President Cleveland's last annual message is called a free trade document, and, as the terms go, it is for free trade. But there is a difference in this kind of free trade and actual free trade, and the Democrats know it, but wishing to deny the real issue raised by the President, and not caring to quarrel with him, they say his message is not free trade, and, in the strict sense of the word, they are right.

Actual free trade means the abolition of the entire customs service, and the institution of direct taxation in its stead. The needs of the government, it means to see free trade with foreign countries as a whole. Nobody believes in this doctrine. So the Democrats say that the President's message does not commit their party to free trade, they say truthfully, and yet deny nothing—they are simply dodging.

Upon the tariff question, there are really but two sides. One class of our people believe that all tariff legislation should have for its object the raising of the revenue, but, also, and necessarily protection in our own markets against the competition of foreign capital and unpaid labor, with American industries and our own wage-earners. This is the doctrine of the Republican party. Another class of our people would adjust customs' duties solely so as to supply the actual needs of the treasury to defray the actual expenses, and have American manufacturers and American laborers to fight their own battles, unaided by government.

It is a Clevelandian, and it is what Democrats do not care to discuss. They know that it is their function, and yet they do not like to talk about it. It belongs to the Republican party openly and without reserve declares itself the champion of the protection policy. It believes in protection for protection's sake, and it says frankly and in unmistakable terms.

That is the other of the line this draws must be the people of this country range themselves at the next presidential election. It is a question of party, as of honesty and principle. If there are those in the line who believe in the tariff for revenue only—Clevelandian—let them get out of the party—they are out of place in it. On the other side, the protectionists have no business in the Democratic party—they, too, are out of place. Men who prize principle above the object of their party, and who are right than to see preserve consistency—men of both parties—could not be expected to support either men and party principle alike, and more especially should they not set in this matter of the tariff. Let no man be expected to be gross unless he is sound on tariff legislation.

The St. Cloud chamber of commerce have sent a man to Michigan to negotiate with lumbermen, with capital and labor, who believe in the tariff. Will Denmark be behind in this matter when so much is at stake.

The courts have decided that physicians and doctors are alien enemies, and that the state has no right to revoke a license for doing so.

SOLITUDE.

Happy the woman who sits alone... A pleasant dream...

SIX YEARS.

Mr. Alvin Stoddard stood in the shadow of the drapery... Madam March had gathered her "five hundred."

She laughed, with blinding tears in her eyes... He was not so substantially grand as the other men...

He was the village doctor's son... He had a romantic, gipsy-faced girl...

Only a few among hereditary friends... He had a romantic, gipsy-faced girl...

Nevertheless he did not object when his kinsmen led him forward... He had a romantic, gipsy-faced girl...

He was making the most of his act of freedom... He had a romantic, gipsy-faced girl...

He was making the most of his act of freedom... He had a romantic, gipsy-faced girl...
