HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which really is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now; when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

Notice of Mortgage Sale,

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by Thomas Kennedy and Mary Kennedy his wife, mortgagors, to Minnesota Saving Fund & Investment Company, mortgagee, dated October 1st, A. D. 1892, and recorded in the office of the register of Deeds of the county of Crow Wing, in the state of Minnesota, on the 30th day of November, A. D. 1889, at 9:30 o'clock p. m., and recorded in book D of mortgages, on page 548, and mortgaging the following described land and premises, situate in the county of Crow Wing, to-wit: The east seventy (70) feet of lots twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24), in block one hundred and eighty-nine (189), in the 1st addition to the town of Brainerd, according to the plat of said addition now on file or of record in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Crow Wing county.

Is the Keyes Election Law Constitutional?

It seems to me that in some of its provisions, it is not. For instance, the Constitution—Sec. 1, Art. 7—defines the qualifications of electors substantially as follows: Male persons, twenty-one years of age, who have resided in the United States one year, in this state four months, and in the election district ten days, and who are either citizens of the United States, or, if of foreign birth, have declared their intention, etc. Other provisions follow, but these are sufficient for the purposes of the points here made. The Constitution is, it is to be observed, silent as to registration, and does not require the legislature to enact a registration law.

Now, it seems to be settled, that, wherever the Constitution of a state defines how a right may be exercised, the legislature cannot provide for the exercise of that right in some other way, nor require an elector to possess qualifications not required by the Constitution, nor can those qualifications be added to or changed by legislative enactment. Cooley has held that the effect of a registration law is to create additional qualifications. It is said that, while the legislature may impose additional qualifications, they must be reasonable, impartial and uniform, and must not directly or indirectly deny or abridge the constitutional right of the citizen to vote, or unnecessarily impede its exercise. If they do they are void.

One voter cannot be required, for instance, to register, while another has the right to vote without registering. A law was passed requiring a registration, and provided for its publication, and unless so registered, an elector could not vote—held unconstitutional.

In looking over that part of our—the Keyes—law, it would seem to be neither reasonable, impartial, nor uniform. For example, it divides the state into five distinct classes, and provides a different registration for each. Again by Sec. 18 it is provided, that in cities of 12,000, or upwards, no person can vote unless registered, and by Sec. 12 in cities of 40,000 no person shall be registered unless he appear personally or register by affidavit. Practically a general registration.

In the case of Daggett vs. Hudson, 43 Ohio St. 548, in passing upon the validity of a law of the state requiring the registration of voters in Cincinnati and Cleveland, in all cases as a condition to a right to vote, and allowing only seven days in which to register and correct the registration, and making no provision for subsequent registration, or whereby those constitutionally qualified might vote upon showing good reasons for not having registered in time, the court held the act unconstitutional, and say: "We have been unable to find any case where a registration act has been upheld as a constitutional which contained similar provisions." It was held by the Supreme Court of Michigan, that a registration law is unreasonable and void if it provides for but five registration days, at one of which the elector must make personal application for registration, and that "the legislature has no power to restrain or abridge or unnecessarily to impede the free exercise of the ballot, and this law (of that state) disfranchises every person who will not attend the board of registration, and unreasonably and unnecessarily requires persons whose duties, public and private, are outside of Detroit, to return home to register."

Then, too, Sec. 3, Art. 15, Const., provides, that "the legislature shall provide for a uniform oath or affirmation to be administered at all elections." We submit that this law provides for divers and sundry oaths, but does not give the right to affirm to those who do not "swear at all."

So much as to the effects of this law upon the rights of the voter. But how about the would-be office-holder? Are his constitutional rights affected by this act?

Sec. 7, Art. 7 Const., declares that "every person who, by the provisions of this article, shall be entitled to vote at any election, shall be eligible to office, etc." That is to say, any person possessed of the constitutional qualifications of a voter, may hold office. Again Sec. 7, Art. 1, says that "no religious test or amount of property shall ever be required as a qualification for office of public trust under the state."

Now, notwithstanding these provisions of our constitution, the Keyes law imposes upon the candidate for office the further and additional requirement, among others, that he shall receive a nomination either by a convention or a political party holding, at the last election, at least one per cent of the vote cast in the district, or by a petition signed by at least one per cent of such vote. Applying the rules above cited, can it be said that this does not abridge, restrain or impede the right of the citizen to hold office? Suppose a person constitutionally qualified to hold office, should wish to run independent of any political party. He could receive no nomination by a convention, and he is forced to pass around a petition and secure at least one per cent of the vote named. What if there was no vote cast in that particular district at the last election? And if one per cent., why not ten or twenty or any other number of petitioners? To say the least it might prove a source of humiliation to the citizen who could not comply with all the red tape of this most wonderful law. And if the foregoing are held to be good law, what of that other provision which requires the candidate for office to put up a fee as a condition to his right to be voted for and to hold office? To hold a state office is necessary to pay the sum of twenty-dollars. Isn't this requiring "an amount of property as a qualification for office?" What if the amount is small? If the legislature has the power to require the payment of $20, it has the right to fix the amount at any other figure.

