A KING PIN.

The king and queen of pins are in our stock and he's a jack who don't admire them. ——you don't happen to be stuck on o—— pins, however, we can show you 2—— pins' stock of other things. This is the point that pricks the bubble of competition. Honest dealing is the immediate jewel of business and is a part of our stock in trade. Holiday buyers will do well to call upon us before it has been too largely depleted.

IF IN A DUTY you are yourself and family. If it is to buy the best shoe you ever wore, it is unwise to pay the extra price for the same shoe. If you want the most stylish, easy fitting, perfect calfskin, at the cheapest price, you will find it at

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN
A genuine sewed shoe, that will not rip, for stylish appearance, comfort, and wearing qualities is unsurpassed, and cannot be equaled at any price. Equals custom shoes costing from $5 to $6.

$4 and $3.50 Hand-sewed, Flexible Shoe. The most stylish and comfortable dress shoe ever offered at $4 and $3.50; the same grade as those sold by other dealers at $5 and $6.

$2.50 Police, Farmers' Shoe will outwear two pairs of ordinary $2 shoes; a trial will convince the most skeptical that for the money they are the best shoe ever worn; they are very easy to walk in, and will not rip.

$2 and $1.75 School Shoes are worn by the boys everywhere, and give universal satisfaction. The increasing sales show that workingmen have found them out.

Boys' $2.00 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoe are made from the same stock and with the same care as those sold for more money.

Ladies' $3.00 Hand-sewed, $2.50 Welt, $2 and $1.75 Shoes. These are the most stylish, comfortable and durable shoes ever offered for the money; they equal shoes costing from $4 to $5.00. Ladies who wish to economize in dress will find these shoes just suited to their wants.

Name and price is stamped on the bottom of all shoes sold by me; take no substitute. If the dealer you trade with cannot supply you, I can. Shoes sent by mail or express to any part of the country. Catalogue free. Agents wanted in unoccupied territory.

A NEW YORK paper solemnly announces that one of the hotels of that city is to "be enlarged by reducing the size of its immense rooms"

THE champion pickpocket lives in England. He went through a church fair with gratifying results—to himself —and left an empty purse belonging to some one else in the pocket of the horrified bishop.

A BABY boa constrictor fell out of a lot of bananas unloaded at Washington, D. C., the other day, and after the boa had become cold it was captured for the zoological gardens.

A TEST case brought by the city of Providence against a man for selling adulterated milk was lost. It is alleged that the jury was confused with technical terms and Latin words.

A PAST penman will write at the rate of thirty words a minute, which means that in an hour's steady writing he has drawn his pen along a space of 300 yards.

JAMES I. of England introduced the fashion of turning up the brim of the hat at the side and holding it in place with a group of feathers and a diamond star.

THE stewards of St. Nicholas society, New York, have an annual "testing dinner" in order to decide upon the caterer whom the society shall patronize.

Record of Casualties.

It is estimated that the photographers of this country consume annually in the making of their millions of photographs compounds of silver and gold to the value of nearly $100,000.

SCIENTISTS have discovered, it is said, that the memory is stronger in summer than in winter. Too much food, too much physical exercise and too much excitement are among the worst foes of the memory.

THE French statesmen who are about to vindicate their reputations by challenging their accusers could save time, money and gore by employing the Marquis de Mores to meet all comers. He would enjoy the job.

H. DEVAUX has been making experiments with the sense of taste in ants, in course of which he found that while fond of sugar they dislike saccharin, and even refuse sugar when mixed with saccharin.

Now is the time to sort over your last year's New Year resolutions and see if they will do for the annual display. The whiskey trust is doing what it can to strengthen the spines of the bibulous.

THE governor of the electric light works in Sedalia, Mo., broke and the engine jumped from 500 to 2,000 volts. The globes burst in the street car and there was great excitement for awhile.

DR. KEELEY has a rival. A California toper has discovered that a copious draught of kerosene oil will quench a whisky thirst for 24 hours. It is hardly probable, however, that Coal Oil Clubs will ever become a popular fad.

A DAKOTA genius has invented a horizontal wind which will push a buggy against the wind by wind power. It is no trick at all for that same gentleman to lift himself clear of the ground by his bootstraps.

ISUGO, county Cal., has a wonderful natural curiosity, which closely resembles a monster petrified elephant. The rock which is the feature has given such an extraordinary form is a dark gray granite, almost the exact colors of the Asiatic elephant's skin.

