

O, how I wish I were a man... I have that which you have not... I have that which you have not... I have that which you have not...

MAX, THE LITTLE HERO.

Translated from the German for the Spring... It was a good-looking village in which little Max lived with his parents. For days and days people looked on as they defiled forth from their houses across the fields into the woods. They drove their cows and sheep and geese before them; on little hand carts they drew household goods, spinning-wheels, and other articles and bedding. The men had antlers, catkins and angry faces; the women carried the children, and the old folks were bent double.

He wanted to see everything, strange everything and to taste. Perhaps he would like to taste the apples, but he was not to be caught—he was too little. He would like to taste the bread, but he was not to be caught—he was too little. He would like to taste the milk, but he was not to be caught—he was too little.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

The straw is generally supposed to be the most valuable feeding-broth, and best straw is the best for cattle. It is not so, however, as many people think. The best straw is that which is cut up into small pieces, and is mixed with a little of the best hay. This mixture is the best for cattle.

A SWAMP ANGEL.

The St. Louis (Mo.) Democrat has a curious article on a swamp angel. It is a creature that is said to be found in the swamps of Louisiana. It is a creature that is said to be found in the swamps of Louisiana.

A BEER-DRINKING HABBIT.

Michael E. Fry, of 3713 Avenue... A great rabbi-broader among people, and a man who was very rich. He was a man who was very rich. He was a man who was very rich.