W. A. FLEMING.

JOHN SHERMAN has been returned to the U. S. Senate from Ohio.

THE DISPATCH for the eighth time has been made the official paper for Crow Wing and Cass counties.

ACCORDING to the Northfield News the scheme to set aside the northern portion of the state for a park will lose to the school fund of the state over ten millions of money. This alone should defeat the project.

THE scramble for tickets of admission to the Minneapolis convention will be something unheard of and the men who have the distributing will think life a burden.

YOUR COUCH

Has not yielded to the various remedies you have been taking. It troubles you day and night, breaks your rest and reduces your strength. Now try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, before the bronchial tubes become enlarged or the delicate tissues of the lungs sustain fatal injury. As an anodyne and expectorant, this preparation has no equal. It soothes the irritated membrane, promotes expectoration, and induces repose. The worst cough by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Dr. J. G. Gibbon, Carrol Co., Va., writes: "I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequaled as a remedy for colds and coughs."

Can Be Cured

"After the grippe—cough. This was my experience—a hacking, dry cough, with an incessant tickling in the throat, keeping me awake nights, and disturbing the household. I tried a great number of 'cough-cures,' but they gave me only temporary relief. At last I concluded to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before I had used half a bottle, I had my first all-night sleep. I continued to improve, and now consider myself cured."—A. A. Sherman, Coeymans, N. Y.

By Using

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, many have been saved from fatal illness.

E. D. Estabrooks, Canterbury, N. B., says: "In the winter of 1859 I was a surveyor of lumber in Sacramento, Cal. Being continually exposed, I took a bad cold accompanied with a terrible cough. I tried several remedies, but they failed to cure me, and was thought I was going into a decline. On the advice of a friend, I began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and less than half a bottle completely cured me."

The MANITOBA.

A REVOLUTION IN HOTEL LIFE IN CANADA.

On Dec. 31st the Northern Pacific railroad opened at Winnipeg their new hotel, The Manitoba. This structure which is unique in design and complete in all the arrangements that go to make a first-class hotel and a comfortable home for travelers, is located in the center of the business portion of the city at the corner of Main and Water Streets, and is by far the finest hotel and railway station in Canada.

The Manitoba will be conducted on the American plan. The fact that it has been placed under the management of Mr. W. J. Gunning, for years manager of the Minnesota Club, of St. Paul, gives assurance that the table and service will be perfect in every respect. The building contains in the basement and on the first floor all the accessary adjuncts of a first-class hotel, such as the rotund reception rooms, barber spop, laundry, toilet rooms, turkish baths, bar, billiard room, etc.

On the second floor are beautiful parlors and dining rooms, all finished in California red wood. The main dining room, which extends through two floors, is magnificent in size and decorations. Private dining rooms adjoin which are unsurpassed in their furnishings. The private parlors and bed rooms are 205 in number, many of them with bath rooms in addition. The furniture throughout is in keeping with the fine general appearance of the building. The sanitary arrangements are perfect. A complete steam heating and electric light plant, situated in a separate building, supplies the house with warmth and light.

On the first floor of the hotel are ticket offices, waiting rooms, etc., of the Northern Pacific Railroad, affording easy facilities for travelers taking this line south, east or west. Trains make their arrival and departure from a large iron shed which is adjacent to an extension of the hotel containing baggage rooms and express offices.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD says the worst to be said of a man in Japanese is that he is a "fellow." That country will have to borrow of the United States vocabulary if it is going into politics.

IT was to "pay his debts and avoid dishonor" that Lieut. Anastay of Paris is murdered his benefactress, the Baroness Dellard. A fine sense of honor like this, however, will not save a man from the guillotine in France.

THE Smith-Slusher feud has broken out afresh at Flat Lick, Ky., with fatal results. If the insignificant tribe of Slusher has taken the contract to exterminate all the Smiths, it simply shows how far the Slusher zeal outruns the bounds of discretion.

WHAT is believed to be the largest steel planer in this country was shipped recently from Plainfield, N. J., to Pittsburg, Pa. The bed of the machine weighs 43 tons, the table 20 tons and the cross rails 22 tons. The arch weighs four and one-half tons and driving gear four tons.

A NOTED French scientist, by comparing the products of various provinces several centuries ago and their products to-day, deduces the theory that Europe is certainly growing colder. A glance at the political sky, however, ought to assure him that things will be hot enough over there within a few months.

AND now another man has brought suit against a theatre because his view of the stage was obstructed by two enormous hats worn by ladies in front of him. The case this time comes from Minneapolis. The crusade is evidently a "mad" one now, but it is a good one, and what is better, it is catching.

A PRESS dispatch from Berlin informs us that on Christmas day the emperor and the other members of the royal family dined alone. Such startling sensations as this should be broken to the American people more gently. Otherwise those of us who are afflicted with supernervousness may be thrown into hysteria with possibly fatal results.

