Complete Recovery by the Use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla
"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and maintained all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I believe my children would have been fatherless to-day had it not been for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, of which preparation I cannot say too much."—C. G. Hinson, Postmaster and Planter, Kinard's, S. C.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal" the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness and superior quality of the "Royal":

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canada Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical in use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

The Mississippi Valley Lumbermen is very much worked up on account of a mistake in crediting an article clipped from its columns, which was published in the Dispatch two weeks ago. If the Lumberman will only take as much pains in giving proper credit to the Northern Minnesota papers, from which it gets much of its news, as it would have others do, the inkind remarks of its editor will be forgiven.

A slick swindle was exposed in Perham one day last week says the Bulletin. A young fellow was making a tour of the residence, offering for sale a needle threader. Incidentally, he took from his pockets a pair of spectacles, encased in what looked like a pair of gold bows. He explained that he had found the glasses in the depot at Grand Forks, and had advertised for the owner, paying seventy cents therefor. He said he was a little hard up now and would sell them for $2.00. He sold several pair this way from 50 cents up to $1.00. Finally Marshall Struskens got hold of him, suspecting that they had been stolen. To prove his innocence he exhibited a bill from a Chicago house showing that he had bought six dozen, paying therefor 20 cents a pair. He was run out of town.

The Journal says the Dispatch suppressed a fear that the silver mine owners would double the price of silver by free coinage. The Dispatch never expressed any such fear. It is a falsehood, pure and simple, and in the only kind of argument the Journal uses in discussing the question. The Dispatch mentioned the well known fact that a combination of mine owners had cornered one hundred million dollar's worth of silver on which they expected to double their money if free coinage could be secured. In other words their efforts for free coinage is a mammoth scheme for a chance to speculate and enrich themselves by a temporary rise in silver which they expect and which will probably follow free coinage, just as a temporary rise followed the passage of the Sherman act. The rise would only last a short time, but it would be long enough to allow these gamblers to unload with enormous gains.

The thumb is an infallible index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, firmness, decision and firmness. Closely allied to the Spatulated Type, the thumb is capable of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types are found in the busy men of affairs. Phrenological Magazine prepares especially for each person a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Chicago Type publishes nothing but the latest, best and freshest matter, and devotes a general with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary treasures of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent reproductions of rooms, furniture, draperies, etc., in Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art and literature is $3.00; and the reproduction alone of the rooms would be worth the price. Besides this, it contains as much other matter as is usually published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so prepared that every member of the family, from the youngest to the oldest, will find something to interest and please. Demorest's Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine. It is every one of its numerous departments, the model of the entire family's reading matter. It is a complete library in itself, and full of the joy of Demorest's Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $3.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address Demorest's Magazine, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Or, if you think, you have thought out a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion plates and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates a love of dress, domestic affairs, ball, and also, sometimes, society. Those traits are developed to a high degree in this Feminine Type of Thumb, and together, any owner of which should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. "WE WIN TWO OUT OF THREE."

The Brainerd Team Breaks Even With Duluth, Losing the First Game and Winning the Second.

Grand Home Fliches a Phenomenal Game of Ball, Striking Out Nine Men in Five Innings.

