.

If this ancient and honored custom becomes as popular in America as it has been for centuries in Europe, it will no largely due to the Emporia (Fla.) Gazette which, by the way is published in Volusia County, Florida, which is famous for its summery winters and orange groves; for the journal has prepared packages of mistletoe (a parasite and a native of Florida) which it will send to any address upon receipt of five two cent stamps to cover postage, etc. The Gazette has published a "Florida Catechism" that gives full and accurate information upon all subjects of interest to tourists or settlers, which it will mail to any applicant with the mistletoe.

Little Falls Items.

From the Transcript.

Max Nickelsnaw is pounding around on the rink floors again and trying to deceive people into believing that he is a fast roller skater.

J. C. Flynn has let a contract to a Brainerd man named Peterson to deliver 1,000 cords of wood, which Flynn has contracted, to deliver to the railroad company.

Gil Hanson of Fergus Falls will skid 2,000,000 feet of logs for N. P. Clark, in the pineries on Platt river this winter. His camp will be about twenty five miles from Little Falls, and not far from the old Tribby camp. Hanson's contractor will haul the logs to the bank of the stream.

Jack DeGregg of Brainerd, of McNaughton & DeGregg, general blacksmiths, was in town yesterday for the purpose of getting some oak timber to be used in building logging sleds; He says he is doing a big business these days, a large force of men being employed in his shops.

On Wednesday of this week a row occurred at Gray Eagle about twenty-five miles west of this place on the Little Falls and Dakota, in which one man was killed and another wounded. Only a few particulars have reached us, and no names. It seems that the two men made an attack on the third, and the latter in defense shot them both with a revolver. He immediately went to Sauk Centre and gave himself up to officers.

Overcoats! Overcoats! Overcoats! Moving, Melting, Disappearing. The price does it. That men's $3 wool coat is patially responsible for it. If you wish to be in at the finish, hasten to Day & Meagher's.

The Box Car Murder.

Last Sunday morning the body of a man who had been murdered was found in a N. P. car of wheat at Duluth. The man's head had been mashed in with a coupling pin, and his pockets were turned wrong side out showing conclusively that the object of the murder was to obtain what money the man might have. A further investigation showed that the man had an inside pocket in his overcoats and in that pocket was $465 in bills. Nothing to identify the man could be found, although a letter addressed to Mrs. Burke, at Leonard, D. T. was found in the car signed by S. L. Platt. The car passed through Brainerd on the night before the murder was discovered, and was rescaled here, it having been discovered that the same had been broken. No further clue to the murder has been unearthed, and it still remains as much of a mystery as it did a week ago.

A VOLCANO THEORY.

Fargo Dak., Special Telegram—In regard to the man found murdered in Duluth little new information could be discovered at Duluth to-day. The coroner reached here at 7 Saturday and left the same evening for Duluth. Its seals were not changed here, and were unbroken when it started east. The murder was committed between here and Brainerd and probably by a train employe who heard the man in the car where he concealed himself at Lisbon. The train man broke the fastenings and entered the car to eject the deadbeader, when the murder occurred.

Five on Monday destroyed $60,000 worth of property in Livingston, M. T.

Something over 100,000 bushels of wheat have been marketed this season at Hawley.

There will be no extra session of the legislature this winter. Gov. Hubbard says he can't stand Harper's Bazar.

"Alfred, I do wish you and Laura could be friends. You are both so dear to me!"

Miss Southwell's voice was a little tremulous. She was sitting on the stone, a slim, fragile-looking woman. Her face reminded you of a white rose that has lost its early freshness, but has a delicate loveliness lingering about it still. There, its lines indicated more sweetness than strength of character, but the expression was so good, so pure, you felt instinctively she was one to be loved and trusted.

In the fair-complexioned, handsome face of the young man beside her there was not one tell-tale line of weakness. The hazel eyes, looked down affectionately into his aunt's, but his voice, though good-humored, kept its decided ring as he replied:

"But, dear Aunt Letty, whit am to do? There's no getting along with Laura unless you give up to her in everything, and I'm not disposed to make myself a slave to the little lady."

"I fear we have petted and spoiled her among us—" Aunt Letty broke off with a sigh.

"Yes; that's just the trouble, aunty. You are so sweet-tempered you can't bear to find fault with anybody, and Uncle Arthur is just like you. Between you both, you've made a perfect little despot of Laura. She is not bad, for the girl is naturally a frank, generous, warm-hearted creature. But come, aunty, you ought to box my ears for an impertinent young puppy, as I am. I was always a great hand to preach, you know."