RUSSIAN law has little peculiarities as well as the statutes of other countries. To speak disrespectfully of the czar is tantamount to a life sentence to Siberia, while for a midwife to slaughter a hundred innocents calls for a year's imprisonment.

THE Society for the Protection of Birds of Great Britain has increased in membership during the past year from 1,200 to 5,200. Its annual report says the English goldfinch is threatened with extinction, because of the present demand for its feathers for "murderous millinery."

THE stinging nettle was introduced into Great Britain by the Romans. They transported the obnoxious weed that they might crack their benumbed limbs with its leaves when overcome by the unaccustomed cold of this Northern isle. To our ears such rigorous treatment hardly sounds well.

THE city of Avignon, France inherited almost half a million francs recently from a man named Marcelin, who had lived in the place as a beggar for decades. In preparing his body for burial the bonds and money were found in his clothes. The "beggar" allowed his sister to starve to death a year ago.

ST. LOUIS has an affliction of typhoid fever. Three hundred and twenty new cases were reported in a single day, and the total number of cases reported during the month of November was 1,358. The outbreak has been traced to the water supply. St. Louis gets her water from the Missouri river. If cholera should get into the town while the present unsanitary condition prevails it would be a second Hamburg.

THE congresses held in Spain during the present year in commemoration almost rival in number and variety those that it is proposed to hold in this city in 1893. They include the congress of Americanists, pedagogic congress, congress of spiritualists, the catholic congress, geographical congress, congress of free thinkers, Hispano-American-Portuguese mercantile congress, a Spanish-American legal congress and minor congresses of artisans and others which pass almost unnoticed.

AN ALLEGED DYNAMITER

IS ARRESTED FOR PLACING THE EXPLOSIVE.

A Man Suspected of Being the Culprit Arrested in County Tipperary—The Explosion the Result of a Conspiracy.

He Is One of Many.

Dublin, Dec. 28.—A man named Kernan has been arrested at Nenagh, County Tipperary, on the charge of being connected with the dynamite outrages. Kevans is a stranger to the townspeople and is unable to give a satisfactory account of his movements.

The government is apparently acting upon the theory that the present outrages are the result of a conspiracy, and the police are making active inquiries as to the movements of the principal force factions, to whose operations the dynamite outrages have lately been paid. So far as James Stephens, head center of the Fenian brotherhood, is concerned no suspicious estate has he as anything now to do with plots or conspiracies, but it is intimated that some of the younger advocates of physical force have been very busy of late. The anti-Parnellites are becoming suspicious of Parnellites, and the latter assert that no more outrages will occur respecting them than for charging the crime to their antagonists. Some have also denounced the authors of the explosions as enemies of Ireland.

Kevans is twenty-six years of age. He admits that he was in Dublin last week up to Sunday morning. The arrest of Kevans caused great excitement. A police sergeant had been informed of the arrival in Nenagh of a suspicious stranger, and had followed Kevans from place to place. Kevans saw that he was watched and tried to elude the sergeant he was taken into custody. In his possession he was found dispatch papers bearing the name of a steamer plying between Liverpool and Glasgow, and dated in July last.

Cork, Dec. 28.—A meeting of citizens was held this evening for the purpose of denouncing the dynamite outrage. The mayor of Cork presided. Alderman Barry, M. P., moved the following resolution expressing "detestation and condemnation of the atrocious outrage, and the hope that in the true interests of our comrade country the authors of so terrible a crime may be found guilty." The resolution was seconded by Alderman Healy, and carried unanimously.

A reporter for the New York Herald was the only passenger in a street-car. Midway of a block another man got in. His hat was crushed, and his clothing daubed with mud. For a time he sat silent. Then he hitched up toward the reporter and began: "I guess I'm the biggest fool running cows in this town."

"So?" answered the newspaper man.

"Yes, sir. I haven't got sense enough to let go without a argument. See that car on ahead there?"

The car was half a dozen blocks away.

"Couldn't catch it, eh?"

"Yes, I could. That's the trouble. I did ketch it, an I gin the conductor a dime on the hind platform, an' he gin me a nickel change. Then some how I up an' dropped the nickel overboard. I hollered to the conductor to stop, but he wouldn't so I up and jumps off backwards. Look at my clo'es! When I got up that car was out o' reach, so I had to wait for this one."