RELIGIOUS riots in Mexico and rows in France point to a singular defect in the character of Latin races. They may disestablish the church and divorce it from the state, but they can't let it alone a little bit. The Anglo-Saxon lets the religion tub stand on its own bottom and roar as it pleases without calling carnal weapons to make it subsist to state infiuences.

GEORGE DUNNAWAY, of Lebanon, Tenn., was sentenced the other day to two life terms, in the penitentiary, with a total of ninety years, and he is only years respectively for good measure. A great load of anxiety must have been lifted from Mr. Dunnaway's mind when he learned that his future life on earth and for a small section of eternity had been kindly mapped out by an accommodating court.

BROTHER WATKINS of the medical profession has taken a photograph of the grip microbe, which he declares is of a white color and covered with bristles. It does business with the blood rather than the mucous membranes, and gives people a pain by means of keeping in rapid motion. The drug that will put an end to pernicious activity of the germ appears to be far more elusive than the germ itself.

THE discovery of a coal mine near the Straits of Magellan may be set down to one of those happy incidents which happen only about once a decade. All the steamers which passed through the Straits have had to coal there. Hitherto this coal has been brought thither from Wales. This new mine, however, is said to show coal of fair quality for steaming and in sufficient quantities to meet the needs of the traffic. This discovery may not be altogether esteemed by the miners of Cardiff who finished the fed, but it will be appreciated by commerce.

Indians Chase a Scientist.

It is not safe for the scientist, in his zeal for the collection of specimens, to go into the country of Sonora Mexico, named Hurley, who recently delivered lectures on phrenology in Umatilla, Ore., has learned this lesson. He thought it would be an excellent opportunity to collect a number of skulls from the Indian graveyard on the other side of the Columbia, and crossing over in a boat he secured some choice specimens. On returning to Umatilla he was told that the Indians were much incensed at his offense in the eyes of the Indians, and, much alarmed, he made the trip again in private. That night, with a few companyand he encountered ten or a dozen straggling Umatilla bucks, who had gathered around the boat in the darkness of their forefathers. They advanced on the "predaceous" with an ugly look in their eyes, and, without offering an explanation, he dropped pick, shovel and "specimens," and made for the boat, the Indians at his heels. Before they could get into their canoes he was well over the water to Umatilla, and by the time the red men reached the town on pinalation beck, Mr. Hurley was on board a train bound for the next settlement.

More Than Enough Votes Pledged to Sherman to Secure a Caucus Nomination.

Foraker Hopeful of Winning in the Event of a Secret Ballot Being Taken.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Special Telegram, Jan. 6.—This is the finish of the most exciting senatorial contest Ohio has known for many years.

Gen. Sherman has gathered together enough votes to nominate him and now is engaged in swelling the number so as to ridicule Foraker's candidacy as much as possible. He has about 48 or 49 votes he can rely on and Tom Ewing is present writing 42 men whom he believes will support him to the last.

Sherman is probably to be nominated on the first ballot to-morrow night, but his victory will not be announced. With thirty years in public life, the veteran of the senatorial administration, of secretary of the treasury and the postoffice department, he will in all probability prove a hard man to beat. DEFINITIONS OF A BABY.

Some Definitions Called Forth by a Prize Contest.

The London Tit Bits recently offered a prize of two guineas for the best definition of "a baby". The following was the winning definition:

A tiny father of love, dropped into the sacred lap of motherhood.

The following is a selection from the best descriptions offered:

The bachelor's horror, the mother's treasure, and the doctor's grist.

A perambulator with a squall attachment.

A bundle of wedded joys and cares on its little shoulders.

Father's rival in mother's love.

A stranger with unspeakable cheek, that enters a house without a stitch to its back and is received with open arms by everyone.

The sapling of the tree from which will be built the bulwarks of our nation's future greatness.

A bursting bud on the tree of life.

The only precious possession that never excites envy.

A bold asserter of the rights of free speech.

The human screech owl, whose warbling sounds are demonical to some, melodious to mother and appealing to all.

The best developer of the most beautiful part of a woman's nature, "unselfishness."

A tiny useless mortal, but without which the world would soon be at a standstill.

The member of a family that always cries when wanted to sleep, that always sleeps when wanted to keep awake, and invariably wakes when wanted to show off.

The latest edition of humanity, of which everybody think they possess the finest copy.

A native of all countries, who speaks the language of none.

An invention for keeping people awake at night.

That which increases the mother's coil, decreases the father's cash, and serves as an alarm clock to the neighbors.

A mite of a thing that requires a mighty lot of attention.

A diminutive specimen of perverse humanity that could scarcely be endured if he belonged to someone else, but being our own is a never tailing treasury of delight.

A man or woman, making a start in life.

The unconscious mediator between father and mother, and the focus of their hearts.

A daylight charmer, and a midnight alarmer.

About twenty-two inches of coo and wriggle, writhe and scream, filled with suction and testing apparatus for smile, and automatic alarm to regulate supply.

A troublesome compendium of great possibilities.

A quaint little craft called Innocence, laden with simplicity and love.

A wee little specimen of humanity, whose winsome smile makes a good man think of the angels.