"Yes; but I'm afraid there's a great deal of truth in what you've said, Alfred. You won't let the foolish child drive you away?" in an anxious tone.

Alfred gave a good-humored laugh. "Aunty, do you think I take it so much to heart as that? No, no; Laura's little airs and impertinence rather amusing than otherwise. Only I hate to see her growing up into an unamiable woman—"

A sharp tap at the door interrupted him. Without waiting for an answer, his cousin pushed it open and marched in.

You could scarcely find a more beautiful little face than Laura's, and perhaps it looked all the prettier for the flush of anger that crimsoned it just then. She threw up her head with the air of a spoiled princess as she said, in a high, fretful tone:

"Aunt Letty, I've come to say I'm sorry I was cross to you this morning. I'm sure I'm very much ashamed of myself, and I hope you'll forgive me."

As she door happened to be ajar, sir, I had the pleasure of hearing your last sentence. I see you've added backbiting to your other amiable qualities. I think you might be a little better employed than in trying to set aunty against me, for I'm the same as an open book to her, you know."

Alfred's cheek reddened, but he said, having her with an unmoved front: "You were evidently welcome to hear every word. As for your insulting remark about my trying to set her on, I've an apology, though I've not the slightest expectation of receiving one."

The fine gentleman looked very wrathfully out, while Laura looked after him with a mixture of resentment and triumph.

"I've actually made his Highness angry. Well, that's something, anyway. It's so provoking, the cool, smiling way in which he'll sit and look at me when he's worked me up in a perfect rage."

"Laura!" said her aunt, with unwonted severity, "how can you treat your cousin so? I'm afraid what he says is too true, that we've spoiled you sadly, and he did right to tell you your good qualities, I'm sure. He thinks you are frank and generous and warm-hearted."

Something softer than anger sparkled in Laura's saucy black eyes for a moment, but forcing back the tell-tale drops, she flung her arms around Miss Southwell's neck. "You sweetest auntie, I'm so thankful you still don't uncle brought me up instead of a tyrant like Winfield Hilliby. Don't you call him my cousin; he's three degrees removed, I'm sure, and I won't own him for a relative. But enough of him; cheer up and get dressed as quick as you can, for you won't be ready to receive the company."

"You had better run and dress yourself, little lady; its more your company than mine."

"Dress!" Yes, I'll try and look my prettiest. Laura, as she spoke, skipped away, "and I'll flirt a little with Mr. Palmer, too. That Alfred despises me, I'll do it just to provoke him."

But in spite of this careless talk, the girl could not keep her heart from warming a little toward her cousin as she thought of his expressions of praise.

"Generous, warm-hearted!" she said half aloud. "Well, I'm glad he knows me that justice. But I don't care, I hate him. He's done nothing but contradict and scold me ever since he came into this house."

Laura's room was next Alfred's, and after she was completed that she could not help putting out her head to see if she could catch a glimpse of her enemy. Yes, he was pacing out and their eyes met. She vanished, but soon, screened, flourished a stick on which she had tied a piece of black silk.

"Mr. Hillier!" she called out.

"Miss Laura!" responded the young gentleman, with a smile of provoking coolness.

"Do you see this black flag?" waving it proudly. "This means war to the knife, from this hour between you and me."

"As you please," said Alfred, serenely. "But let us keep up at least the semblance of civilized warfare before others."

"Very good," said Laura, retiring with a final wave, while Alfred laughed quietly to himself.

"You are a child, and no mistake," he thought, contemplating his cousin patronizingly from his lofty summit of twenty-three years. "It would be comical if the black flag should be exchanged for a white one before I leave, young lady."

Early the next morning Laura stood in the garden waiting for her aunt. The horse was harnessed, waiting to take them to the village where Miss Southwell did all her marketing. She had been up for some weeks in the indoctrinate Laura into its mysteries, and the young lady proved herself an apt scholar.

The old-fashioned, pleasant house which Miss Southwell and her husband had occupied now some thirty years stood on a hill in the outskirts of the village. The grounds were tastefully laid out, the mountain air was delicious, and invigorating.

There could not be a more glorious morning than this, yet the expression of trouble on Laura's pretty face showed that her mood was not in harmony with the day.

