The "Bayeux Tapestry," called Bayeux from the place where it is preserved, is a pictorial history in one yar, more minute in some particulars than written history, of the invasion and conquest of England by the Normans in 1066. Tradition says it is the work of Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror, and the ladies of her court, and that it was presented by the queen to the cathedral of Bayeux as a token of her appreciation of the services rendered to her husband by its bishop, Odo, at the battle of Hastings. The tapestry is a web of canvas or linen cloth 214 feet long by 20 inches wide There are on it 1,512 figures, only three of which are those of women.

In speaking of the great number of successful chess players of many years' race, and of the contest between the two Jews, Lasker and Steinitz, for the chess championship of the world, the Jewish chronicle dwells upon certain traits which are prominent in the Jewish character. It maintains that the Jews are the best chess players because of their possession of mental qualities which have always been useful to the race, such, for example, as quickness of apprehension, tenacity of purpose, readiness in the application of resources, the power of estimating probabilities, and an intuition which enables them to seize the opportune moment for developing action. These traits of mind have been marked in all the Jews who have won fame and fortune in the playing of chess.

His Lordship Was Wide Awake.

Lord Coleridge had a trick when on the bench of sometimes closing his eyes and assuming an expression as if wrapped in the most refreshing of slumbers, when, as a matter of fact, he was wide awake and listening with both ears. I remember once being in court when he was sitting at this post, and a long-winded young barrister was opening the case for the complainant. In the middle of the address Lord Coleridge apparently dropped off to sleep. The counsel let out a notice at the same time, and was just remarking, "our contention is, my lord, that the evidence will show"—when he stopped short, looked in a bloodthirsty way at the somnolent judge and shouted "Murder it." Lord Coleridge quietly opened his eyes and inquired in his blandest manner, "Yes, Mr. Robinson. What else did the defendant say besides 'Oh, ah!'"—London Figaro.

Rosebery Used to Be a Plunger.

When he first took to racing Lord Rosebery used to bet heavily, and many anticipated that he would quickly come to grief, but he never wagered unless he had good information, and those who predicted his downfall had in the end to express their admiration of him as a speculator on the turf. He has, in fact, shown in racing matters the same cool common sense which has been one of his most marked characteristics in the domain of politics. He was never known to betray excitement respecting the result of a race, and the same perfection of self-control has enabled him to bet and bet heavily without drifting into the reckless ness of the plunger.—Boston Globe.

Enthusiastic Angler.

Gen Maury, who writes the "Recollections of a Virginian," says that when he was in Texas he found Col George Peyton, who was then commanding Fort Inge, to be a man devoted to sport. He one day killed ten deer in succession on the flats and he greatly affected in floating about the Leona catching black bass.

He was a wonderful fisherman, and used to find out very quickly whether the soldiers had any pretensions to the "gentle art." When the orderly would report to him at the daily guard mounting, he would say:

"Do you know how to catch minnows?"

"Yes, colonel."

"Then buy my bucket, go to the creek, and catch some." When the men had done the errand, the colonel would say:

"You may go to your quarters." For his days' fishing he provided.

He was one day telling a brother soldier of the latter's ignorance of the Psalmoras, and added:

"I examined the well of that prison, health.

"I'll bet you caught him!" was the answer

"Indeed, I did," said he, laughing. "I got a pin, made a hook of a piece of twine, and fished for that fellow till I caught him."

An enthusiastic angler he was also a most patient one, for he confessed that when he was a boy in the Tennessee river without getting a bite, he enjoyed it as much as any sport he ever had.

A Little of Each.

A lady had been playing very satisfactorily in a concert given in a country town, but had maintained a marked reticence as regarded her past life and relations. She died suddenly one day, and the members of the company, not knowing the whereabouts of her friends, gave the arrangements for her funeral in charge of an undertaker. The undertaker inquired of the company whether the actress was married or single. He seemed so worried when they informed him that no one knew, that a lady was induced to inquire the object of the query. He replied that he would have to know in order to the necessary casket proportions. Was she a single lady, he answered, he would line it with white satin, otherwise, he would line it with lavender. "Well! well!" sighed the lady, "it's too bad we have no means of ascertaining." "Oh, then," said the undertaker, "I think it will be safe to line it with white, satin, with a touch of lavender here and there."

Republican party will not be ruled until every state of the Union all citizens, black or white, native our foreign born, shall be equal in the course and in the ballot box.

The Democratic party is united in nothing else, was unanimous in the repeal of the federal election laws, thus openly confessing itself the party of fraud.