The Brainerd base ball club celebrated the glorious Fourth by shutting out the crack "Our Minnie" team of Minneapolis, who represent the confectionery establishment of McKnick-Cogelin Co., in a very pretty game by a score of 3 to 0. The game was stopped at the beginning of the sixth inning by a heavy rain storm. Frank Howe, who returned Wednesday from Chicago, was in the box for Brainerd, and pitched the most phenomenal game of ball ever witnessed in this city, and making a record that was never equalled in the state, striking out nine of the fifteen men that came to bat, and having three assists to his credit. He never allowed a man to reach second base, and only three got as far as first. Only three balls went outside the diamond and they were quickly taken in by the fielders, and the visitors only made two safe hits. Brainerd scored two runs in the first inning on errors and one in the fourth on a passed ball. Thelman made the first hit of the game by landing a pretty single in the left fielder's territory, and Capt. Burquin also made a very neat single, but was caught at second in trying to make it a two-bagger. Halleron was rather wild in the first two innings, but soon got down to work and pitched a splendid game, only three safe hits being made off his speedy delivery. The visitors demonstrated that they were first-class ball players, especially Morris, who covers the left field territory, by making one of the prettiest running catches of a fly liner from Carroll's bat that looked good for a safe hit, and he was loudly cheered. B. Bush, in center field, also made a couple clever catches. The 1000 people present declare that it was the hottest and best game of the season. The teams are playing a series of three games, best two out of three, for $150 a side. Another game will be played tomorrow (Saturday) and the last game on Sunday. Thelman should avail themselves of the opportunity now to see the best ball games of the season. Howe and McCarthy occupied the points for Brainerd and Charles caught a remarkable good game, handling Howe's speedy curves in a very clever manner. Halleron and Page was the battery for the visitors. Following is the score by innings and the summary:

Base hits, Brainerd 3, "Our Minnie" 2; base on balls, off Halleron 1; left on bases, Brainerd 3, "Our Minnie" 2; hit by pitched balls, by Halleron 1; passed balls, by Page 2; struck out, by Howe 9, by Halleron 2; time of game, 47 minutes; umpire, Canan.

Brainerd vs. Duluth.

The Brainerd base ball club, accompanied by several admirers, went to Duluth last Saturday morning to play two games with the team of that city. Duluth won the first by a score of 5 to 4, in one of the prettiest games ever witnessed on the diamond in the Zenith City. Brainerd had the lead at the end of the first half of the game, when Willner sent two men to bases on balls, and then Girard, who covers second base for Duluth, knocked out a pretty two-bagger, scoring two men and winning the game. Willner pitched a splendid and received good support. The Duluth boys only secured five hits during the game and Brainerd nine. Brainerd made two errors and Duluth three. Thelman, our clever little left fielder, who never caught a game, was behind the bat, in place of Chas. McCarthy, who was unable to accompany the team, and put up a good game. Following is the score and summary:

Brainerd	2	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	4
Duluth	0	0	0	0	2	1	0	2	5

Earned runs, Brainerd 1, Duluth 1; two base hits, Brainerd 2, Duluth 1; two base hits, Girard 2, Fitch and Carroll; struck out, by Willner 6, by Halleron 5; base on balls, off Willner 4, off Krelwitz 3; passed balls, by Thelman 6, by Connors 2; left on bases, Brainerd 5, Duluth 6; time, 1.35; umpire, Mr. Holling, of Duluth.

Second Game.

The second game was played before a crowd of over 2,000 people, and was a regular slugging match from start to finish, Brainerd pounding Delaney out of the box in the second inning, and Krelwitz took his place, but was pounded hard throughout the game. Burquin, Hill, Page and W. McCarthy led at the bat, making four safe hits, closely followed by Hogan and Carroll. Carroll made three two-base hits, and Hogan made the first home run ever made on the Duluth grounds, bringing in two runs ahead of him. Burquin led in getting runs by making six. Springer led at the bat for Duluth by making three safe hits, and Delaney in getting runs by scoring three times. Brainerd outclassed and outplayed Duluth at every point and easily won the game by a score of 33 to 18. Page, Willner, Hill and Thelman was the battery for Brainerd, and Delaney, Krelwitz and Connors for Duluth. Following is the score by innings and the summary:

Brainerd	3	7	7	0	0	4	9	3	3	33
Duluth	0	0	4	1	0	3	6	0	4	18

Earned runs, Brainerd 21, Duluth 6; base hits, Brainerd 30, Duluth 9; two base hits, W. McCarthy, Carroll 3, Willner 2, Hogan, Paine and Girard; three base hits, W. McCarthy and Springer; home runs, Hogan; passed balls, Thelman 3, Connors 4; base on balls, Brainerd 5, Duluth 3; bases on hit by pitched balls, Brainerd 1, Duluth 3; left on bases, Brainerd 6, Duluth 2; struck out, Brainerd 3, Duluth 11; double plays, Brainerd 1, Duluth 1; time, 2.20; umpire, Holling.