The sunbeam in the house that drives dull care away.

A curious bud of uncertain blossom.

A thing everybody thinks there is a great deal too much fuss about, unless it is their own.

A thing we are expected to kiss, and look as if we enjoyed it.

The one thing needful to make a home happy.

There is only one perfect specimen of a baby in existence, and every mother is the happy possessor of it.

The smartest little craft afloat in house's delightful bay.

A mine of humanity that will cry no harder if a pin is stuck into him than he will if the cat won't let him pull her tail.

A crying evil you only aggravate by putting down.

A baby is a tiny drop in the vast ocean of human life, capable of immense possibilities, and surrounded by great mysteries.

A little stranger, with a free pass to the heart's best affections.

The most extensive employer of female labor.

A padlock on the chain of love.

A key that opens the hearts of all classes, rich or poor, in all countries.

The delightful tyrant who rules the home, the mother's darling, the father's pride, the cause of a thousand income taxes, the best pledge of matrimonial felicity.

A pleasure to two, a nuisance to every other body, and a necessity to the world.

That which makes home happier, love stronger, patience greater, hands busier, indeed longer, days shorter, purses lighter, clothes shabbier, the past forgotten, the future brighter.

HELL IS FIFTY-TWO MILES AWAY.

Strange Belief of a Colored Minister and How He Argues It Out.

"Hell, or hades, or gehenna, or sheol, or the inferno, whatever you choose to call it, is a lake of fire and brimstone, exactly fifty-two miles below the surface of the earth at sea level, and has the cubic contents of 542,900 000 miles."

That is the statement made by Rev. C. A. A. Taylor, D. D., educational and financial traveling agent for the Florida African methodist episcopal conference, Indianapolis freeman representative and general preacher,

"I have come to this conclusion," he continued, "after a most painstaking investigation into the most comprehensive literature of science, philosophy and theology of libraries in Paris, London, New York and Boston, together with a minute investigation into the Holy Scriptures. I am a graduate of the French Academy of Philosophical and Sacred Literature at Paris, and am somewhat of a linguist. I base my belief on the Scriptures. In the first place Christ always speaks of hell as being down, and not up. Again, it is often and every time spoken of in the Bible as being a lake of fire and brimstone, and if it is not, why should the Bible say it is? You notice that where the Bible says that when Christ was three days in hell he lifted up his eyes. How could he look up if he was not already down? I get at my conclusion by estimating the increase of heat as we go downward, and have figured that at exactly fifty-two miles the heat is just great enough to melt any known substance. Here the lake of fire and brimstone begins, and it extends through the whole interior. It was once completely filled with a molten mass, but God has put it into the heart of man and constrained him to bring about the grand consummation. In obedience to God's mandate man is gradually emptying out this interior by sinking oil wells, natural gas wells and coal mines. Besides this, volcanoes are gradually preparing a place for the unregenerate who persist in disobeying divine law. The holy book says that at the coming of Christ the heavens will be rolled together as a scroll and burned with unquenchable fire. This means that the interior will be so emptied out that the crust will break in and the friction and heat will ignite molecular destruction will create the heat which will consume the world and leave only the lake of fire. The good will escape by being called to heaven.

THE ENGLISH OF A LATIN PROVERB APPLIED TO A CONCERN WHICH IS NOW IN BUSINESS.

A Business started upon shams, must resort to shams, or retire.

The Royal Baking Powder Company garbled official documents to give it standing.

For this it was publicly branded.

The Food and Dairy Commissioner of Ohio caught the Royal Baking Powder Company in the act of misquoting his report, to make its goods appear unadulterated.

The same Company stole the livery of the Board of Health of the State of New York and went on dress parade in the garment.

The Board exposed this. When the apparel was removed, of course the deformity was left alone.

Then the Royal Baking Powder Company resorted to constructing a speaking machine.

It called this machine "A Government Chemist. When it mouthed its words to order, the Royal Company quoted the same and passed them around. These words represented the Royal Baking Powder as pure, etc.

"Government" is a stately word. Like everything good, it is abused by unscrupulous tricksters.

SPEAKING THE TRUTH FOR A DAY.

CHAPTER I.

MAXIMA VERITAS.

"That's easy enough."

"Is it?"

"Of course it is. Besides, I always do speak the truth."

"Do you?"

"Why certainly I do! Do you mean to insinuate that I don't?"

"Oh, it's a matter of means! There, you see I do not always speak the truth when it would be rude, for instance—"

"Blewitt! I do believe you mean to question my veracity! And I won't stand it, that I know my mark!"

"Or dangerous," pursued Blewitt, without heeding the interruption.

"What the mischief do you mean? I feel as if there was something wrong in your talk at which I ought to take offence."

"Then don't my dear Morrice! I mean to say, if you always speak the truth you are a miracle of morality; I had almost said a monster of indignity!"

"I never told a false hood in my life; I have the grace to speak the truth, bald hood up!" said Morriss, growing red in the face.

"Good gracious! he has not the remotest idea of how fast he is lying to my thought Blewitt to himself.

