A SERIOUS FIRE.

Brainerd is Visited by the Worst Conflagration She Has Known for Years.

The Loss of Property Foots up $75,000.

This city was visited by the most serious fire that it has known for years this morning, and as a result part of the business portion of the city lies a blackened mass of ruins today. At 3:15 the fire bell gave the alarm which was responded to by the department, the fire at that time being located in the barn in the rear of the Commercial Hotel, and had gained some headway. The alarm was sent in to the pump house from the First ward hose house and at first a good stream of water was obtained, but for only a few moments, and in the meantime the fire had spread to all parts of the large barn and was menacing the hotel property, with a strong wind blowing from the north and the northwest. Water was again obtained but a breakdown occurred at the pumphouse, and for some time there was no water at all. A messenger was dispatched to the house of Jas. McDonough, the engineer in charge, and after he arrived and took charge of the pumps there was no trouble, but the mischief had been accomplished in the meantime. The fire had spread to the hotel and that large building was soon enveloped in flames which no earthly power could subdue, the wind carrying the cinders and sparks into the air and making the heat almost unbearable anywhere within a block of the burning building. The buildings adjoining the hotel on the south, being the old Peter Mertz building, the old city lock-up, and a building owned by G. W. Holland, formerly occupied by a second-hand store, were soon ablaze, and in turn fired the elegant new Catholic parsonage, which had but recently been completed, and the Catholic church. In the meantime the flames were working eastward, and had crossed Fifth street and ignited the Gardner building on the corner, occupied by A. E. Veon, jeweler, and H. Rosenberg, cigar maker. About this time water came to the assistance of the firemen and they worked with a will, which saved the business portion of the city from almost total destruction. The fire was checked on Laurel street after it had licked up the five buildings belonging to Geo. Gardner. Wet blankets on the roof of the Orth building on the north side of the street saved that from burning. Everything was burned on Fifth street south to Maple, the wind favoring the firemen at this point. In the block where the Commercial stood but one building remains untouched by the fire fiend.

It is quite generally conceded that the fire was of incendiary origin, as it was first discovered in the stable of the large barn, a place it would seem almost impossible at that time of night for a fire to start unless intentional, as the barn was closed. The firemen could easily have stopped the further destruction of property if the water pressure had been on when they arrived, but the unfortunate occurrence at the pump house, which always seems to happen when water is most needed, resulted in the destruction of nearly $75,000 worth of property. The loss to the city and to the individuals is a severe one.

The Commercial Hotel which was destroyed was one of the old landmarks in this city, having been built by the Lelands some nineteen years ago.

The loss and insurance as given by the parties to a DISPATCH reporter this morning is as follows:

Chas. Kinke's, on buildings	$ 4 000
do on tool s, machinery & stock	2 000

Old city jail building	500
Peter Mertz, loss on buildings	2 000
Loss on furniture	500
Insurance, $1,200.
A. E. Veon, loss on stock	2 000
H. Rosenberg, loss on stock	2 000
do do household goods	500
Insurance, $2,000.
F. Peeples, loss on stock	225
Insurance, $100.
C. H. Douglas, loss on sleighs, buss, carriages	1 500

Sandy McPherson, loss on goods	225
Sam Kee, laundry	300
Cooper & Gray, loss on cattle	300
Mrs. Westerberg, loss on stock	200
Geo. E. Sloan, loss on household contents	25 00
Loss on dwelling 4th and Laurel sts	500

In the Commercial house barn, were six head of oxen and they were burned, it being impossible to get them out. They belonged to Cooper & Gray.

Jerome Kelleher lost a fine horse which was also burned in the barn where the fire originated.

Charlie Linkein lost all his household goods, a fine new piano and the entire clothing of the family.

A. E. Veon's loss is a heavy one to him as he had no insurances. Nearly all his goods in the show cases were saved, but he fears that the valuable part of his stock, which was in the safe, is ruined. He is located for the present in the rooms in front of Lynch & Gallup's undertaking rooms on 7th street.

Geo. Gardner will open up in his old stand as soon as it can be gotten in shape by the carpenters.

The Catholic church will be rebuilt immediately, but probably on a new site. In the meantime arrangements will be made for holding services at the rink.

The Commercial Hotel was owned by Geo. E. Hayes, of Minneapolis, and was under the management of J. W. Boynton, who had recently taken charge of it.

Sandy McPherson has opened his shoe shop at Snyder's shoe store.