"Did you find your nickel?"

"Oh yes, found that right enough. Lost my car, though, after I had skinned my back just for the privilege of pay'n' up that five-cent piece an' gittin' on," this conductor."

His Second Splice.

"Well, I see old Jack Weathergage has got spliced again.'

"You don't mean to say his first wife is dead?"

"Oh, no, indeed. Weathergage fell on his way from church Sunday and broke his wooden leg. Carpenter Hodson has been up to Jack's all the morning with a plane and a handsaw."—From Texas Siftings.

Chinese babies have a hard time of it, according to a writer in the Business Miller Illustrated Monthly. When they are a month old their heads are shaved, the operation being attended with much ceremony. The almanac is consulted to determine what is the most propitious day to see and touch and what things they may not.

The first time babies have home they are taken to see their grandmothers, who present them with four chickens, four onions, two heads of cabbage, several pieces of sugarcane and a lot of rice pods, as if such things could be of any use to an infant without a tooth in his head.

Parents have such control of their children that they may even pawn or sell them if they desire to, and they can chastise them so unmercifully that the children die of punishment without any attention being paid to it by the authorities. On the whole it appears that the lot of the infant and of the small boys and girls is not an enviable one in the Celestial dominions.

Do Cyclones Come From Above?

There has been of late a tendency toward a change of view in regard to the origin of those widespread storms known as cyclones. M. Faye, the French astronomer, has long argued that they originate in the upper regions of the atmosphere, instead of at the surface of the earth.

Recently Mr. W. L. Dallas has announced, as the result of his studies of the cyclones of the Indian Ocean, that the probability seems to him to be that those whirling storms "descend from and retreat to the superior layers of the atmosphere."

Much more study will be required, however to settle the question, but it is surely more interesting to think that storms should come to us in the way suggested. The atmosphere is a part of ocean, at whose bottom we dwell, and if Mr. Faye's view is correct, the storms that whirl over us must first lash the air far above our heads, just as a whirl started in water may have its way down toward the bottom, and disturb the little fishes there.

A Mud-covered Forest.

There is a sunken forest of white cedar on the coast of New Jersey which has been continuously "mined" for its valuable timber for more than eighty years. The curious industry of digging for these sunken logs is carried on by the people of Jamesville, a village which was brought into existence solely through the wealth of the buried timber in its vicinity. Over this mud-covered forest of large size are now growing, and in many instances the growing timber is cut away in order to get at the more valuable logs which lie from two to four feet beneath the surface. It is believed that they were sunken by an earthquake.

The Natural Conclusion Concerning a Sudden Absence.

Aspiring Author—"A good beginning. When you grow up you'll work enough to be an author, won't you?"

Office Boy—"I'll know enough not to."

SPEAKER CRISP.

Did the reform Club snub Speaker Crisp?

Perhaps it was an oversight.

Anyway, Speaker Crisp's speech read just as well, as if he had delivered it.

For our part, we wonder when we read it, if it would not have been better for him if he had had a bottle of Reid's German Cough & Kidney Cure.

A STORY OF THE MANAGER'S SAFE.

MAY PAWN THEIR INFANTS.

"What are you doing there?"

"Nothing, sir."

The answer came from a pale and feeble-looking youth standing before the open safe in the sanctum of the manager of the Continental Banking Corporation, Limited, Old Broad street, E. C.

The question had been put by the manager himself on re-entering his room after a momentary absence in the outer office. The clerk, for such was the young man's position in the bank, flushed to the roots of his hair as the manager thrust him aside and ostentatiously secured the door to the safe.

Nothing more passed between the two. The clerk laid a slip of paper with figures written upon it at the manager's table, and, having thus fulfilled the duty which brought him thither, he went out, closing the door gently behind him.

The manager watched him as he retired, watched him through a transparent pane in the glass door after he had reached the outer office and took his hat from a peg, and watched him with especial eagerness as he passed through the swing doors on the way out, no doubt, to dinner; and the expression in the face of the great man might have suggested to a witness, if there had been one, the existence of some grave suspicion regarding the security of the contents of the safe.

After making an examination of the papers shut in behind the iron door, in order to satisfy himself that they had or had not been tampered with, and after transferring some papers from the safe to a drawer of his writing-table, which he locked up again quickly, an occupation that seemed to suggest grave and moody reflections, and during which he looked around him nervously, as though he was alone—the manager turned his attention to the slip which had been placed on his table by the clerk who had just left the room.