"So provoking," she muttered, "that I should have lost my temper that way. But it was bad enough to have my ball conquered to the ends of the earth without his looking so pleased over it."

"Miss Laura looks—aw—like a rose, I'm sure," simpered her companion.

"Laura, you, Mr. Palmer," said Laura: "I always enjoy your compliments from the very originality."

Mr. Palmer looked immensely flattered. Alfred (inconsistent mortal!) felt not the slightest inclination to rebuke his cousin.

"Well, we must bid you good-morning, as our horses are pressing," he said, gathering up the reins.

"But, Laura, dear Laura!" cried Miss Higley, as they were driving off. "do let me speak one word to you!"

"Excuse me," said Laura, coldly, for the expression, "stinging little cockatrice," was still rankling in her mind.

My cousin George is coming in from New Jersey this afternoon. He can only spend one night with us, and if you're at home I will bring him in this evening."

"We shall be very happy to see him," said Laura, more graciously, for George was a favorite of hers. "Then we shall expect you this evening, and Mr. Palmer also if he feels disposed to call upon us."

"Yes, I feel otherwise!" asked Mr. Palmer, sentimentally; "at least so far as you are concerned."

"Drive on, Alfred, for pity's sake, or I shall scream!" whispered Laura.

Alfred, with a decided, though perfectly amiable, "Good-morning," started the pony again, and they went off at a brisk trot toward the village.

That evening about a dozen young people were gathered in Miss Southwell's pleasant parlors.

The Ransoms, who were old family friends, had arrived from the country. Mr. and Mrs. Ransom were upstairs with Miss Southwell, while the younger members of the party formed part of the merry group below.

Miss Higley had arrived early with two cousins, and shortly after two or three gentlemen. Mr. Palmer, of course, for Miss Southwell's house was very popular with the young people.

Laura, sorry and ashamed for her aunt, had found this a very happy day. She was proving herself indeed "a dear little hypocrite," as the owner of a white lawn handkerchief. Though not a thing of lasting value, it cost more than out, the deep drawn sigh gave notice that all was lost.

The gallant country lad had loosed from his hold a pack of Cupid's dogs upon the citadel of her heart. The heart works were being terribly battered. Its defenders were in full disorganized ere the fortification would go. Then, seated on the extremity of the outermost point, she contemplated the enemy triumphantly as, the dance over, they retreated to a corner of the room and seemed absorbed in conversation.

"They are polite to desert their company that way!" she said with a pause, to her cousin, George best, I suppose."

"Why, they've been doing their best to entertain us all the evening, and their company was very much appreciated, I'm sure," said good-natured George, admiring round him. "Every Jack-hasbis Jill, and nobody's looks neglected. Why shouldn't they have a little friendly chat now and then?"

Meantime Laura is saying with a sigh, "We have a telegram from uncle —he will be home coming!"

"Are you sorry?" asks Alfred, with a kindly twinkle in his eyes.

"No! sorry! no, uncle, but—well, on the whole, I think I prefer peace to war, and should be real sorry to have hostilities commence between Miss Laura," glancing up with a roguish but kindly look.

"Well, is it necessary to resume the campaign?" says her cousin, kindly. "I feel the need of a truce myself, and refreshing myself. Suppose we swear a perpetual peace?"

Laura's face is laugh, but the bright eyes are full of tears, and her voice trembles as she answers: "Cousin Alfred, we are so foolish that I have not courage to do what I've longed to do for days—apologize for my badness, and promise to be kind to you hereafter from this time."

Alfred's enemy has surrendered at last, unconditionally; but if Alfred feels any masculine triumph, he does not betray it by word or look.

"We'll both start again," he says, heartily taking the little hand in his cousin has just proffered him. "Myself, I feel I've been a dictatorial, overbearing sort of a fellow, and I want to be friends with you, Laura. If you will say as a great favor that you'll forget that I have the flag of truce!" I want it for a memento of this suspicious day."

"I'll give you both of it with pleasure," says Laura, with a musical little laugh. "But I'd like to have half of it to remind me always to keep the peace."

Miss Higley, who, while pretending to talk with that gentleman, was watching the coquettishly, now said, in a high, shrill tone: "Well, they really seem almost 'sponey,' don't they? I do how they've been sparring ever since they met. Mr. Palmer, you think you see any signs of—well, you know what I mean—over there?"

What It Is to Have Faith.