The game of ball between the Browns, of this city, and the Staples nine this forenoon resulted in a score of 16 to 8 in favor of Staples. Charles Mitchell, the catcher for the Browns, was overcome by the heat and was unable to finish the game. The first nine went up on the afternoon train and will meet the Staples nine at 5 o'clock this afternoon. A large number of Brainerd people accompanied the boys to witness the game.

The Beginning of Tammany.

Tammany was the heir of the spirit of the Sons of Liberty of the Revolutionary war. It was kin in some of its purposes at least to those who were then beginning the revolution in France. It was enthusiastic in its support and approval of that revolution. Indeed a misty legend has been handed down from generation to generation in the Hall that the suggestion came from Jefferson himself, who, called from France to Washington's cabinet, was pained to see that aristocracy, English in its impulse and fostered by the Society of the Cincinnati, was coming itself so early in national life. To crush that impulse, at least to fetter it, Jefferson gave the hint, and there sprang from the tomahawk stood facing the Cincinnati and its sword.

William Mooney, an upholsterer, but like many of the mechanics of that day, keenly interested in politics, suggested that there be brought together in an association those who loathed the aristocracy, and who hated the aristocracy, and who hurried out of the shop. When the watchmaker returned, his wife upbraided him for having kept the customers waiting for the job of replanation followed, however, and it became clear that the irate customer was simply a clever thief.—London News.

Russia was the "land of Russ," a Tartar tribe that established a footing in the northern part of Europe soon after the beginning of the Christian era.

The soldiers in the Assyrian army wore a sort of breeches reaching down to the knee.

In Corinth about the time of Christ 20 figs brought 2 cents.

Picot of Mirandola spoke well 22 different languages.

ODD RUSSIAN CUSTOMS.

Some of the Queer Ways of Catching Thieves in the Czar's Dominions.

There is but little demand for detectives, in some parts of Russia. Not that the citizens in those parts are specially noted for the observance of the cardinal commandments. The Russian possesst has many excellent characteristics. He is a muscular, hardened, courageous, willing to obey; he can stand all the hardships of climate and labor and the greatest deprivations. He is also naturally kind hearted, hospitable and readily contented with the coarsest food and the plainest log hut.

But there is also a dark side to his character. He will indulge from time to time in short sprees, when he exhibits uncontrollable levity, sensuality and an insatiable thirst for spiritous liquors. And these moral defects are crowned with the deepest ignorance and superstition.

In some of the rural districts the latter forms part of the life of the muzhik. He will give greater credence to the divinations of the charlatan and the ridiculous traditions of his locality than to scientific deliberation or the results of experience.

In his farm labors of seedtime and harvest, of plowing and hay cutting and other tasks, he is not aided by the nature of the soil or climatic conditions, but follows certain days of his church calendar. He never commences an important job on an unlucky day, and there are a great many unlucky days in the Russian almanacs.

The belief in sorcerers and witches is still in full bloom there. In casualties or sickness with man or beast the Russian farmer goes to the oracle—the wise old mushik of the town, who is accredited with supernatural gifts. He advises even to himself and his family a certain magic power acquired by a strict observance of ancient customs and ceremonies.

Most original are the means he employs to catch a thief suspected of belonging to the family circle. If anything has been stolen which conveys the thought of a masculine thief, he looks all the male members of his household—relatives and hired help—in a dark room. A bean is ducked in a tub of black soot, turned loose in the dark room, and the door is kept locked for a quarter of an hour or more.

The farmers believe positively that the bean will take revenge with its innocent, but will avoid the guilty ones. Suddenly the old farmer enters with a large torch, and woe to the unfortunate whose hands and pantaloons are not besmeared with soot. He is undoubtedly the thief, and if he cannot restore the stolen property he will be compelled to refund its value.

In other cases the loser of articles of clothing or jewelry balances a flour sieve on his index finger, and while doing so he pronounces the names of his acquaintances. If the sieve threatens to fall at the pronouncing of any name, its owner is pronounced the culprit.