Upon the slip were written these figures:

"£10,000 — tomorrow. Saturday. Messrs. Bulling & Co., will call for the second lot of bonds early on Monday."

"Ten thousand pounds!" he mutter-ed. "Saturday. What an opportunity! Cabs Friday—if I can wait till tomorrow!"

The manager pressed his hand to his head, which has been continuously "mined" for its valuable timber for more than eighty years. The curious industry of digging for these sunken logs is carried on by the people of Jamesville, a village which was brought into existence solely through the wealth of the buried timber in its vicinity. Over this mud-covered forest of large size are now growing, and in many instances the growing timber is cut away in order to get at the more valuable logs which lie from two to four feet beneath the surface. It is believed that they were sunken by an earthquake.

"Coming in, Mr. Price. Shut the door, if you please."

The cashier did as he was bidden and came to the manager's table to receive the slip which was handed to him. But the latter did not speak; he stood facing his colleague and looking into his eyes with a look that expressed consternation. Mr. Price was startled.

"Anything the matter, sir?" he inquired.

"Yes."

"Nothing serious, I hope?"

The manager did not reply. He appeared to be struggling with himself, suppressing an excitement which was entirely unusual with him. When he spoke at last he seemed anxious to prove to himself that his memory had not failed him.

"What time was it, Mr. Price, when you and I went down the strong-room this morning?"

"It was precisely 12 o'clock, sir."

"You remember what bonds and securities I handed to you there?"

"Perfectly."

"Please to confirm my memory by enumerating them."

"Certainly, sir," and the cashier cold them off on his fingers. When he had finished the manager reminded him that there was still one lot of securities which he had omitted to mention. Did Mr. Price recall what they were?"

"To be sure, sir, how stupid of me! There were also Messrs. Bulling & Co.'s bonds for £1,000 pounds."

"You placed them all in the usual place inside the safe?"

"Yes, sir. But you were present yourself."

"Quite so; quite so. My observation, however, has failed me, and I am anxious to take up the clew through it.

"I don't quite understand," began Mr. Price, but his chief interrupted him.

"You placed Messrs. Bulling's documents in the basket with all the others—under my eyes. You brought the basket to my rooms here—under my eyes. Finally, you deposited the basket and its contents in my safe—under my eyes. You trust your memory confirms mine does it not?"

"Assuredly."

"What time is it now?"

"Striking 1, sir."

"When do Messrs. Bulling come for this batch of bonds?"

"They will take them away at 2 o'clock."

"They cannot take them away."

"Why not?" asked the cashier with surprise.

"They are gone already."

"Gone! What do you mean?"

"They have been stolen! You had better see for yourself. Here is the key."

Mr. Price opened the safe and made a careful search. In two minutes he reported. There were no bonds. They were missing from the safe, and in five minutes more he convinced himself that they were not in the room, unless, indeed they were locked in the manager's desk—which, however, was instantly dismissed from his mind.

"I am entirely at a loss," he began.

"So am I, Mr. Price," broke in the manager. "I have not left the room since you deposited the bonds in the safe. It is true, the door of the safe has been open, to the knowledge of two. But, on the other hand, I have received no visitors; not a soul has entered the room but yourself."

"You forget, sir, that one of the clerks, young Mr. Asplin, brought a slip from the office about the middle batch of securities which are to be handed over to the manager of the Bank of England to-morrow, Saturday—£10,000 worth, the receipt for which is, I believe, in your possession."

The manager made no remark in response to the latter assertions—concerning the bonds and the receipt believed to be in his possession. But he referred significantly to the young clerk and his errand.

"Yes, Mr., Asplin was here for a few moments. I don't like to suggest any suspicion against him—"

"It is somewhat suspicious, sir, that Mr. Asplin was actually alone in this room for nearly half a minute, having entered by this door, from behind the counter, at the very moment you were standing on the other side of yonder door opening on the outer office, while a customer naturally got a question."

"That is perfectly true, Price. I had not thought of that. Moreover—now that I come to recall the circumstance—young Asplin was stooping over the open safe in a most suspicious manner, when I re-entered this room."

"Subject to your approval, sir, I would question him before you take any steps toward announcing the loss. He is a very respectable youth, and may be perfectly innocent."