There is a story of a French criminal who died because he believed that he was being led to death, while in reality his arms were only being bound behind him. In the same way it is recorded how Mr. Louthersburg cured a long sufferer of dyspepsia by attacking the imagination. Among those who had visited him was a man who had been troubled with great pains and swellings, particularly about the feet, and who had undergone many operations, so that he could scarcely walk across the room. On entering, Mr. Louthersburg looked steadfastly at him and said: I know your complaint; look at me." They continued looking at each other some minutes, when Mr. Louthersburg asked if he did not feel some pain in his feet. This being answered in the affirmative, he said: "Now you can be cured." Still looking in his face, Mr. Louthersburg said: "How did you come here, sir?" "In a coach." "Then you can walk out to your coach and walk back to town." The coach was immediately ordered, the visitor left to town, and the next day he walked five hours about town without fatigue. Subsequently, Sydney Smith, riding by the banker-post Rogers caught a bad cold simply from imagining a window to be open, but which all the time was shut. It was at a dinner party, and a piece of plate glass had been received Rogers, who was sitting in what he thought to be a dangerous draught. He spoke further cases. Dr. Sigmond relates how a poor woman, having applied to a physician for a cure of an affection of the eye, was given a prescription, which he directed should be applied to the breast. She returned at the end of a few days to offer her grateful thanks for the cure, which he had effected by not making inquiry as to the mode of action, he ascertained that his patient had very carefully laid the prescription round her neck. Faith cures of this kind are of constant occurrence, and we know how numerous are the suffering from maladies connected with the brain or nervous system, have been restored to their abnormal state of health by simple faith. Thus startling effects have occasionally followed the swallowing of such make-belief remedies as pills composed of bread or sugar. This accounts, therefore, for the cures which were wrought in days gone by, even which medicine was in a backward state, and the most absurd prescriptions were often given to patients suffering from nervous disease.—The Gentleman's Magazine.

Giving a Housewife Points.

A careful housewife upon entering her kitchen, said to the colored cook:

"Great goodness, Jane, you must be more careful. You don't put wood enough in your cooking."

"Lady," replied the cook, as she took up a piece of beef that had fallen on the floor, "I sees dat yer's gwine to get bodder, an' I'se gwine to put dis bothin' ter do 'cept to fool roun' out heah!"

"If my business to come out here occasionally."

"Ah right den, hab it yer own way, but I wanter say one thing. If yer wants ter 'joy yesse'f as de table an' eat wile er comin' sparkle yer'll better stay outen dis kitchen. Yas," she added, as she wiped a dish with a dirty rag, "yer'd better not know yer'self heah, for cookin' is er bus'ness wid me an' when er pusson is 'gaged in dat biz-ness, foolishness is a wful troublesome."—Arkansas Traveler.

HARDSHELL LOVE-MAKING.

Judge A. R. Wright, of Rome, Tells All About It.

From the Rome (Ga.) Bulletin.

To the young people by far themost interesting part of a Hardshell Baptist association is the courting scenes going on in all directions, which the old campaigner in the ways of Cupid never fails to detect. If the elite about the cities of both sexes think there is no fun of this sort going on they are mistaken. Lads and lasses go courting up here like they do in the secular city. There (that is) in the city it is.

A seat on a sofa, with a glass of special "fix, and mamma too blind to discover her small white hand in mine.

In this country there is no sofa about it; a new cut log, with the bark on answers quite as well. There is no "fix," of course, the idea might be conveyed from sweetheart to sweetheart by the eyes.

"When it is time to shell skip a beat!"

As a matter of fact the heart is the least susceptible to primary disease of any of our organs. It is, however, very much injured by certain long-continued conditions of the other organs, like the kidneys, liver and stomach. Moreover, blood filled with uric acid produces a rheumatic tendency, and is very injurious to health-ful heart action,—it often proves fatal, and, of course, the uric acid comes from impaired kidney action.

Richard Hodgson, of English authority says that heart disease is chiefly secondary to some more fatal malady in the blood or other vitals. Again, That is, it is not the original source of the fatal malady.

The work of the heart is to force blood into every part of the system. At the outset it requires a little more than task. If they are at all diseased, it is very, very hard task. Take as an illustration: The average man is very subject to congestion and yet, being deficient in the nerves of sensation, thinks nothing of it. Then he is not indicated. He will pass it. It may exist for years unknown even to physicians, and if it does not result in apoplexy, destruction of the kidneys, the extra work which it forces upon the heart weakens it every day. Then the "mysterious" sudden death claims another victim.