M. H. McCabe had moved out of the burned district but two days before the fire, and he considers it a streak of luck.

The insurance agency of Smith & Demmels had $18,450 of insurance in the burned district in different companies.

The total loss on buildings and stock foots up nearly $72,000 with an insurance of about $22,000.

The fire department deserves great credit for their effective work. If they had had water thr blaze would have been nipped in the bud.

I. U. White moved the greater part of his sporting goods to a place of safety as a precaution.

Wilson's Record.

EDITORS DISPATCH:—For ten years I published the Plainview News, in this state, and during all that time that town and its neighboring town, Elgin, has been in litigation with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company over a railroad bond issue which our supreme court has twice decided unconstitutionally issued, null and void. During all that time the attorney of the railroad company in this case has been the Hon. Thos. Wilson, present candidate for governor. This, of itself, may or may not signify anything, but to me, the fact, that having lost his case in the courts, Mr. Wilson then had himself elected to the legislature, and thus sought to secure special legislation whereby the property, against which the towns could alone recover, transferred into other hands, that, to me is an act which does not appertain to a railroad attorney, but to a dishonest, treacherous legislator, and that is precisely what Thos. Wilson did do; what for many years I have repeatedly charged him with doing, and what I have proven him guilty of by no less witnesses than Judge Collins, Judge Start, Robert Taylor, Esq., Col. E. C. Gearey, and the legislative records themselves. Four years ago, thanks to the sudden democratic wave following Cleveland's election, and the popularity of Dr. Ames, on whose ticket he ran, together with two other democrats from this state, he was elected to congress, and now, as I sincerely believe, thanks to this election and his two years in Washington, where he has had ample time to fix things, the people find their case, which they had twice to win through every court in Minnesota, safely hung up in the United States supreme court. The litigation, so far, of course, has been over the interest due on the bonds, but now the chances are that Mr. Wilson has got them four until the principal matures, when the whole thing may be litigation over again. The case in the United States supreme court now is only on the question of jurisdiction, but after the bonds mature it will involve very technicality of law. It is safe to say that if Mr. Wilson out worries the towns in this litigation it will nearly bankrupt them and the whole of it will be chiefly due to his action in the legislature and his election to congress. If, as a public legislator, he lays himself out to ruin a couple of townships in the interests of his railway corporation, what would he not be likely to do if he were governor of the state?

Sincerely Yours,

ED. A. PARADIS.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long step. No man or woman now living will ever date a letter and write the figure 9. It stands in the first place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then over to second place in 1891, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is call the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "Nine Point King Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine."

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a competition with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize for family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of the Wheeler & Wilson Member, Decoration of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it on the grand advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very best.

Boston Footpad in Action.

Chicago Tribune: "Pause" sternly commanded the highest political boodler in a locality at the head of the belated pedestrian. "Pause" is generally accompanied by or with the index member of the digital extremity of the right hand of the individual who is to communicate motion to the small metallic object which is in the other side of the pocket and release the mechanicism it holds in check, thereby causing the resultant concussion to explode the detonating fulminate contained in the cartridge which is the principal ingredient of the weapon. The resultant compound of projectile vaporize the combined product of triturate of potash, sulphur, and charcoal and impinge with the force of the immediate contact, and impart a sudden propelling impulse to the leaden or steel-nickel projectile to secure the propulsion of which such powder was originally made. The ingenious device originally was brought into the country by Colt.

"What do you want?" gasped the astonished victim.

"The immediate transfer and surrender of whatever articles of personal adornment, convenience for purposes of exchange or printed matter you may have in your possession. That you may by any fortuitous concatenation of circumstances or lack of premeditation supply with such other articles of intrinsic value as your necessities may require, and for the necessary means of subsistence as may have found a temporary lodgment in the form of scents. Nothing of a nutritious or alimentary kind, you will understand, for I am twenty four hours," he added, with a touch of pathos in the suggestion of his financial situation leave me no other resource than to take those articles of personal adornment, convenience for purposes of exchange or printed matter you may have in your possession. Extrude the impediments, or the concussion of a ball will ensue."

"It is something to eat you want?"

"That is not my only need. I am of sympathetic—the pie plus ultra or my hopes."

Then a token, on the part of the belated traveler took out a cylindrical package He gave it White's face, and he held it up near the flickering rays of a dim street-lamp fell on it. It was a package of pills, with a printed label, shrieked deliriously, and fainted for joy.

It was a can of baked beans.

An Old Salem Doll.