"Falsehood!" continued Morriss, warming with the theme—"why, falsehood is the very essence of damnation, most degrading, the—the—the—"

"Oh yes, we know all that; but it is a necessary evil."

"And truth—Divine truth—is the very highest, the most beautiful, the most elevating—"

"Exactly! Yet if this lovely, this beautiful truth should ever come to prevail for one day in london, there would be—such a go as never was!"

"Why, Blewitt, you shock me!"

"Yes, but truth would shock the earth! Why, the destruction of Jerusalem, the sack of Rome, the Reign of Terror, would be child's play to the havoc and bullshed that would ensue if this world if the truth were spoken for one day! It would be confusion, disorder, chaos, and the world chaos came again!"

"Blewitt, I never will believe the world so bad as that—never!" exclaimed Morriss, earnestly.

"Then Bible says so, and I know it is—so wicked, so deceitful, and so self-deceiving, that it could not bear the light of truth for a single instant; for when that full light shall be poured upon the world—the last judgment will have come, for this earth will be no longer habitable."

"Blewitt, I cannot agree with you; I do not believe in your theory."

"Well, test it, my dear fellow—test it by bringing about the grand consummation. In obedience to God's mandate man is gradually emptying out this interior by sinking oil wells, natural gas wells and coal mines. Besides this, volcanoes are gradually preparing a place for the unregenerate who persist in disobeying divine law. The holy book says that at the coming of Christ the heavens will be rolled together as a scroll and burned with unquenchable fire. This means that the interior will be so emptied out that the crust will break in and the friction and heat will ignite molecular destruction will create the heat which will consume the world and leave only the lake of fire. The good will escape by being called to heaven.

"This is why the sun moves around the earth and does not say that the earth is round. For that reason I believe the earth is flat. I am, at least, not as reasonable as the scientists believe it to be. I have myself concluded that there are many suns and that we may have a new one every day."

"Oh—ah—yes—no—although that is my principal pleasure in going to church."

"I'll take you up at that!"

"It is a bargain, then!"

"Yes; but mind, by speaking the truth for a day or a week—or, indeed, I always do—I do not mean to say that I am going about voluntarily to insult everybody by telling them of their little faults, or peccadilloes, or misfortunes."

"Certainly not. You are to answer truly only such questions as are put to you, and such observations as are addressed to you in your daily routine of business or pleasure, in accordance with the little world around you."

"That is simple enough. But stop—here you've got me into conversation with your acquaintances, putting them up to ask me awkward questions which it would be rude to answer truly."

"On my honor, no! All shall be fair, for I wish the experiment fairly tested. I myself engage to put no subject directly or indirectly to a single soul during the allotted week, nor must you, should you be hard up before the end of that time, spoil all by saying you cannot tell a lie now, for have taken the pledge to speak the truth for a week."

"Certainly not. I should never under any circumstances make an apology for speaking the truth."

"Then we understand each other?"

"Perfectly. When does my probation begin?"

"At what time do you rise?"

"At seven."

"Then from seven o'clock tomorrow, being Monday, April 1st, you must begin to speak the truth, and preserve until Monday, April 8th, by which time you will be comfortably dressed in Bedlam, undergoing the refreshing discipline of the straight-jacket and the shower-bath," said Blewitt.

Morriss laughed incredulously, and the friends having reached the end of their argument and the corner of the street at the same moment, parted, and each went his own way.

Blewitt and Morriss had been school-mates, neighbors, and friends from boyhood. They were both of the same age—hopeful twenty-five. But Blewitt, the junior partner in a stock-broker's firm, was the tallest, handsomest, and richest man of the two, and consequently had seen more of life than his simpler friend.

The origin of the argument with which the chapter opens was this:—The young men had been attending evening service in a fashionable chapel, in which a highly celebrated popular preacher had held forth upon the fearful state in which the world had taken their portion in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone for ever and ever.

This preacher spared neither rich nor poor, age nor sex, man, woman, nor child, in his fierce denunciation of the daily, universal, crying sin of falsehood. All the fashionable, in a manner and pure Saxon, he told the lords and ladies present, whom probably had drawn to hear the modern John Knox, that they lied to each other, to their friends, and to the world; that they lied in their chambers, in their drawing-rooms, and in their churches; that even the church of God! He told the tradesmen that their customers lied to them; the professional men that they lived by lying and the little children that they told falsehoods by signs long before they were able to do so by speech.

In a word, he dealt with all with the warmest corner of that warm lake. Near the close of his sermon, after a storm of denunciation directed in a shower of compassion, and with tears in his eyes, he implored his congregation "to reform" this sinful habit "altogether;" to make a beginning to try, by the grace of God, to speak the truth, if only for a week—for a day—and see how much it would benefit them.

The congregation had left the church, making various comments upon this extraordinary sermon.

Blewitt and Morriss had been among the hearers. Morriss thought truth-telling an easy matter. But Blewitt took him up, and bound him by a pledge to try it for a given time, as has been said.

CHAPTER II.

"THE TRUTH SHALL MAKE YOU FREE."

