HORRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT

Two People Burned to Death While a Score More are Seriously Injured.

A Broken Rail Causes the Accident.

One of the most horrible railroad accidents in the history of the Northern Pacific road occurred this morning six miles east of Brainerd, near Jonesville. At 12 o'clock last night a special, the second section of No. 9, left West Superior. The train consisted of a baggage car and sleeper, the latter coach being occupied by the Andrews Opera Co., who were on their way to Grand Forks where they were to appear this evening. The train was in charge of Conductor Eugene Hall and Engineer Charles Leach. The night was one of the coldest in the season, the thermometer marking as low as 62 below zero. When about a quarter of a mile this side of Jonesville, at 3:25 a. m., the train struck a broken rail, the engine and baggage car jumping over in a flash and the sleeper was derailed. No one but the occupants of the sleeping car knew there was anything wrong, and quicker than it takes to write of it the car toppled over on her side and broke in two from the balance of the train sliding down a few feet embankment and lying in that condition. The jar occasioned by the car breaking led to the scene of the widest commotion which was witnessed. The car lay on its side and several people had already made their exit through the windows which had been broken. At this juncture the flames broke out, fanned by the draught and fed by the coal oil from the lamps which had broken and saturated everything. Fire-bruising shrieks and cries for help, screams, moans and calls for women. Brains were pated at the sight and commenced with resolute hands to rescue the perishing. It seemed to those who were outside that surely many must be burned to death before the fire could be put out. By this time the whole car was a mass of flames and women clad in scanty garments were being taken from the scorching mass by their hair and night clothes in flames. It was a sickening sight. Finally the crowd of men and women had been rescued, but upon a count it was discovered that Mrs. Edward Andrews and Mrs. Lillie Wallace, her maid, were missing. It was thought for awhile that the former lady had escaped from the fire and a search was made into the woods in a dashed confusion. There was no sign of her anywhere at the awful scene, so every effort had been put forth, and it was not until she had perished it was not for lack of willing hands and courageous hearts. The severity of the weather made the sufferings of the injured more intense, and the members of the troupe were placed in the baggage car and brought to this city, where they were housed at the Arlington hotel.