To see a doll on exhibition that was bought for a fabulous sum, and remembering and something like one with solumn awe for the story of the good girl who kept a stick of peppermint candy for ten years to show to her children, is a little. A class of several generations of children gazing in solumn awe at the wonderful doll, and behind them, at this London wonder, to keep the curious from coming too near, are cautious and you-may-look-but-you-can't-touch-it signs, and ropes to keep them from quiet Salem homes.

The doll has real children really play with the doll, and were Salem children so disposed a real doll it has come down to us in all its immaculate rigidity of eyes and limbs. Salem has not had the doll of the sickled Boston child, save during the time of the "Salem witch" thing." Under whom with a pitiful part of wonder and pity the little Salem children doing that they did not pick out those having Lucifer in their hands, and pitched against a Salem wall and got the gorgeous upon the ground.

But let us hope that while this London production of seventeenth century dolldom is thing was calmly growing yellow in the cedar chest, in the Salem garret, where the stuffing out of innumerable rag dolls, and the head off of the big one, and the legs off of its two sons a day, and clasped their pudgy hands in the air, and kicked their feet and threw them out of the window in the morning, all until the doll was laid away since the creation; otherwise the salem doll would have been the doll of the ages greater than all the results of the Egyptian exploration put together.—Boston Gazette.

Don't Wear a Soft Hat.

I write against the evils of wearing soft hats. I have been in the habit of wearing one and have found that the sat hat will eventually ruin the eyesight. I have had to wear glasses being so sot and fearful that it very readily falls into the eyes, and by wearing a stiff hat, hood, it thus excludes every particle of air, thereby forcing the dust and dirt to settle on the roots of the hair. I find that the healthiest hat for a man to wear is a light felt hood both summer and winter, not only on account of the dust and dirt, but because it prevents it from falling so close to a man's head, but forces a current of air between the top of it allows a free circulation of air.

Mr. Editor, I think my views are not nearly so many laid headed people as there are in the world, and if you would publish it for the population, but there are a great many people will be benefited by it. Many people of begin to wear them there at the age of twenty years.

To show you the difference in the proportion of the size of the head of a man to find from the statistics that England, wi h a population of 29,000,000 people, 1,000 hats has employed in the manufacture of silk hats to about 2,000 men, while in the United States with a population of more than 60,000,000, 10,000 hats are made, and you remember that there are as many laid headed men here [Cor. The Census of Oregon.

Portland Oregonian: Every additional fact that comes to hand tends to show that the census of Oregon, both in the Eastern and Western division, has been neglected and imperfectly taken. A return of only 174,768 inhabitants in the Eastern division means, when compared with the last census and the vote in June last, that 20 per cent of the inhabitants have been missed, and from what is known of the counties and results in the Western division, it will be singular if the population returned will be much less and not greater. The work of the census in Oregon has been conducted in a manner that could not easily pushed, and we think the result will fail far short of showing the actual population of the state to make it extremely doubtful whether we shall get another member of congress. In June, 1880, the state cast 79,220 votes, and its population at that time was 174,768. In June, 1890, the state cast 84,901 votes, and the present census should show a population of nearly or quite 330,000. But the returns so far indicate that it will fall much below 300,000—a result that can be due only to want of efficiency in the organization and management of the work of enumeration.

Another Child Injured—Narrow Escape of the Husband and Father.

DENISON, Iowa, Special Telegram, Oct. 6.—One of the most terrible accidents ever known in Dubuque occurred this morning at 4 o'clock.

The residence of ex-Policeman John Mellen was discovered on fire, a neighbor ran across and tried to arouse the family. While knocking at the door the window in the upper story was thrown up and Mellen fell to the ground. For a few moments he was senseless. Upon recovering he began crying that his family was upstairs. The flames were quickly extinguished, and the neighbors entered the house to find Mellen the mother and three children were found and quickly removed. Mrs. Mellen and the oldest daughter, Rosa, aged eighteen, were dead. The youngest daughter, Bertha, sixteen, and Charley, the boy, seven, were still alive. The boy died this afternoon. The girl is still alive, but cannot recover.

Mellen is too dazed to give a connected account. He seemed to remember being suffocated. He aroused his wife and they grouped in the smoke and darkness until Mellen struck the window, through which he leaped or fell? The mother was with her last remembrance of her children, well back to save them. When found; the family was in bed, the mother and children each other's necks. The building is a small two-story frame. The bodies were very slightly burned.

AMONG THE SPORTS.