Still another method is employed for the apprehension of thieves. A bowl is filled to the brim with water. The names of the members of the family and acquaintances are written on small slips of paper. These are rolled up and thrown on the water's surface. The paper bits that remain within the bowl contain the names of the innocent. If one or more fall out, they contain the names of the thieves, or at least of those having a guilty knowledge of the theft.—Exchange.

Cider In Etymology and Hygiene.

Mr. Labouchere has been advising people to drink cider, or "eyder," apparently under the impression that it is impossible to get drunk on it, which proves that Mr. Labouchere does not know his Normandy. It is not an easy job, we admit, but it is one not infrequently accomplished by Norman peasants. And now Sir George Birdwood takes an almost piteous appeal to us to spell the beverage with a "y." He traced the history of the word from the Hebrew shekar through Greek and Latin down to the French cidre. Then came in some oes, ancestors who brought the "y" to daylight. And Philips, the poet, "forever fixed the correct English form for all makers and drinkers of the beverage and for all literary men as cyder." Who are we to gainsay Philips, the poet? So in deference to Philips and to please Sir George Birdwood we will spell it "cyder," but we won't promise to drink it, not even to gratify Mr. Labouchere.—Pall Mall Gazette.

An Ingenious Watch Thief.

A rather ingenious theft of which a Parisian watchmaker has been the victim is worth describing. It is not that English watchmakers may be put on their guard against similar attempts. The watchmaker in question has a shop in the Rue de la Rochefoucauld, near the Eglise de la Trinite. While he was out on business a stranger entered the watchmaker's wife was behind the counter. The stranger pretended to be very angry and told her that her husband had promised to repair his watch and let him have it back by a certain date, but had failed to do so. "There it is," said the man, pointing to a handsome gold chronometer "I shall not leave it there any longer, but shall take it somewhere else." With this he took the watch and hurried out of the shop. When the watchmaker returned, his wife upbraided him for having kept the customer waiting for the job of repair. Explanation followed, however, and it became clear that the irate customer was simply a clever thief.—London News.

A Motto by Francis Joseph.

A German authoress who is collecting autographs for an album for girls and has valuable contributions by the Emperor William I and Frederick has obtained the following motto from the Emperor Francis Joseph, who is not known to have given such autographs before. It is written in a clear, bold hand and runs thus: "Take your duties seriously and require the same of others, but be lenient toward the failings of your neighbor. Franz Joseph."—London News.

WASHINGTON'S PARENTS.

His Father a Maker of Pig Iron and His Mother a Second Wife.

George Washington was born in Westmoreland county, Va., on Feb. 22, 1732, according to the generally accepted style of reckoning time which has prevailed since 1752, or, according to the old style, on Feb. 11, 1731-32. His mother, Mary Ball, was the second wife of his father, Augustine Washington, concerning both of whom a great deal of false history has been written, while much that might have been truthfully said of Augustine Washington has been left unsaid by Marshall, Sparks, Irving and other biographers of George Washington.

Augustine Washington has been represented as a man of almost royal blood, as the aristocratic descendant of an English family. Be this as it may, Augustine Washington at the time he married Mary Ball was engaged in making pig iron at Accokeek furnace in Stafford county, Va., about 15 miles from Fredericksburg, and he was so engaged when his son George was born, although he was then residing at Wakefield, in Westmoreland county. Accokeek furnace had been built by the Principio company, composed of English capitalists, as early as 1726 on land owned by Augustine Washington covering about 1,000 acres and containing iron ore, Augustine Washington, who was known as Captain Washington, becoming the overseer of one-sixth of the furnace property in consideration of the transfer of his land to the company. The Principio company had other iron enterprises in Maryland.