This is the true history of "heart disease," so-called, which in reality is chiefly a mere mask of Cupid's dart of disease of the kidneys, and indicates unmistakably the need of that renowned specific Warner's Safe Cure.

B. P. Larrabee, Esq., of Boston, who was long in the clutches of Bright's disease, in 1879, say that with its disappearance went the disheartening heart disorder. He says he discovered was only secondary to the renal trouble.

Indeed, a general impression that the medical profession is not at fault if it fatally admits that heart disease is the cause of death, or the wateraway, a cure of heart disease is not expected of death.

There may be no help for a broken down, worn out, apoplectic heart, but there's a help for the kidney disorder which in most cases is responsible for the heart trouble, and it is use put money into the hands of the country of the profession instead of into the hands of an independent investigator, every body would be the gainer. The world would exclaim of it, as one, nobler and less prejudiced than his fellows, once exclaimed: "It is a God-send to humanity!"

What therefore must be the public estimate of that bigotry and want of frankness which forbids in such cases the publication of the proprietary article), the use of the one effective remedial agency of the age?

Why not publish it? Why not call such things by their right names? Why not?

"Dead without a moment's warning!" This likewise is an untruth! Warning are always given in advance. Physicians are "not surprised." They "expected it!" They know what the corpse left home and family for, and he mustn't be told, you know, it would only frighten him, for there is no help, you know, for him.

The fate that attended "Little Mac" in the five governors is not a royal and exclusive one. It overtakes every one who fails to heed the warnings of nature as set forth above.

Minister Jarvis and the "Old Country."

Ex-Governor Jarvis of North Carolina, now minister to Brazil, writes from Rio Janeiro that he is taking lessons in the Portuguese. This language of that country. "The class," he says, "is composed of the old woman and myself, and the old woman is all the time at the head of the class, correcting my mistakes in the most unmerciful manner. But I don't mind. So I am a school boy again. I know you would laugh if you could see me sitting at my desk with my book and pencil correcting me. And what makes it worse, the old woman keeps away and not only corrects me, but scolds me in a month or two she will talk Portuguese to me. But then the funniest part of my experience was when I first got here. We are at the French hotel and there was not a servant in it that spoke a word of English, and I could not speak a word of Portuguese. Fortunately the old woman could speak French, so I had to do all my talking through her. At its table d'hote I had to order all that I eat. Now just imagine me unable to get a thing to eat except by the permission of the old woman. It was indeed laughable to see me. I am now able to talk enough Portuguese to make known my wants and get what I want. I find I am all the time improving. I am now able to read it, will be able to speak the language much better than I thought it ever possible for me to do."

Death of the King of Spain.

King Alfonso of Spain died Wednesday morning the 25th inst. of consumption accelerated by dyspepsia. The illness of the king is completely prostrated by his death. The royal family were present when he expired. All the officers of state and the members of parliament, except the minister of war and the captain general of Madrid, were present when he expired. The cabinet met immediately and the queen was appointed regent. In accordance with the fact the ministers of the cabinet have tendered their resignations, but will remain in office a few days pleasure. The Princess Mercedes, the five-year-old daughter of Alfonso, will be queen under the regency of her mother, Christina. Ex-Queen Isabella and the Duke of Montpensier are being quartered throughout the country as the representatives of the royal household.

King Alfonso's first wife was the Princess Marie de las Mercedes, youngest daughter of the Duke de Montpensier and Infanta Luisa, married Jan. 23, 1878. Marie died the same year, and in November, 1879, he married the Archduchess Marie Christina of Austria, by whom he has one son and one dau. The death of the king will propably be followed by attempts to found another republic; but the government of Spain will be that which the army makes it.

Father Andre, speaking of the interviews between Riel and Riel, says the latter asked him to use his influence to obtain from the government a bribe of $100,000 as the price of Riel's withdrawal from the country. The rebel had arrogantly declared that the Metis question was himself. In a subsequent interview Riel reduced his price to $35,000, and afterwards said he would take what he could get. The priest St. Eustache, or Two Mountains, positively refused to chant a service for the repose of Riel's soul. He said his mind was made up in regard to Riel.