Ryan of Michigan Defeats Doyle of Chicago in Four Rounds.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—One of the most brutal fistic encounters ever witnessed in this city occurred this morning in barn near Shelby, Ind., a small town seventy-five miles from Chicago. The contestants were Tommy Ryan of Grand Rapids, light-weight champion of Michigan, and John Doyle, a local pugilist of Chicago. The fight was for a purse of $500, to a finish, with two-ounce gloves, to be taken by Queensberry rules. Ryan stripped at 137 pounds, while Doyle weighed in at 138. Sergeant Siddons and Billy Richards acted as Ryan's seconds, and Harry Gilmore and Frank Girard did the honors for Doyle. Bill Hogan acted as referee.

Time was called at 4:05. The battle, which lasted twenty-seven rounds, was for the most part brutal. Ryan was evidently the more scientific of the two, managing to avoid Doyle's heavy swings and getting in return bewildering Doyle's face and body almost into mince meat. Ryan's right was called in the twenty-eighth round Doyle, in his desperation, rushing at Ryan, struck him his seat, staggered toward Ryan's corner and fell exhausted. Bill Hogan called it a rough-and-tumble style. Gilmore then threw up the sponge in behalf of Doyle, declared the winner. The mill lasted one hour and fifty-five minutes.

LIKE THE LITTLE BIRDS.

A Grand Scheme for Fast Travel by Mammoth Air Ships.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—The Herald, in a paper publishes the following under display head lines:

For a week past a dozen gentlemen have been gathered at the Grand Pacific hotel in earnest discussion of a plan which sounds like a tale from the Arabian Nights. The carrier of one and $20,000,000 in solid cash have been paid in to put into effect the scheme, and the work in making railroad trains appear like moss-age is commenced. The plan is nothing less than the navigation of the air by mammoth ships, and no man to have his office in New York and yet live in Chicago. The distance between these cities has been just around the corner. The town the upper air ships will be moored will be the United States one day and arrive in Europe the next. The plan is the result of the brain of Wesley Dallie Hyatt, of Rochester, N. Y., and by making the circuit of the globe in just five days. The inventor has been passed all over Chicago at Springfield the Monitor Carried across and Manufacturing company, of Grand Rapids, Mich., company, of Grand Rapids, Mich., Mr. Hyatt's brother James A. Hyatt.

The proposed air ship, models of which have been exhibited in the parlors of the hotel, is of the Pullmans and will contain fifty persons and a crew of twenty-five men. It will be a small and passenger service. Work will commence on the first ship in the spring, and it will be completed by the middle of summer, covering many acres. The first building to be erected will be a large shop, and the contracts for it have already been let. The company will be composed of the leading capitalists of the east, even to the aluminum, of which the air ships will be largely constructed.

TWO RUNAWAYS.

St. Paris, Special Telegram, Oct. 6.—At 7:30 last evening a cab driver dashed into a livery rig on Third street near Robert, and, throwing out Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams and Mrs. Hannah Bitzy, got onto the driver's seat himself and drove rapidly away. The livery horse then ran away and smashed the rig into kindling wood. It is stated that William was engaged in taking up Third street, and, seeing the cab coming from behind him at full road speed, tried to get out of the way. The cab driver, in his haste to escape, turned so that the livery horse was struck. Before Williams could make another turn one wheel of the cab struck the hydrant, breaking it off the pipe would not turn. Third street was soon flooded and along the centre of pavement a stream of water was found in the State, and no means entering the sewers, it was soon over the sidewalks and then along the streams.

MINNESOTA IN CONGRESS.

A Republican congress in 1861 inaugurated the policy of free homes. Since that time open the broad and fertile acres of Minnesota to settlement on the plan that it might lunch with the harvest." Under this law thousands of acres of land have been secured by those who have made productive and added to the domain of the state. Democratic congress, in the speaking of the protection principle and the doctrine of "incidental protection" is dead—the truth is a fact. But in those days of Democratic rule, when the Democratic vote in both houses of congress was solid, no such legislation could be secured against the principle of free homes for free men" would not have been heard of.

WHY THEY DID SO.

In 1857 8 9 and 60 the nation was rapidly rising under the fostering influences and economies of free traders—a name which has been given to the democratic party because it not the same principle still exists to be sought in the United States. It is now under the same emphasions and deceptive name of "tariff reform." It is the same and, for all we was a German, now may be a Russian, Italian or Chinaman. It is the same breath of youth and energy, and, if successful, would be the same result. It would be ingenious and profitless to go back to the days of 1857 to 1860. To such a period, of course, all those who allowed in the principle of protection to American industry

CONGRESSIONAL.