We are opposed to all trusts and combinations seeking to control or monopolize the production, sale or transportation of any species of property, and demand the enforcement of the laws against the monopoly of the refine trusts.

The tobacco and sugar trusts are organized in all proper and necessary purposes, and are the legitimate and have been in favor of laws (1) to protect industry, (2) to raise the revenue for the needs of the government, (3) to encourage manufacturing companies to locate in our midst and maintain the constitutionality of arbitration, whereby controversies between employers and employes may be settled without resort to strikes or lockouts and to preserve the public domain for actual settlers and not for speculators.

Air proper and necessary measures should be adopted for the protection of our people from our shores all paupers, criminals and other undesirable classes of immigrants.

GOV. NELSON ACCEPTS.

The Governor Makes a Very Bright Speech of Acceptance.

Gov. Nelson, upon being the nomination, made a forceful and convincing speech. He said in part: "The issues, questions and conditions of the day are not unlike those which confronted us in the last campaign. The platform is an excellent exhibit. We stand by it. Your kindness in again nominating me for governor is appreciated. I am a candidate for the high office of governor, and gratefully appreciate the honor, but not so much because it tends to give me assistance in the campaign, but because it is the assurance that your fellow citizens have confidence in the manner in which I have performed my duties as chief executive of the state. While conscious of the fact that in many respects I have been far from faithful and may have erred in judgment, I feel that I have done the best I could, and aimed to be fair and just to all. I appreciate the good will and confidence of the people of the state, and whenever called upon to decide different interests, such disputes should be settled by the courts, by arbitration through arbitration or conciliation, by some board or tribunal, to be established for that purpose, and not by strikes or lockouts, which are entirely subversive of law and order, and which all we must strive to uphold, the integrity of the country depends largely upon the prosperity of the farmer, for agriculture and our country greatly depends upon the regulation of the railroads. Legislation will ride triumphant through the storm.

is the farmer who furnishes the traffic, and for the railroads to destroy the farmer by unjust rates for lower rates. As an empire and civilization for some years past, the state has provided a board of railroad commissioners to fix rates and adjust differences between railroads and shippers, and I believe they have in this tribunal or to the courts for redress. Our people are not contends with capital for good, on better terms, but they do contend that capital is entitled to no more than a fair and reasonable return upon the investment, and that the people are entitled to the benefit of the reduction in the cost of production, and demanding this in justice and equity. Capital will not be driven from the state by such demands, but will be encouraged to seek investment here. Capital is timid, and will not invest where legislation is unfriendly, but will be attracted by the opposite. Capital is entitled to protection, and will receive it. Labor is entitled to protection, and will receive it. Labor is entitled to protection, and will receive it. Labor

CHAPTER VIII.

Out of the Depths.

I was scarcely surprised when next day I received a hasty note from Louise. They were all going away at once, she said—all except Mr. Harold. He had come home late and told them they must pack that night, as he hardly could get all the money for the seaside somewhere—where she did not know yet, but she would write to me as soon as she had an address to give, as that I might send her any news. How I treasured that little note! It was the first bit of writing I had had from her, and I read it again and again that day, and for many days, and tried to conjure a meaning, a hidden meaning, a touch of tenderness or concern out of its ordinary words. A strange feeling of loneliness and forsaken seized me—a foolish feeling, which I could not shake off for some days.

I looked in upon old Jacques, as usual. He had been recovering himself since I had seen him first; at least, regaining a consciousness of his own existence and of the existence of things about him. I thought that day I could see a something in his eyes, and also in the twitching of his mouth, which told that he missed the presence of his niece. I gazed at me long and keenly, but I felt neither discovered nor suspected.

He looked down at the hands (the fingers of the right hand trembled a little) and uttered some inarticulate sounds as if in an effort to articulate. I helped him a little, though that day I could not have put more on, hearing, could understand; I could hear the slow effort come, and the scarcely; I hoped it would do her good, for she had been in a very unsatisfactory state since her father's loss. It gave myself some relief to speak of these things. When I left he made a few more efforts, and appeared to be trying to thank me for my visit and for my kindness before I went away.

I wrote several letters during the whole time that reached me from Louise, and for a half-hour I was in a state of excitement.

Beginning at Hubert lake the old track toward Brainerd has been raised, leveled and filled in for about a mile and a half so that it presents the appearance of a standard road and a permanent thing. In some places the old road will be lowered four feet and in others a fill of six feet will be made above the old dump.