"I don't like to think for a moment that his is otherwise, Mr. Price. Bring him here at once."

"I will do so—unless he has gone out. One o'clock is his dinner-time." Mr. Price advanced to the door, and the manager stopped him.

"Stay a moment, Price. The suspicion is a very serious one. Let us omit no precaution. We will make one more search."

Mr. Price assented. Going on his knees before the open safe, he turned out each and every paper and book, and replaced it in turn. The bonds were not there. The safe was empty.

"Enough!" at length exclaimed the manager. "Fetch Mr. Asplin, and before you bring him in give instructions to your next in command that no office is to leave the bank on any pretense whatever till I give permission to the contrary."

"Yes, sir; I will adjust as well to do so without further loss of time."

As soon as the manager heard the door close he locked another door, which led to his private residence, and made sure that he was alone. Then, taking his keys from his pocket he unlocked softly the drawers in which his writing desk, wheeled back his chair a few inches, unlocked the safe, and paused.

He appeared to listen for an instant. There was no sound of approaching footsteps, and no sign or shadow on either of the ground-glass doors that one was about to enter. With a rapidity and stealthiness that denoted both fear and determination, he abstracted a paper from the drawer, stepped across to the safe, slipped the packet between the leaves of a ledger within, locked the safe, keys in his pocket, drew up his chair, and returned to the folding of papers.

But some peculiarity of the packet had been noticed by him notwithstanding the rapidity of his action, and the manager's countenance fell.

ARE YOU ON THE GROUND FLOOR?

If Not, Now is the Time to Come In. Make yourself or some one else

A Christmas or New Years'

Present that will last a life time.

Have You Realized that the object for which the good people of our fair city have been working, hoping and praying for for the last quarter of a century has been attained?

Have You Realized that we now have two distinct and separate railroads with passenger and freight depots, with shops, round houses, warehouses, etc?

Have You Realized that we have within our city limits one of the best constructed saw mills that there is on the continent today?

Have You Realized that we have an electric street railway that has been constructed regardless of expense and that will be surpassed by none, and that I have for sale

each that have been thrown on the market without regard to cost. Just think of it! Lots that are large enough for two houses, located as these lots are, convenient to all these new enterprises, fronting on the street car line, if you want them---your choice for $100, $15 DOWN AND $5 PER MONTH.

If you are not on the ground floor now is your time. You will only have to make a few payments of $5 each before you can sell for double the amount it has cost you. Do not let this opportunity pass

If you want a home or if you want to speculate—these lots will be worth $150 or $200 next spring without a doubt. Besides the above I have all of the

KOOP & WALKER Addition

This property has just been put on the market: it adjoins the Mill Company's property and also the new depot and electric power house and barns. The lots are extra size and level as the floor. Already there has been built one store and plans for a number of new brick buildings have been drawn. These will be put up early in the spring. If you do not secure some of this property now, you will certainly regret it before the next six months. Remember this, you cannot be greatly benefited by these new industries if you allow outsiders to come in and pick up all of the "snaps." Remember, also, that if you get here first, you get first choice. A small payment in all that is required.

Local News Notes.

The city council has caused a new coal stove to be placed in the city hall.

C. A. Maull has resigned his position with the B. & N. Minnesota railway.

The county commissioners will meet on Tuesday, the first meeting of the new board.

On Monday evening the Chenqustana Club will give a New Years hop at the Arlington.

Stephen Bush, a farmer who has resided at Nokie Lake in this county for some years, died suddenly on Christmas day at the age of 51 years.

The merchants have agreed to celebrate New Years day and will keep their business houses closed all of Monday.

Deputy Grand Master Walters will go to Aitkin with a number of other Odd Fellows on Monday to attend the installation of officers of the Aitkin lodge.

The Brainerd young people who presented Kathleen Mavourneen at Staples last evening returned this morning well pleased with their treatment in that placed.

Ed. Jones, of the Northern Mill Company, had the misfortune to freeze his nose recently. This is to notify the public so they won't ask him what's the matter with his face.

Arrangements have been completed so far that it is expected the Lumbermen's hospital in East Brainerd will be opened tomorrow. It will be a first-class institution in every respect.