Secretary Whitney gave 220 turkeys to the officers, crews, messengers and laborers of the navy department at his Thanksgiving present. Everybody got one, from the admiral to the charwoman, and it cost the government $1,100. He made a contract with a wholesale dealer and the people were allowed to go to the store and select for themselves, without regard to size, weight, or previous condition. Everybody came with a ticket, and Mr. Whitney's private secretary, Mr. Hanna, was on hand to receive the tickets and direct everybody to help himself. The colored people were the most appreciative and demonstrative of the secretary's guests, and the grins on their faces, the whites of their eyes and glistening teeth made up an interesting picture.

"DROPPED DEAD."

The Pale Chalcovenite "Little Mack" and Fat Cheese Jones Afterwards.

Apropos of the sudden death of Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, we note that the New York Sun, points out the singular fact that Governor Joe Wm Clinton, Governor Silas Wright, Governor William L. Marcy, Governor and Chief Justice Samuel R. Church, and Governor E. E. Fenton, of New York State, dropped dead of heart disease, and Horace Greeley died of congestion—each of them dying while reading a letter except Marcy, who was preparing to read one.

Hold your hand against the ribs on your left side, front,—the regular, steady beating of the great "home pump" of the system, run by an unconscious engineer. Engineer, is awful in its impressiveness!

Few persons like to count their own pulsebeats, and very few, perhaps, enjoy marking the "thub—thub" of their own heart.

"When it should skip a beat!"

As a matter of fact the heart is the least susceptible to primary disease of any of our organs. It is, however, very much injured by certain long-continued conditions of the other organs, like the kidneys, liver and stomach. Moreover, blood filled with uric acid produces a rheumatic tendency, and is very injurious to health-ful heart action,—it often proves fatal, and, of course, the uric acid comes from impaired kidney action.

Richard Hodgson, of English authority says that heart disease is chiefly secondary to some more fatal malady in the blood or other vitals. Again, That is, it is not the original source of the fatal malady.

The work of the heart is to force blood into every part of the system. At the outset it requires a little more than task. If they are at all diseased, it is very, very hard task. Take as an illustration: The average man is very subject to congestion and yet, being deficient in the nerves of sensation, thinks nothing of it. Then he is not indicated. He will pass it. It may exist for years unknown even to physicians, and if it does not result in apoplexy, destruction of the kidneys, the extra work which it forces upon the heart weakens it every day. Then the "mysterious" sudden death claims another victim.

This is the true history of "heart disease," so-called, which in reality is chiefly a mere mask of Cupid's dart of disease of the kidneys, and indicates unmistakably the need of that renowned specific Warner's Safe Cure.

B. P. Larrabee, Esq., of Boston, who was long in the clutches of Bright's disease, in 1879, say that with its disappearance went the disheartening heart disorder. He says he discovered was only secondary to the renal trouble.

Indeed, a general impression that the medical profession is not at fault if it fatally admits that heart disease is the cause of death, or the wateraway, a cure of heart disease is not expected of death.

There may be no help for a broken down, worn out, apoplectic heart, but there's a help for the kidney disorder which in most cases is responsible for the heart trouble, and it is use put money into the hands of the country of the profession instead of into the hands of an independent investigator, every body would be the gainer. The world would exclaim of it, as one, nobler and less prejudiced than his fellows, once exclaimed: "It is a God-send to humanity!"

What therefore must be the public estimate of that bigotry and want of frankness which forbids in such cases the publication of the proprietary article), the use of the one effective remedial agency of the age?

Why not publish it? Why not call such things by their right names? Why not?

"Dead without a moment's warning!" This likewise is an untruth! Warning are always given in advance. Physicians are "not surprised." They "expected it!" They know what the corpse left home and family for, and he mustn't be told, you know, it would only frighten him, for there is no help, you know, for him.

The fate that attended "Little Mac" in the five governors is not a royal and exclusive one. It overtakes every one who fails to heed the warnings of nature as set forth above.

Labor Lost.

From the Brooklyn Magazine.

The following item is authoritatively told of a New York merchant residing on Hancock-st., in Brooklyn.

Although a gentleman of comfortable means, the merchant is extremely economical fits. Desiring to surprise his wife upon her return from the country, the other day he quietly undertake the task of varnishing his dining room, which had lost some of its lustre. After locking the door little time to searching for a pot of varnish which had been used on previous occasions, the merchant, with coat off, and with rolled-up sleeves, began the job, and with his first stroke of the brush he finished to his entire satisfaction.

The following morning he rose early