In the case of Jno. H. Cofield against James McCabe for assault, in which a verdict was secured in the lower court of $300, the supreme court has reversed the decision and says: "It is impossible to sustain the verdict against the defendant, James McCabe. From the plaintiff's own testimony the assault on him by Patrick McCabe was no way connected with the business of his employer, James McCabe, who was not present and knew nothing of it. According to that testimony it was an independent act of Patrick, on his own account. The only particular in which the other testimony tends to vary the story as told by plaintiff is in its tending to show him the aggressor. The judgement must be reversed as to James McCabe."

Miss Campbell's Success.

Court House a Beer Garden.

The Little Falls Transcript says: Morrison county provides a rather expensive beer garden for its convival officials, but they doubtless deserve to enjoy the kind of entertainment that is best adapted to their dispositions. Holding a job in the court house is pretty near as soft a snap as working in a brewery, when the regularity and abundance of refreshments is considered.

Deserts the Sinking Ship.

Isaac E. Staples, mayor of Little Falls, and clerk of the court of Morrison county by the grace of democratic votes which office he has held during the past eight years, announces in a letter in the Little Fall Transcript that he has withdrawn from the democratic party and says:

When I consider the doctrine of the Democratic party in light of experiences of the present administration I find that I have long been laboring under political delusions. Thousands of our factories are closed and millions thrown out of employment. The question with organized labor is not how high wages can be obtained, but whether any wages are available. Our foreign policy is a conspicuous failure. The prospective forty odd banking systems have demoralized national finances. The incapacity of the law makers to provide a revenue has forced a bond issue of $50,000,000 to be placed on the market to provide gold to replenish a depleted reserve, the gold having been withdrawn from the treasury and from circulation through fear of the execution of the various schemes of inflated and unsound currency advocated by the majority of the Democrats in both houses of congress. Daily failures, open soup houses, and organized charity taking the place of plenty and prosperity, as the results of their first victory, demonstrate that their success is the nation's disaster.

Mr. Staples position, defined at a time when his party is in power, will be be a blow to democracy in Morrison county as he was a leader in its councils and prominent among all classes.

Non-Partisan Judicial Conventies.

Believing that all Judicial Conventions should be non-partisan, that the selection of District Judges should be filled by a man who is unfettered by political obligations, that all party lines in the selection of judicial candidates should be obliterated and that all litigants should be equal in Court regardless of political opinions, a non-partisan judicial convention for the 15th Judicial District, State of Minnesota, will be held at the Court House, in the village of Aitkin, in the county of Aitkin, Minnesota, on the 8th day of August, A. D. 1894, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the office of District Judge of said District.

Resolved, That each county in the said District shall be entitled to the following number of delegates, viz:

Aitkin County	3 Delegates
Cass "	3 "
Crow Wing "	5 "
Itasca "	4 "
Hubbard "	3 "
Wadena "	3 "

The above apportionment was unanimously agreed to by the non-partisan committee, at a meeting held in Brainerd, July 18, A. D. 1894.

Geo. T. Williams, of Aitkin County.
F. J. Nemoff Cass County.
J. E. Johnson, of Crow Wing County.
C. C. McCarthy, of Itasca County.

M. J. Kateby, of Wadena County.

A mass convention of the voters of Crow Wing county will be held at the Court House in the city of Brainerd on Saturday, July 28, 1894, at 3 o'clock P. Resolutions.

At the regular meeting of North Star Lodge No. 197, International Association of Machinists, held July 16th, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, God, in his all wise providence, has by the hand of death removed from our midst our worthy and beloved brother, W. H. Jones, and

Whereas, North Star Lodge No. 197, I. A. of M., sustains in his sudden death a loss which is felt by each and all. Kind and gentle in his intercourse and associations, he won the respect and esteem of all his shop mates and acquaintances, who deeply deplore the lamentable manner in which he was taken from our midst, while the shadows were yet falling toward the west in the forenoon of life, in the full strength of best days before him; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of North Star Lodge No. 197, I. A. of M., extend to the bereaved parents and relatives of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in this their hour of trial and tribulation, commending them to the Almighty King who bears our sorrows and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and that they be spread on records of this lodge, on a page dedicated to that purpose, and that a copy be forwarded to the Journal, the official organ of the order, also to the other Brainerd newspapers, for publication; and that our Charter be draped for a period of thirty days.

J. P. Gardiner, Chairman;
J. P. Anderson,
Thos. Halladay,
Committee.

Resolution of Thanks.

North Star Lodge No. 197, I. A. of M.
Brainerd, Minn., July 19, 1894.