Joseph Morriss lived in Little Britain, with his bachelor uncle and maiden aunt, Jacob and Ann Morrice, of whom it need only be said, that they were ordinary commonplace people, who considered wood in their own class; fat as most persons are between fifty and sixty; fond of business, and who nobody crossed them; kind to their nephew when he behaved himself, and otherwise when he did otherwise. They had retired before Joseph had returned from chapel that Sunday evening, and had gone immediately up to his chamber in the third-floor front, and to bed, and to sleep, without ever dreaming of the troubles that might be in store for him.

He arose the next morning at his usual hour, dressed, and went down to the breakfast-parlor, where he found his aunt making breakfast and his uncle reading the morning paper.

"Good morning, uncle! good morning, aunt! how do you do this morning?"

"Ah, good morning, Joe! hearty! hearty! how are you?"

"Very well, I thank you, sir," was on Joe's lips, but feeling that he had the headache, and knowing that he had pledged to refrain from conventional falsehoods, he answered truly:

"I am not well, sir; I have a headache."

"What! a headache at your age! Bless my soul alive! what are the young men of the present made of? Why at your age I hardly knew I had a head, except, when it required washing! Here, aunt, look at me now, how stout and well I look!"

"Yes, sir," was on Joseph's tongue; but he remembered that he must simply truthfully to every observation addressed to him, and so he answered—

"I don't think you look well at all, sir."

"Eh?"

"I don't think you look well."

"Eh! what do you mean! why don't I look well, sir! tell me that you do."

"Because you are too fat, too short-necked, too full-faced, and—and—"

"Apoplectic you mean, sir!"

"Yes, uncle."

"By George!" exclaimed the startled and indignant old man.

"Oh, Joseph, what do you mean by say such shocking things? cried his aunt, in consternation.

"He asked me questions, and I told him the truth," replied the young man very gently.

"Yes, and I believe he wishes that I was dead!" exclaimed the old man.

"No, uncle; I do not. I should be sorry, indeed, to reasonably sorry if you were to die."

"Reasonably sorry! And I suppose you would be reasonably glad to get that legacy you expect to get from me!"

"No, sir, I should," replied the truth-teller.

"By George!" cried the old man, jumping up and trotting up and down the floor—"he gets worse and worse! he adds insult to insult with perfect coolness. You, sir, answer me what do you mean by such conduct!" he demanded, suddenly stopping in front of his nephew and trembling with suppressed anger.

"I mean to tell the truth without fear or favor."

"You—you unnatural ungrateful monster!" gasped the old man, shaking with fury.

"Oh, Joseph, what makes you behave in such a shocking manner! What have we done to deserve it!"

"I am only telling the truth, aunt."

"You know you don't mean what you say!"

"Yes, I do, aunt!"

"You don't, you know you'd be inconsolable if I or your good uncle were to die."

"No, I shouldn't, aunt!"

"Ah! you unnatural monster, you mean to kill us!" shrieked Miss Ann Morrice, throwing herself into a chair and putting her handkerchief to her eyes, and bursting into tears.

"No, I don't mean to kill you, aunt; I don't mean to kill anybody. I am incapable if you and uncle were to die; and of course I shouldn't; no young man likes to be left to shift for himself, as aunt and uncle die."

"Oh, you heartless young villain, you make my blood run cold!" sobbed the poor woman with hysterical passion.

"Let him alone, Molly! Say no more to him!" cried the old man, stamping into a chair and seizing the cruet, intent on slowly, but the day after crucioned and perspiring face—"say no more to him! Send a hospital for decayed monkeys! I will, sir! Come move, sir; tramp! get out of my house, sir!" shouted the old man, maddened with rage, and rushing upon his nephew, as though he would have expelled him by exit with the toe of his boot.

"Not like this, uncle! Not breakfast, I beg of you, John! It's bad goingthat on a raw morning with a fasting stomach."

"Breakfast! he should not eat another mouthful in his house if he were starving," shouted the old man in a fury.

Tears started to Joseph's eyes; he longed to throw himself into his aunt's lap, or around his uncles neck, as he had been used to do whenever he got into disgrace in his rather naughty boyhood; but then he was pledged not to explain or apologize in telling the truth. So he only took his hat, and with a "Good-by, uncle; good-bye, aunt," left the house.

"I'm ungrateful, unnatural young monster!" roared the old man, in such a frantic rage as we can only get into with those we love.

"The cold-hearted young villain! He nearly from my blood!" Sobbed the old lady.

"My dead brother's child to turn out on! Ugh! ugh! ugh!" choked the old man.

"It is enough, it is, to make poor Jem's head rattle in his grave!" wept Miss Mary.

"What did he intend by such an attack upon us! demanded Mr. John.

SWALLOWED THE LEECH.

A Miner Who Acquired a Poor Opinion of the Bloodsucker.