The dance to be given this evening by the International Association of Machinists will be a very fine affair and will be attended by a large number of people. The gentlemen who have charge of the details have spared no means to make it a success. The committee on arrangements is: D. C. Henton, W. P. Robertson, Robert Fox, J. P. Anderson and Frank Whittaker. Reception. — Thomas Bailey, John Metzer, A. J. Forsyth, W. F. Murry and W. F. Keyes. Floor.—T. F. Mooney, J. P. Anderson, George Stroner, Wm. Jones and Edwin Edwards.

New school House Site.

Block 164 has been purchased by the board of education in the second ward on which to erect the new school building for that part of the city. The site is a very desirable one and the board were lucky in securing it. H. J. Spencer, from whom it was bought, takes the old school property in part payment, $3,350, the block bringing $8,000.

And Still Another.

We understand that there will probably be another mammoth enterprise established in Brainerd in the near future, in the shape of a large wholesale meat and provision house, the large amount of meat being used in this city having attracted the attention of some of the large dealers. Although we are not at liberty to mention any names at present we have it on good authority that such a house will be opened here shortly.

Broke Both Legs.

On Saturday last Aaron VanCurler met with a serious and painful accident on the Pine river road above Kimball's. The gentleman was driving a tote team and had got off his load to walk behind when the team started up into a trot and he ran ahead to stop them but slipped and fell in such a manner that the hind wheels ran over both his legs below the knee breaking them. A teamster ahead of him stopped the team and put him on the load bringing him to Kimball's where he was taken care of until he could be brought to town.

Took It Back.

The city council held a special meeting on Tuesday evening for the purpose of giving Mr. Ambrose Tighe, of St. Paul, a hearing in regard to the Pine street water main extension, the result of which was the passage of a motion that the council reconsider its former motion in regard to holding back part of the water rental, and the clerk was instructed to draw an order for $2,635, payment for water rental.

The matter of repairing the dam was referred to the water committee with instructions to report at the next meeting.

Will Probably Die.

A man named Dan Sullivan was brought down from Cook's camp on Wednesday suffering from a broken leg. Drs. Camp and Groves attended him, and every thing possible is being done, but his condition was so bad from exposure and cold, that it was not thought advisable to remove him from the Stratton House to the hospital. When the doctors were called it was found that the bone of the leg was protruding through the flesh and through three pairs of heavy drawers which the man had on. The accident happened on a logging road, Sullivan being intoxicated and riding on a go-devil, when he fell off and was run over or struck by a log, no one seems to know just how. He has not rallied from the shock, and the physicians think it doubtful if he recovers.

The Contest.

The declamatory contest for this congressional district occurred on Friday evening at the opera house and as stated last week, Little Falls and Brainerd were the only cities represented. The judges were Rev. J. S White and Rev. Wm. Moore of Little Falls, Rev. E. G. Sanderson and A. J. Halsted, of this city, and Prof. Wisely, of St. Cloud, as referee. At the close when the footings of the judges had been made it was announced that Miss Grace Leddy had won first place and Herbert Maughan second. After the entertainment was over Prof. Cheadle ran over the figures and found that a mistake had been made and that Miss Leddy and Mr. Maughan were tied for first honors. He immediately notified the Little Falls people but they refused to have anything to do with the matter than to claim their right to first place. Prof. Cheadle went to St. Paul and laid the matter before the judges of the state contest and Mr. Maughan was given the preference. Little Falls, of course, feels sore over the matter and through its newspapers has been giving Brainerd particular fits in order to get even. The state contest resulted in LaCrosse capturing first place and Mankato second. Mr. Maughan's efforts were spoken of very highly by the press of the Twin Cities.

In speaking of the contest the Transcript says:

The moment the announcement was made an interesting incident took place. The Little Falls delegation with the exception of the judges and contestants occupied a box. The boys of the high school class arose and gave a class yell after this style: "Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah! Me! Me! Me! Little Falls! Little Fall! '83." The Brainerd audience was dumbfounded and sat speechless, not even smiling. It was their first experience of a college yell. Two hours after the contest was over, a curious thing occurred. Superintendent Cheadle hunted up Prof. Klepper and coolly informed him that a mistake had been made and that Little Falls was not entitled to first place, but that Miss Leddy and Maugan were tied. He showed the markings of one of the judges where the figures were changed, but Prof. Klepper refused to concede the point. It was quite evident from the markings that Miss Leddy had received the highest score. It was rather queer that the error had not been discovered for two hours during which time the papers were in Supt. Cheadle's possession.