To the Members of the Brainerd City Band.

Gentlemen: At the meeting of the above named Lodge, held after the funeral of our late brother, W. H. Jones, it was resolved that we, the members of North Star Lodge No. 197, I. A. of M., extend to you a hearty vote of thanks for the prompt and cordial manner in which you placed your services at our disposal on that occasion. On behalf of the said Lodge we beg to remain thankfully yours.

J. P. Gardiner, Chairman;
J. P. Anderson,
Thos. Halladay,
Committee.

Y. P. S. C. E. Resolutions.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the First Congregational church offers the following:

Hind God in his providence has seen fit to remove from us by sudden death one of our number, our beloved brother, William H. Jones, we desire to express to his bereaved parents and brothers and sisters, and to the public, our sympathy and our keen appreciation of his worth, as we have labored together for the betterment of mankind and for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom on earth. He was one like the Master, ever forgetful of self, and ever faithful in the smallest as well as the greater duties of life, whose example will stimulate us who remain to a better life and to nobler duties. We feel that his early departure is but God's call of appreciation, calling him thus early to his reward, without further service in this world of sin and care. "Behold, God is my salvation, I will trust, and not be afraid." Isaiah, 12:2.

The Presbyterian Y. P. S. C. E.

We, as a committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church, to be filled by endorse the above, and mourn the loss of William H. Jones as a Christian Endeavor brother.

R. W. McKay,
Etta McPherson,
Nettie McCulloch.

Just Like a Man.

She patterned him some nightshirts on the sewing circle plan,
But he stood it like a man,
And she kept him wildly hopping with her New Year's day reception all night, till he thought there was no stopping,
But he stood it like a man.

She made him search for ribbons from Beersheba down to Dan,
But he stood it like a man,
When she bought some new ball dresses and she trilled him with caresses, it was hard, he now confesses,
But he stood it like a man.

She made him wear some neckties that to fearful excess ran,
But he stood it like a man,
And, as might have been expected, though it was with mine and expected that he smiled what she selected,
Yet he stood it like a man.

But when she took the paper that each day he used to scan,
While he waited like a man,
And around a house spread it before he'd even read it, why, he cussed, and then she said it

Was just like a horrid man.

Delighted the Sickers.

A pretty story, which has the merit of being true, is told of a certain professional singer. He had a beautiful tenor voice, of which he took the best of care, so that when he was crossing the Atlantic one summer with a party of friends they were surprised to find that he disappeared from view every evening at about the same time.

"Afraid of the night air," said one with a slight smile.

"Afraid we'll ask him to sing probably," said another, but no one questioned him, as he was known to be quite immovable from his own way.

But when the last night on board came a delegation descended to his stateroom to beg for a song or two and discovered that he was not there. They looked for him in vain until at last the captain, who had evidently kept the secret as long as he could, said, pointing in the direction of the engine room:

"I think you'll find him down there. I don't know where he's gone every evening."

Sure enough, when the delegation arrived at the engine room, they heard the sound of a guitar and a voice, and there, lolling against the wall, was the recreant tenor, singing his best for the delight of the firemen, whom he had entertained in this way for more than an hour every evening during the voyage.—London Tit-Bits.

An Amateur Highwayman.

The late Professor Wilson went once to spend his holidays at Castleton manse as the guest of one of his favorite old students, the Rev. Angus Barbour. When out fishing one day, he met in a lonely part three border gypsies, who ordered him to stand and deliver. As he declined, the gypsies thought to enforce their request by one of them ordered them each to turn out his pockets, which they did, handing him the sum of 4½d. When he returned to the manse, he handed the money over to the minister to give to the poor. He must have had something a little bit of border freebooting that morning."—Family Herald.

Modeling In Clay Dangerous.

Modeling in clay, which was a popular fad in schools two or three years ago, has been generally abandoned. It was found that where large numbers of children, each after the other, handled the same clay the skin diseases of one were communicated to all. There is really no instruction to be derived by teachers amusing their pupils in this way. The younger scholars like it, but it is better to let them find their amusement in the mud pies which they will make without any instruction. That kind of dirt will not be good for the clothes, but it never injured health.—American Cultivator.

George Washington's Birthday.

It was George Washington's birthday. The bells were ringing and the cannon were booming in commemoration of the Father of His Country. Little Ethel, aged 6, wise and thoughtful beyond her years, was gazing out of the window apparently in deep thought. Suddenly she broke down in tearful reverie, and turning around to her father said, "Papa, what are they going to give George Washington for his birthday?"—Boston Herald.
