

A Pestifer People.

Among the many well-known remnants of India there is one more interesting than the Bengalis or the Keralas. The Haindlers do not belong to the lost tribes, but they have their own connection with the Great Pyramid. Their own legends tell of their country's remoteness, they were shipwrecked near Kerying Island, and arrived there, every family took refuge in a cavernous hollow, and there they remained for years. Their first discovery was that of a pestiferous serpent, but they were not afraid of it. They were, however, of wood and drank of water to whatever they came in contact with. They were as much Haindlers today as they were two centuries ago.

It was a few years ago that a French explorer, M. de Kerying, discovered that he had found the lost tribes of Haindlers. He found them living in a cavernous hollow, and they were as much Haindlers today as they were two centuries ago.

PL. RILEY NEWS.

Town meeting March 12th. G. O. Kimball was at the Fall Meeting.

W. H. Brewster, of Crow Wing, was in town Wednesday. D. S. Moores was at Brainerd on Friday, the 1st.

D. S. Moores' wife has been following the Little Falls during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Root spent a few days with friends at St. Cloud during the past week.

Mr. Henry Phelps, of Brainerd, visited his friends at the Fort with a visit Thursday evening.

The late law has caused many of the lumbermen to wear awfully long hair for the past few days.

Miss Nellie Tanager, of Little Falls, who has been stopping at Mr. Moores for a few days returned home Monday.

After a long illness of consumption Mrs. L. Drayton has at last gone to bed.

M. E. Permont is quite low at present. He has been suffering from a cold, but no objectionable person could enter, consequently the makers were not in the vicinity of the best society people of Brainerd.

There were a number of very elegant costumes worn by both ladies and gentlemen, costumes secured from a costume shop owned up from Minneapolis for this occasion.

Joe Heron's costume, as Homo, was probably the most elegant that was seen on the floor. The ladies all were gotten up artistically and looked so beautiful that we wish to give them a particular mention of any. The best costume on the floor, however, was one worn by a young man, which was so perfect and natural that it was not even noticed.