Captain Washington visited England in 1729 and 1730, chiefly on the business of management of Accokeek furnace. Returning to Virginia in May, 1730, he wrote to his English partners from the 6th day of July that on his arrival he found to his great grief that his wife was dead. There is an autograph letter in the archives of the Maryland Historical society written at London on Oct. 2, 1730 by John Wightwick, one of the English stockholders in the Principio company, and addressed to Augustine Washington, the company's general agent in Maryland and Virginia, which conveys the sincere sorrow of John England

The Kaiser cries "Peace, peace!" but the French press says, "There is no peace!" Nevertheless, Europe's political sky is very free from clouds at this moonment.

Zola is coming to write his impressions of American cities. They will probably be the most budget of misconceptions, but powerfully done in a literary sense.

The number of blacksmiths in this country when the tenth census was taken, was 172,726 under this designation being comprised not only those who shod horses, but a great variety of mechinists who classed themselves among the knights of the forge.

The English authorities have begun the work of cutting the new dock at Gibraltar. Some 700 men are employed. When completed it will be capable of holding the largest British warship.

In the states south of the Mason and Dixon's line, according to the tenth census, the persons engaged in agriculture constituted more than one-half of the total number of wage earners. The same statement is true of the Northwestern agricultural states.

Gladstone, even at his advanced age, will make a better working success in the premiership than any younger man that could be selected. Rosebery's administration has been a color less failure.

A FIFTY-MILE TOBOGGAN.

The Pine Ridge Lumber Flume Is the Greatest in the World.

In semi-tropical Florida every theme is a place which for risky, delightful sport beats all the tobogan slides on the continent. Think of the exhilarating joy of an unintentional slide of fifty miles through great forests, along the brinks of precipices and down rugged canyons amid the wildest and most picturesque scenery to be found in the country—fifty miles without a break!

Such a thrilling experience has been made possible by the recent completion of the great Pine Ridge lumber flume. No other flume surpasses it, and it is doubtful if any other can equal it. Its length and grandeur of its scenery of its arrows. But this is less than half the truth. The south was beaten because, as it had no rivers, no north commanded the sea. Lee was never beaten in battle except when he invaded the northern states. In Virginia he was compelled to retreat made upon him until a few days before the end. Grant and Sherman in the west; Price on Arkansas; Banks and Grant gaining possession in 1862 and 1863 of the heart of the confederacy by the Red Parmgut with his fleet conquering the lower half.

The conquest of the Mississippi cut the confederacy in two, and depirted the principal source of supply for the resources of the states west of the river. Grant then defeated the confederate army of Tennessee, and drove it, Sherman in 1864 to push on into the heart of the confederate states to Atlanta, the chief railway center of the south. This flume is, in a military sense, was inflicted by Sherman when he marched from Atlanta to Savannah. The flume here in which the rapid journey are made down the flumes are simple. They are made the same shape as the V-boxes of the flume. The upper end of the boats is closed by a heavy bulkhead, and a flat floor at the end, which points down stream, is left open to let out the water which gathers on the sides of the boat from time to time. One, two or three passengers are taken in a boat at once, depending upon how many are to make the journey. A carpeter and mattress are placed in the boat before the master of the steamer and the latter only sits on the stained ownership. It was ascertained that the arms were for the insurgents in Cuba. The master of the steamer, that the cargo must not be molested as it was in transit to Cuba. The owner which had of landing the munitions in Trinidad, and on this statement he was allowed to remain in port. It is believed that the arms were intended for the Cuban insurgents. The owners are said to be George W. Childs, and that subsequently they were transferred to her.

DIVORCE INDUSTRY.

A Reduction of Forty-two Days in the Time Needed to Get an Estie.

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 4.—On and after a law went into effect in South Dakota which cuts forty-two days from the time required to get a divorce in this state, and which is expected once more to boom the divorce industry of Sioux Falls. The new law touching service of summons was changed by the last legislature, making a default on personal service outside the state the same as inside. Under the old law, which was not presumably passed because of its bearing on the divorce industry, a party can secure a divorce after having spent six months here, and publishing the summons for four more having elapsed after the service of the summons personally on the defendant.

"Very soon the guests will be leaving," he continued, "and here is a chance of seeing her will be gone."