A Resume of the Proceedings of Congress During the Past Week.

SENATE.

The conference report on the tariff bill was presented to the house, and it now remains for the senate to concur in the amendments of the house and the two conferees will be accepted by the respective bodies. Briefly, twelve is not, to be free, but to pay a duty of twenty-five per cent.

Some anxiety is felt about the statistics of the Western senators and the Eastern Dakota twins amendment. Senator Paddock is in charge of the statistics of the conference, and he has stated that he will vote against the ten cent rate. It is said that there are many of the republican senators will stand with him, but the general opinion is that there will be enough to defeat the report.

American Pheasants.

October 15 to December 15 is an artificial production and not a bird of the wilderness, like the quail. Let us say, in the meantime, the wild duck, or even the partridge and the grouse, for that matter. Europe, England and just now Europe. Whether he cannot be tamed like Chicago, there are many conquerors, whose aviaries he adorned, or through fear, he has proven he always been widely spread, is a matter of little or no moment. Suffice, that he disappears for all but a few days of the year, as he would, if carried, yet into and there in any country prepared to receive him and to keep him and where there are forest woods or a fairly wild country for shelter, for he is a ready colonizer. He would doubtless have been carried from Asia into America from Asia centuries ago but for the reason that he would not be. He has been introduced into Europe, and there is prepared to receive him the ample woods of Virginia do not glow with his plumage, nor does he as low in one or three things which, as Professor says, "it would be prepared to do." It is not very difficult, in my humble country, to secure the pheasant, though it is not costly to do so. After his inhabits days his natural home is in the open ground, the beech nut, the root of the buttercup or the golden rod, the seeds of the wild flower fall he is quite ready—nay, more than ready—to take them. He is fond of the grain of artificial cultivation—the barleycorn, the buckwheat, the Indian corn, yet he even the ubiquitous potato. The difficulty with him (and this is the only point out of the question) is not to tear him in plenty, but to keep him in a large enough from the birds' bank. The charge is brought by Mr. Gilliden, banker of the bank. Price denies that he has done anything wrong.

I'm not one of those old fogies who are out of the question) is not to tear him in plenty, but to keep him in a large enough from the birds' bank. Not Half Warm Enough.

New York Tribune: "Warm?" he said, putting on a heavy pair of gloves and buttoning his coat, "I should say you don't call this warm weather, do you?"

"No," said the boy and the other, mopping his brow and trying to fan himself at the same time, "I don't call it warm by any means. I call it gridiron heat."

"Pooh, pooh, my dear fellow; the mercury isn't above ninety-two."

"Ninety-two!"

"Why, it hasn't been above a hundred more than once this year."

"Hundred! Gridiron! Gridiron!" cried the old man, "what are you talking about? Why, you're talking like a fool. Would you like to boil eggs in the public fountains? Do you want cannibals to roast their fortunes with—but first! One hundred! Do you know what a hundred is? Why, it's the centre and centre in reverse, that's what a hundred is. Why, man, haven't you got any blood in your veins?"

"Oh, yes," said the other, shivering on a warm breeze touched him, "but I have 40,000 tons of ice consumed."

And then the little stout man fell in a swoon and the audience carried him to the hospital, where he was recorded as suffering from prostration by heat, while the ice king went home to order the servants to put more coal on the fire.

FOOLING THE FARMERS.

What the Free-Trade Press Advises Them to Do.

They are Invited to Make the Home Market and Seek a Foreign—What the Result Would Be—Significant Words of Jackson.

A Free-Trade contemporary advises American farmers to abandon the combined efforts among themselves, and to unite from the single and simple cry—"Free raw materials"—in support of the principles of the democratic party.

This is why it is hoped that the American farmers may successfully compete in the markets of the world with the ryots of Hindostan, who earn from 3 cents to 5 cents per day of 16 hours, feeding on rice and other sparking stuffs, and by combining with farmers in Europe, and to unite upon the absolute and simple extinction of home competition, and the necessaries of life.

In this way it is hoped that the American farmers may successfully compete in the markets of the world with the ryots of Hindostan, who earn from 3 cents to 5 cents per day of 16 hours, feeding on rice and other sparking stuffs, and by combining with farmers in Europe, and to unite upon the absolute and simple extinction of home competition, and the necessaries of life.