The other day a couple of gentlemen, one of them a city official, were in a drug store while the clerk was tying up several leeches that the doctor had ordered. At the sight of the cotyledons the dread began to smile and then broke out into a hearty laugh, the worms evidently bringing to mind some amusing incident. At last he said:

"I never see a leech or hear the word but what I think of an occurrence that happened in a small mining camp in Arizona, long before I ever thought of going to Butte. In one of the mines a brawny Irishman was employed as a miner. One day he broke his shoulder and we packed him to his boarding house. The nearest doctor was thirty miles away and a messenger was sent for him. In the meantime the boys had engaged a barum scarum fellow known as Billy Moore to act as nurse for the injured miner.

"The next morning the doctor arrived, and after fixing up Pat's shoulder he left directions with Moore what to do, and gave him some leeches, two of which he instructed him to apply to Pat's shoulder, and then went away. Pat happened to be asleep at the time and the doctor told Moore not to disturb him, for he would wait until he awoke and then place the leeches as directed. As soon as the doctor was out of sight Moore slipped out and took a number of drinks, and when he returned to Pat's room he was pretty full. Pat was awake and aware of the doctor had left any medicine for him. Moore produced the leeches and said: 'Pat, the doctor left me to give you two of these when you awoke. I'll be—if I know what they are, but you've got to take 'em.'

With this he compelled poor Pat to swallow the two leeches. The effect almost killed him, but he managed to get the thing down some way and took a big drink of water to take the taste out of his mouth. Moore then took another leech and handed it to Pat should take it also. Pat backed at it awhile and then said:

"'Wells, Billy, I'll dot,—it, but I'll not take another wan o' thim things."—Anaconda, Mont., Standard.

A PRETTY GIRL'S PLAN.

To Be Rid of the Too Numerous and Too Ardent Swain.

One Lewiston girl believes that prayer meetings are not the place for flirtations and pairing off. She has found out it to expect one evening when waiting at the church door every Sunday night with the question whether or no he may go home with her. She generally puts it off herself of both, and probably has. She went to the cake walk in Lyceum Hall recently and during the evening both asked per mission to escort her home. She said yes to both. They both waited for her on the landing, and when she came downstairs she smiled and took one of each young man's arms.

At first they hesitated a little, but then went down the last flight of stairs at a jerky gait. At the foot of the stairs they both let go her arm and walked up Lisbon street, looking ugly at each other. She entered alone and both with lively stories of the evening's entertainment. Each thought that the other would drop off at the next corner and so kept on until they had left the corner where each thought he would leave. Then they went past corner after corner whereeach thought surely he would leave and say good night, for had not the girl said he might go home with her. So on they went until the last corner was reached, and with a pretty thought about the effect of the moon on distant leaves in the gutter she asked them to see how bright it was late and looked nervous. "Can't you both come up and see me Thursday evening?" she asked, "Mamma would be pleased to meet you."

They said not a word, but the next Thursday evening?" she asked, "Mamma would be pleased to meet you."

They said not a word, but the gentlemen played restlessly with the banner of his rifle.

"I'll only one shot to git the children," continued the hunter. "It's risky and despirit, with a flight to make, anyway, an' a big slice of the scalps. But if you've a mind for the undertakin' why I'm yer."

"Try it, of course we will," said Harry. "Lead off! I'm with you to the end."

"The fust thing," said the hunter, tilt to keep fur back along their trail till sundown. They may ride all night, or they may go into camp soon after dark. Anyway we've got to be where we'll shape our doin's 'cordin', as we find things."

The hunter swung into his saddle, and the two companions followed the Indians who had passed out of sight. They pushed forward rapidly, but cautiously.

"Keep still," said the hunter, "what a watch the varmints kep. It'll be a hard job to locate 'em in the dark; but we've got to do it, or we're gone."

After nightfall the two riders advanced more briskly. At last the hunter pointed ahead, and Harry could see the smoke.

They remained in the darkness and was gone a long time.

"I've got 'em located,' he said, when he returned. "They've built a big fire, so cunnin' that I high missed 'em altogether. We'll take our horses a little nearer and then I'll creep and do to rout 'em."

"That's the head o' the holler," whispered Gray. "We'll leave our horses here an' crawl over the high ground to the left. Keep low an' follow me."

A Wonderful Marianna Man.

Mauch Chunk, Pa., is talking about a wonderful man in their midst. His name is Spencer Long and he was born in Marianna, Brazil. He is now perfectly fair, except a few dark spots that may be discovered by looking at him closely. His children are as dark as he was in his youth, while his wife is a typical blonde of white skins. When he was about twenty-eight years old the change began to appear on one of his arms, and thence spread over his body. Spencer is quite healthy and looks ten years younger than he is." But Georgia enters a claim on him on the ground that it is his birthplace.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RICE AT WEDDINGS.

The Gauntlet the Bride and Groom Have to Run.

I wish a few hearty swells would set their faces against the hideous rice scuffle de rigueur at the close of wedding receptions. The custom of throwing rice after departing lovers comes to us from the east, where rice is a sign of plenty and prosperity. This emblematical idea is lost, and instead of a few grains softly falling, we pelt and smother and bombard our ladies with thorough brutality, and literally the practice has degenerated into a senseless and unseemly fight. Yesterday the "going off," with the pretty traveling toilet, the handshakings, friendly speeches, and farewell kisses was a tragic epilogue to a trying drama. Now this episode is a thing of the past.