He uprooted the fallen disused tower, very close to which his boat was moored, and pulling aside some low bushes, he felt himself in the darkness for some time with his hands.

At length he seemed to find what he wanted, for his hand came in contact with a small grating, and half lifting this he was able to take hold of a handle which, on being turned, enabled him to push inward a portion of the masonry at the foot of the tower as though it were a door.

Behind it there was an iron door, with stones so carefully and cunningly fitted to that only a person who knew the secret could ever detect the slightest sign of the existence of any means of ingress.

Frank passed through this door, but he did not close it, for he had no fear of any one disturbing him, and he meant to enter the castle without observation and hide himself in some dark corner, so that he might have one view of the gay scene in the ballroom, where the lady he loved was sure to be the queen of the night. He intended to return to the grounds as he came, leaving no trace of his stolen visit behind him.

He had not been in this place for many years, and he moved cautiously and cautiously, more than once raising a light, for fear fearful of betraying himself by doing so.

This fear was increased by one or two strange circumstances.

In the first place, the wind seemed to rush through the old passages again in a perfect blast, and he fancied—though of course he could not be sure, as there was no light to guide him—that the false door of the chamber might have been open.

Fear of detection, and of suddenly coming upon somebody he knew, made him pause and eagerly listen for every sound.

He had just come to the conclusion that whatever might be the condition of the chamber above, the coast for himself was clear, and he was about to take a few steps forward and mount the stairs, when he heard a low moan before, when the rush of wind increased, and he was startled by the sound of voices overhead became distinct.

There seemed to be words of expostulation and entreaty mingled with them, and the voices were those of a man and a woman.

Whatever it was, its descent was arrested for a moment, but only for a moment, for it was clear that there was something fell close to his very feet.

He looked, but there was no light.

Whatever it might be that was lying so close to him, it stirred no sound, and he was standing bewildered, not knowing what to do, hesitating whether to go any further or to strike a light and ascertain what had happened, when as he was hesitating and doubting, he heard indistinctly the grating sound of the door above being forced back into its proper place.

It was only at this moment that the reason flashed upon his mind that some fearful crime had been committed of which he had been the unintentional and unsuspected cause.

A low groan close beside him roused him to action, and, stooping, he found a spot of wax matches from his pocket and struck a light.

The desire that brought him here this night above all sights was gratified; his eyes rested once more upon the face of Katie Lilburne.

If ever a prayer was granted and came to the applicant as a curse, surely it was so now with Frank Fairfield.

He looked upon Kate as she lay senseless at his feet; blood was flowing from a wound on her forehead, and from a second wound on the side of her head.

And yet her fall had been slightly broken by her gown having been caught by some projection from the wall.

The wounds on her were serious, however, and Frank tried to stanch the blood with a couple of large handkerchiefs he had in his pocket.

This was no easy matter, as he had to do it in the dark, but he succeeded, being of no use except for a second or so at a time.

Kate remained senseless, and the young man tried to revive her by forcing brandy between her lips from his flask down her throat.

This effort was in vain, and the dank vault in which they both were was chilling the blood in his veins, while the girl who was lying at his feet who was almost as cold as though she were dead.

His first thought was for Kate, and he took off his coat to warm sister, wrapped her in it as well as he could, and then turned to leave her so that he might go to the inmates of the castle and bring them to her assistance.

He had only taken a few steps, however, for this purpose before he paused, suddenly rendered powerless by the following reflection: that in his position, not only to himself but to Kate, until she should be sufficiently recovered to explain what had happened.

What business had he in this castle would naturally be the first inquiry, and he was prepared to admit that he had none—that he was a midnight trespasser and could be taken into custody as a suspected person.

Then, again, it was evident that a deliberate attempt had been made upon of which Kate was the victim; but by whom and planned or executed he had not the faintest idea.

He was completely ignorant of that had taken place inside the castle during the hours he he, loitered about outside and now that two or three months past he had held no communication with her father, whether of his daughters, so that who was living there with them or what their manner of life might be, he did not know.