Were not the favorite objective point of our valued contemporary so widely known, readers might suppose that it had selected the title its honesty advertising its intention of "fooling the farmers." But the contrast shows a serious and "a method in its madness."

After stating the undeniable results which would accrue if the unprotected American farmer should not succeed in his fraud entirely to ruin the domestic and African six cents per day men, it summarizes as follows:

Instead of listening to preposterous schemes of organizing a wheat trust against the head producers of the world, the manifest interest of American farmers is to crush the Tariff fed combines that oppress them, and to combine in the cost of necessaries which they consume.

The farmer will find the best remedy for his ills in the reciprocity measures which placed on the "cost of the necessaries of life," which our Free-Trade contemporary would increase by removing all duties on their importation, thereby, under the system of competition and consumption, the products of the farmer, especially breadstuffs, are necessarily increased in value. Reciprocity exists within our widely separated parallels of latitude for grain, beef, pork and dairy products. Every blow intended to destroy Protection is a stab at the farmer, and is more deadly in effect than that of any or all other classes.

And whence those taxes? Why this "cost of the necessaries of life" American farmers shall be degraded to the level of the Egyptian fellah, the Hindostan ryot or the Chinese coolie?

Just here it is both proper and pertinent to ask what is the importance of the much vaunted world's farketr to American farmers? Has England's home country has unimpeachable official statements of the proportion of our exports for the year ending June 30, 1887, both inclusive, as published in the report of the agricultural department for 1888, page 413.

These statements show that in the thirty-nine years from 1849 to 1888 "our market" our foreign exports averaged but 38 bushels of each 1000 produced, ranging from 1849 to 1859 from 1860 to 1870 63 bushels in 1877. In other words, the home men brought markets took of each 1000 bushels that

A bowl of distress was lately heaved because the six cents per day Asiatic and Egyptian fellah was driving the world's markets with cheap supply of wheat.

Over half a century ago (April 26, 1824), Gen. Jackson, in answer to a letter from Henry Clay, then Sec. of State, of Virginia, warning him that his tendencies to prefer American industries would lose him the support of the Presidency, wrote as follows:

"Dear Sir: From agriculture the super abundant labor, employ it in mechanism and manufactures, thereby creating a home market for the surplus produce, thus distributing labor to a most profitable account, and giving true wealth and independence to the country. Take from agriculture in the United States six hundred thousand men, and call them to the manufactories, and what would be the consequence? Increase the home market for more than double the present consumption of agricultural products, and you will create a home market for more breadstuffs than all Europe now furnishes us. In short, we have been too long subject to the fluctuating policy of those British merchants. It is time we should become a manufacturing people and Americanized, and instead of feeding the paupers and laborers of Europe, feed our own, or else in a short time, by continuing our present policy, we shall all be paupers ourselves."

Mr. James Parton, the biographer of Jackson, in his "Life of Jackson," vol. 3, page 20, says: "Henry Clay's ability to deliver a speech or Horace Greeley write an editorial more completely pervaded with the spirit of the protective policy than his letter of Andrew Jackson's is."

It is interesting to note the fact that the New England States, which never idolized Gen. Jackson, practically accepted his ideas and teachings by establishing a home market for their agricultural products, while the West, which idealized him as a myth, largely reject his wholesome teachings. The result is a serious agricultural depression, a loss per acre in two representative States in 1887, as per report of Commissioner of Agriculture for 1888, page 412, thus:

INDIANA.		MASSACHUSETTS.
Corn	$9.00	Corn	$40.00
Wheat	9.72	Wheat	14.80
Oats	3.78	Oats	7.83
Barley	7.83	Barley	12.33
Buckwheat	5.43	Buckwheat	9.90
Potatoes	12.15	Potatoes	25.00
Hay	11.52	Hay	18.00
Tobacco	45.00	Tobacco	5.40

If the old hero is cognizant of the fact that many of his party who exted him as the "great statesman" of democracy are figuratively speaking, defile his memory and teachings by advocating Free Trade, his bones would hardly be quiet in their coffin.

"This idea of an extensive domestic market for the surplus products of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture." "To secure such a market there is no other expedient than to promote manufacturing establishments." "It is the interest of a community, with a view to internal and permanent improvement, to encourage the growth of manufactures. In a National view, a temporary diversion of labor from agriculture to manufactures is necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Letter to Benjamin Austin, Boston.

What Protection Has Done.

The Way Major McKinley Sums Up the Result.