The Hackensack correspondent of the Leech Lake Cruiser says:

The Indians are doing a lively business hauling supplies from Brainerd to Leech Lake. The government supplies will come from Brainerd via Hackensack to Leech Lake.

Mr. Nevers of Brainerd made us a pleasant call yesterday. He and a friend of his came as far as Hackensack on their way to the new town on the Crow Wing. When they learned the new town was not platted they returned to Brainerd. He will call up on Mr. Lally when he knows the town is platted. Mr. Nevers is a very wealthy gentleman formerly a druggist at Brainerd, an eye to business seems to be his motive for visiting Akeley.

Wm. Seeley the general surveyor and Mr. Arms the engineer of the Brainerd & Northern Minnesota R. R., were guests at Hackensack. They left on the B. & N. M. R. R. coming via Hackensack to reach the south arm of Leech Lake.

James Cuyo is absent. He went to Brainerd with Wm. Seeley and his surveying party. Those surveying parties are with quite a train. Their tent caught fire while the parties were absent and the cook was out cutting wood when he discovered the fire. He lost a lot of his wiskers and some of his lovely curls in his attempt to extinguish the flames. When we first met him after the fire, he looked and smelled like a singed cat.

OLD MAID.

Attorney J. B. Douglas wears a ministerial appearance of late, having harvested the hirsute from the front of his face. It is said that he will accept a position in the Catholic militia which Jos Cook tells is soon to take the country by storm. "Doug" would make a powerful good colonel either with or without whiskers, but he would rather be chief cook in the commissary.—Duluth Citizen.

They are Hustling.

The Minneapolis Tribune of Tuesday says:

The Northern Mill company is pushing its operations in the north part of the state, and will make a large cut of lumber in the Gull river region than they had intended at the opening of the season. The company has also decided to carry the northern extension of their railroad known as the Brainerd and Northern Minnesota on to Leech Lake as rapidly as possible. Their men in charge, Engineer Arms and W. E. Seelye, were in the city today, arranging for pushing the location at once and have the work ready for spring building.

There has been something of a change of plan since the extension was projected. The first plan contemplated going several miles to the westward in the course, swinging over toward Park Rapids and the Crow Wing river. This would have reached Leech Lake in a round-about-line, going as far perhaps, out of the direct line as to have struck T. B. Walker's proposed town of Akely. This was for the purpose of running through a large body of timber belonging to the companies interested in the Brainerd & Northern. But investigation, chiefly by Mr. Seelye, has shown, as all who know the country knew, that the better line is to run direct to Leech lake, and to reach the timber by branch lines. To make this change will be to turn the Northern line from the other course, and from about the region of Hubert lake run in the most direct and feasible course to the southeast arm of Leech lake. This is substantially the line of the Great Northern as finally located in 1887, under the Brainerd & Northwestern charter. Thus, as now determined, there will be the spectacle of H. W. Jones' company building a line on nearly the location of one of the Great Northern route, something that does not happen often in Northwestern railroading. It is usually the Great Northern building across the other fellow's track yard.

A Mean Man.

"There is a farmer in this great and glorious state of Michigan who for "meanness" can give points to any Yankee that ever sold a wooden nutmeg, and he has a son just about that age when he is learning how stingey the old man is. Not long ago the boy came into their trading town with a load of truck, and the grocery man asked where his father was.

"He's sick," answered the boy,

"What's the matter?"

"Well, it's this way," explained the son. "One of papa's best horses got sick day before yestiddy, and papa he couldn't do a thing with him, so he come to town to see the hoss doctor. The hoss doctor was stiff, and he put in about an hour tryin to git him to cut down the price of his prescription and didn't git it, and he had to take it at the price, and then he took it to the druggist's to have it filled and put in an hour there tryin to git lower prices on the drugs and git it down so's the whole thing would cost him a dollar and forty cents instid of a dollar and fifty cents, and by the time he got back home, after puttin in an hour or so tryin to save ten cents on somethin else he wanted to buy, the horse was all right and was cavortin around the pasture like a 2-year-old.

"Thinkin about losin that dollar and forty cents' worth of medicine worked papa feelin's up so by bed time that he took the whole bottle ful himself to save it, and it made him so sick that we thought we'd loos him, but he took a turn for the better, and I guess he won't take no more hoss medicine."—Detroit Free