Arguing from the unknown, it was very probable that if he raised an alarm and gave Kate back to those to whom she belonged, he might be only handing her back to the power of her enemy, who would soon find some means to complete the work so riously begun.

And then, again, he felt that his own story would sound incredible, and that if she recovered from the fall it would be accredited with her death.

But there was another feeling much stronger than fear, and more potent than prudence, that actuated Frank Fairfield's conduct.

He was loyal to Lord Lilburne, and he would die rather than betray by a word by avran jinging of his love for the lacerated daughter. Even at this time, he could likewise take care of her and guard her until it was safe to explore her to her father.

His love for her might do this much, and yet be loyal and true and self-sacrificing, as all pure and noble love must be.

"No one can nurse her like my mother, who has been the only mother she has ever known," he murmured as he lifted the fair girl tenderly in his arms and carried her out of the vault into the open air.

She was very heavy, and he had to lay her on the grass so that he might rest; as well as to enable him to button his outer coverings over her.

It was very long and thick, having been made on purpose for her long cold journeys, and it covered the girl's white satin gown completely.

He had a small traveling cap in his pocket, and he fastened this on her head, then he lifted her once more in the form of the sister so that the night air and the cold moon should affect her as little as possible.

While she lay there so still and so motionless he quickly closed the secret door that led to the vault and the moon shone, covered over all signs of his visit, and then, nerving himself to the task, he lifted Kate in his arms and carried her from the place.

Strong excitement had given him a fictitious strength, and the same feeling now enabled him on a day like to earry with all his still, and to get away from the vicinity of the castle as speedily as possible.

It was a mad thing to do, this taking of a delicately-nurtured girl a long journey by river and road through a snow storm in the dark, for he knew that when, too, she had just received an injury which might be grave fatal.

But Frank Fairfield was mad this night.

All his acts showed it from the time of his leaving his mother's cottage on the afternoon of that same day till he returned to it before daybreak the next morning, bringing his senseless and apparently lifeless burden with him.

How he accomplished that journey through the snow storm he never could tell, for from the time he was obliged to leave the boat, as the river would have carried him out of his way beyond a certain point, he bribed a homeless tramp whom he found taking shelter in the deserted boat house, to help him carry "his brother," who, he said, had met with an accident, to the shed where he had left his cob and phaeton.

He placed Kate in the carriage and thus the tramp only saw an inanimate figure wrapped in a heavy cloak.

And the man, when the task was completed, took a light, and, afraid of the handful of silver given him for his pains, and, as day after day took two strange circumstances.

In the first place, the wind seemed to rush through the old passages again in a perfect blast, and he fancied—though of course he could not be sure, as there was no light to guide him—that the false door of the chamber might have been open.

CHAPTER VIII.

Doubts and Fears.

But though Mrs. Fairfield stood calmly by the side of the bed on which she loved as if she had been her own child, and seemed to show so little emotion, and to be so passionless and cold, her mind was in truth racked by a fierce and terrible fears.

It was very well for her son to say that he had saved her life, but if his statement were true, why had he not left on her to her father's house, instead of bringing her here without leave or license, and running the risk of compromising her by carrying her so many miles from her own home?

What would the daughter of Lord Lilburne do in the cottage of her nurse and foster-brother? Why should he take matters worse had dared to lift his hand against the daughter of being so well known as Katie's presence here a danger to herself and her children? Such were the questions Mrs. Fairfield, despite the control she exercised, put her words and actions was nearly distracted.

"I am eating the bread of the Lilburnes," she muttered, "and I have eaten it for forty years, and now to think that my son should have brought this shame and pain upon them; the ingratitude and infamy is more than I can bear."

The tears came into those eyes that had long since dried up, and her head, cold hand in her own and kissed it passionately as she murmured:

"Whatever harm he has done to you, my darling, so shall pay for and pay dearly for it, and I'll give you back to your father I will guard you as the apple of my eye, and though Frank is my own son, I will not spare him."