When the bride emerges, ready to start on life's journey, she is assailed on the thought of the ordeal in prospect. She sees the principal adieus in private, for the guests, like ravening wolves await her below. A serried phalanx blocks the hall and the staircase and extends in masses to the door of the carriage. Flushed and excited faces are turned to greet the victims, and every strong right hand is clenched. The bridegroom, white, determined and awkward, joins his wife, and they make a desperate, wild dash for the carriage, which, with a sympathetic crowd close upon them, the stinging grain is buried in their unprotected faces, trickles down their backs, gets into their mouths, and up their sleeves. Farewells are impossible, and no one gets a glimpse of the faultless costume evolved with such infinite pains.

With the instinct of self-preservation, the bride defends herself as best she can, and the couple literally run the gauntlet of the dancing rice.

With a supreme effort they gain the door, bolt like rabbits into the brougham, and the couple, who have been the objects of general attention, start on their honeymoon, smuggled into the carriage, bruised, battered, and generally disheveled.

Is it not time that this custom was done away with? Surely it is not necessary that we should be compelled to run the gauntlet of the dancing rice.

Like a Venomous Serpent.

KICKAPOO INDIANS On the War Path.

NATURE'S REMEDIES.

Some six or seven years ago Mr. Frank Cushing, of the Smithsonian Institution, secured the services of Mr. Joseph Rogers, a very sick man, was being treated, in fact, for consumption. The physician was given him in the hope that residence in the warm south would benefit him. Mr. Rogers, however, gradually grew worse, and finally died. Before his journey to Mexico terminated, however, he made a friend in the Indians who nursed him assiduously and finally made a well man of him. Before he died Mr. Rogers had learned their language, religion and science of medicine.

ATTACKING POPLAR.

One occurrence he discovered was that the principal cause of his cure was a liquor whose component parts were unknown to the Indians. They had it in great esteem and twice every year attempted to secure the secret from the Indians, who manufacture it, but purchase a supply of it. Several times the Sioux attempted to procure the secret, but without position, but always without success. Once they attempted by force the coveted knowledge from the Kickapoos and made war upon them for that purpose, but were repulsed.

Fortunately a white man was more enterprising than the Kickapoos, and being their doctors, when old age necessitated their doctors to travel southward and sent a group of them to Texas and Mexico. Dr. Brigelow was the first white man to secure the secret of the Kickapoo Indian Medicine Company, with headquarters at New Haven, Conn., and the manufacture of Sagwa, Kickapoo Indian Medicine and Kickapoo Oil. Soon ten thousand men are employed, and the capital of the company $500,000. Orders rolled upon here only, the sales of the Company last year were 5,000,000 bottles of Sagwa, 400,000 bottles of the Kickapoo Indian Oil, and 1,000,000 bottles of the Kickapoo Cough Cure, and 500,000 boxes of the Kickapoo Worm-Killer and about 90,000 boxes of Kickapoo salve.

The Sagwa is a tonic purely vegetable in character, being the true principle of living in water certain variation of trees, leaves, herbs and flowers, which has been proven by years of sickness to that it results from a poverty of the blood, impairing cessation or disgestion or the action of one or more of the vital organs. Hence its direct effect in restoring the digestive and assimilative action of one or more of the vital organs. strengthening of the blood. This the Sagwa effects beyond question, though just how it acts will probably not be known until the Kickapoos are willing to make the ingredients of their great specific known. Its benefits are so many that it is noted in the Kickapoo themselves as the finer race physically and mentally of the world both men and women are tall, strong and well developed. There is not a weakling in the tribe. They are a very regular people. Like the Zunis they are very exclusive and have never yet intermingled with the white race, save in business relations generally. Isolation from the reports of early medical science in this country, were healthy people until intemperance and diseases contracted from white people began to play havoc with them. The Kickapoos are a very religious people, and their theories as to the cause of disease are based upon the fact that Sagwa keeps them healthy is the reason. A desire for alcohol often arises from irregular action of the liver or stomach. Sagwa is a tonic and will in a fact that it

The Kickapoo Indian Oil is a very valuable remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, pain in the back, kidneys and chest. As a quick cure for all kinds of pain it is unequaled. Also for burns, bruises, scalds, nails or accidental externally. For children and croup it is a boon. Every household should have a bottle. Price 25 cents per bottle.

The Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure is an invaluable Indian remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, hoarseness, sore throat, etc. It is purely vegetable and contains no opium. The price of the Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure is 50 cents per bottle. The Kickapoos are very skilled medicinal herbalists, and have given to the Kickapoos. Their cures are wonderful, proved by the fact that they have secured the confidence of both, notwithstanding the fact that they have been forced to travel in north, south of the United States and have little faith in "this country." In my home when they have been, and always will be, a supply of Sagwa, as least, it always kept on hand for it is found to be necessary almost every day in the week.