We have now enjoyed twenty-nine years of practical Protective Tariff laws—the longest uninterrupted period in which that policy has prevailed since the formation of the Federal Government—and we find ourselves at the end of that period in the condition of the most independence and prosperity the like of which has never been witnessed at any other period in the world's history, and more than all the like of which has no parallel in the records of history of the world.

In all that goes to make a nation great and strong and independent we have advanced with giant strides. In art, in science, in literature, in manufactures, in invention, in scientific principles applied to manufacture and agriculture, in wealth and credit and national honor we are at the very front, abreast with the best and behind none.

In 1860, after fourteen years of a revenue Tariff, just the kind of a Tariff that our political adversaries are advocating to-day, the business of the country was prostrated, agriculture was deplorably depressed, manufacturing was on the decline and the credit of the United Government itself made this nation a byword in the financial centers of the world.

We neither had money nor credit. Both are essential; a nation can get on against the head without either, but if it have it must have credit. We had neither. Such was the legacy of the revenue Tariff. Such we have both now. We have a surplus revenue and a spotless credit. We have more than a million men in our munis, to record in our history, as to be known to every gentleman who has read the facts from the inauguration of the Protective Tariff laws of 1861—the days of Buchanan's free trade—that that veteran statesman the highest honor and will give to him his proudest monument. No substitute for the Protective was restored, courage was inspired, and from that moment dated the progressive era under a system thoroughly American.

With a great war on our hands, with an army to enlist and prepare for service, with untold millions of money to save the Government, industries were springing up all over the land—the foundation of the present stone of our prosperity and wealth.

With a debt of over $2,600,000,000 when the war terminated, holding on to the protective laws, against Democratic opposition, we reduced that debt at an average rate of more than $62,000,000 every year, for the short working hours for the last twenty-five years, and what looked to be a burden almost impossible to bear has been removed under the Republican fiscal system until now it is $1,020,000,000, and with the present surplus of money in the treasury the nation has not been impoverished. The people have not been made poor burdened nor bankrupted. National and individual prosperity has gone steadily on until our progress is such as to be almost incomprehensible when put into figures.

The Tariff in Australia.

Protection in Victoria and Free-Trade in New South Wales.

Opposite fiscal policies, says an English journal, have been pursued in the two chief Australian colonies of Victoria and New South Wales, which are in point of fact, separated by a mere boundary is contiguous. The former has adhered steadily during the last twelve years to a Protective policy, while the latter has adopted for a very much longer period the policy of Free-Trade.

Protection and Free-Trade have now been tested by side by side in the most exact experiment for many years. With her natural disadvantages of distance from the mother country, with her vast mineral wealth in gold, silver, coal, iron, copper, lead, and with her more temperate tracts of pastoral land and timber, with a finer climate, a more central port and the grandest harbor in the world, the natural resources of New South Wales are in many respects greater than those of Victoria). And yet, strange to say, the little Protectionist colony is ahead of her rival in the Free-Trade competition in nearly every respect—a striking confirmation of Henry Clay's and Alexander Hamilton's theory of commerce in favor of Protection.

At the present England stands alone a Free-Trader in a ring of empires and republics protected by stringent Tariffs, but for a Free-Trade colonies are compelled to fall in with the fashion by fencing themselves round with fiscal defenses against the world, which had previously suffered with great depression of trade and financial embarrassment, has been forced to follow the example of Victoria, her sister colony, and since her adoption of a Protectionist policy there has been such a marked revival of business and increased prosperity that she has now a surplus of £250,000.

To sum up, the Protective colony is ahead in every respect where, shed in revenue, ahead in growth of population, ahead in railway development, ahead in banking, ahead in large manufactures and in the number of workmen employed, ahead in enterprise and capital, ahead in the field of industry and progress, and finally, although behind in mineral wealth, ahead in the value of her pastoral industry—in a word its entire prosperity—the bone and sinew of a country, and by perhaps the most contented and prosperous in the world.

Benjamin Franklin.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for grain. Every agriculturist who saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be expended to pay for the manufactures he supplies.

Thomas Jefferson.

We must now place our manufacturers by the side of the agriculturist.

Experience has taught us that manufacturers are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Letter to Benjamin Austin, Boston.

LOVE'S COMING.

Love came to me in life so late
That time had closed the outer gate—
So late it seemed the door was barred,
Bolts shot, and all the house rough scarred
That crazed my unbidden gave no sign
Of welcome to the god benign.
For Love with all his power dirties
Had come so late.

It seemed that soon would ever come
In answer to his knock, though sweet
Sweet thought stirred restless in my breast,
I essay ended from its long rest;
So strange were such fair visions that when
Love came and smiled, and called again,
It was first in vain, for then
I was too late.

No chamber had my soul prepared
Against his coming, none had dared
Foretell his advent. It did seem
More of a sweet, unstable dream—
Be such as entrance, sweet or sad,
Waking the drowsy lidded rest
Of fancies, passion-weed, like ghost,
Seemed all too late.

No rich feast had been spread for him;
All the guest chamber of my life within,
For fear had come that way to stain
Its every room—of the fetid fear
Had fled long, long before Love came—
And yet the close quarters with
All its appareneli; bolts shut aside;
All the life-long fear of Love had fled
Rang out the welcome of the crowd.
All the soul's inner self, the welcome him,
Bright grew my dimmest, darkest dream,
For after all Love came
Love came too late.

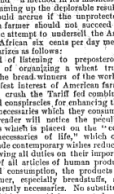
A LOVER'S STRATEGY.



MR. TILDEN was a man of "advanced ideas," to use a phrase goes. He flattered himself that he had educated his only daughter accordingly. He also believed in the power and advantages of wealth, and having a goodly share of it himself, had carefully arranged that Miss Adelaide should marry Mr. Lathrop, whose father was president of the board of trade, and had no end of goodly shekels salted down in a score of safe and durable investments.

Mr. Tilden loved to argue, and as young Dr. Belavan was quite a conservative the two would discuss various radical themes in the most animated manner, as the doctor mostly in the argue side. Yet—in practice—Mr. Tilden believed in the powers that be, and had arranged his daughter's future in advantageous style, and his fine socialistic ideas were attended—like the smoke of his cigar—for mere evaporation.

George Belavan had been away for several years, studying medicine, and had not recently returned with his sheepskin. He had not yet definitely located himself for practice, and while waiting had called upon Mr. Tilden, who received him in his customary manner. Miss Jennie, sitting by, hardly ever let more than listen to the fine Utopian theories discussed pro and con.

One night—perhaps because he was a little preoccupied—George assented unconsciously to a statement concerning woman's fitness and unfitness for certain things—the doctor said:

"Well, sir you may be right, yet I should like to tell you something of an affair that I knew of at our medical college. It is a love story. I don't suppose you will be interested, yet it will puzzle you to explain your own favorite principles in such a case."

"Go on, Doc; I've known you from boyhood, and we hardly ever agree on anything. But I like your theories, and I'm open to conviction. I can't stand a little friction let 'em suffer."

"In these words 'lovestory' Jennie, who was seated near by with a newspaper, looked up, then the morning Globe was cast aside impatiently and resumed her reading.

"I had a friend at college," said Belavan, "who was poor like myself, and named Adam Smith. From a child he had been left to his own resources, and his only daughter was all the world to him. SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING.

A special meeting of the city council has been called for this evening to take some action in regard to the water works. What can be done or what the outcome will be remains to be developed.

Treglawney, of the M. E. church. Grand Chancelor Hunt, and the other officers of the grand lodge, will be invited to attend. All knights in the city in good standing are invited to attend and bring their ladies; also to invite such of their friends as would like to attend. A good time is anticipated.

How to Live One Hundred and Fifty Years.

Those who heard Dr. L. B. Sperry lecture in this city a few weeks ago will certainly wish to hear him again. The Doctor has the happy faculty of entertaining and instructing an audience. No one but a chronic dyspeptic can listen to him and not enjoy a hearty laugh. A series of his lectures would "cure the dyspepsia." On next Monday evening, Oct. 13th, he will deliver one of his most popular lectures, "How to Live One Hundred and Fifty Years," for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. of this city. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged. The rooms ought to be crowded, and it is safe to say that no one, old or young, will leave without feeling that he has had more than his money's worth.

The apportionment of the proceeds of national lands among the public schools of the state, according to the school enrollment of each county, was reported on Monday by State Superintendent Kiehle. The enrollment for Crow Wing county is 1,620, and for Cass, 172. The per capita apportionment is $3.70, which gives Crow Wing county $6,657.30, and Cass county $636.40. The amount apportioned also includes the amount realized from the one-mill tax levied on property throughout the state for school purposes.

For Superintendent of Schools.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for superintendent of schools at the coming election. If elected, I promise a faithful performance of the duties of the office.