A low moan from the sufferer recalled the woman to the duties of nursing Kate to bed, and she went about it with the greatest tenderness, for above all things she was a good nurse, having had a large share in the nursing of her own children, and she had always been more than one to express the wish that Frank was like his own son.

All this was gratifying, no doubt, but the woman's heart clung most to her own offspring, and the love she bore them was a passionate one.

Her own boy had been from his residence at the castle, and his occasional companionship with the pretty little lady, who, as she toddled about after him, had grown to look upon him, as it is the habit of small girls to do when the bigger boy is not a brute.

Frank was a boy for any mother to be proud of. A fine, handsome lad in every side, and Lord Lilburne himself had been more than once to express the wish that Frank was like his own son.

All this was gratifying, no doubt

The 119th anniversary of the declaration of independence is a thing of the past, and although not observed in Brainerd by any grand celebration the day was spent by the citizens in a manner entirely fitting for the occasion. Those who did not attend the different localities near the city where the eagle was billed to scream, went to the lakes. Gilbert Lake drew quite a crowd and a very pleasant time was enjoyed. The games at Athletic Park were well patronized also, and the electric line was taxed to its utmost to take care of the crowds of people.

The usual number of crooks followed the circus which visited Brainerd on Wednesday and as a result several parties are poorer in purse than before. A woman named Moffatt claimed that her pocket was picked and $26 extracted, but the police seem to think that no such amount of money was lost. Two men from the western part of the county, whose names we could not learn, were short-changed for $30 or $40 each, but the greater part of the money was refunded to them on complaint to the manager of the show. It is estimated that there were 2400 people in attendance at the afternoon performance and 900 in the evening.

A Musical Treat.

Mrs. J. C. Atherton has in training fifty girl voices in preparation for the delightful and popular operetta "Laila," which will be presented to the public the latter part of July at the Sleeper opera house. As the special parts and choruses are composed of Brainerd's best talent, it will be without doubt a great success. As the prices will be within reach of all, and no one should miss this opportunity.

Married.

The wedding of Arthur W. Wheatley to Miss Eleanor Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Edwards, occurred at the Episcopal church on Monday afternoon, Rev. E. S. W. Pentreath officiating. The maid of honor and groomsman were Miss Minnie Wheatley and William Edwards, the bride being attended by Misses Cora Bartle, Irene Lowey, Violet Hagadorn and Daisy Millspaugh as bridesmaids. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers, and was filled with friends who had assembled to witness the ceremony. After the ceremony the party went to the residence of the bride's parents, where a wedding supper was served. Many handsome and costly wedding gifts were tendered the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Wheatly left on the evening train for a trip to England, and on their return will reside in Staples.

Michael Cousean and Miss Mattie Peterson were united in marriage at St. Matthias on Tuesday, July 2nd, Rev. Fr. Lynch, of this city, performing the ceremony. The wedding took place at the residence of Mr. Holland, and was witnessed by a large number of friends of the contracting parties. A dance and sumptuous supper followed the ceremony.

Mr. Marcus Gunderson and Miss Frida Johnson, of Aitkin, were married at the Swedish Lutheran parsonage by Rev. F. M. Eckman on Tuesday, July 2nd. Mr. Gunderson is a section foreman on the N. P. road.

John Anderson and Miss Emily Johnson were united in marriage on Tuesday by Rev. F. M. Eckman at the residence of the groom's brother-in-law, Mr. Swenson, on Ninth street north.

A Trip to Leech Lake.

The country to the north of Brainerd which has been opened up by the Brainerd & Northern Minnesota railroad is one full of interest to people in this section of the state, and a trip to Leech Lake by rail can now be accomplished in a forenoon with ease and comfort. The writer visited that section of the country on Monday in company with A. F. Ferris. Leaving Brainerd at 8.20 in the morning on the regular passenger train, of which Ed Laughlin is conductor, we were rapidly carried through the pine forests to Lothrop, which is the headquarters for the company, and the present end of the line, although the steel is laid to the lake, but regular trains do not run there yet. Lothrop is quite a business place but the location is a very undesirable one, being almost in a swamp. While the town is not regularly laid out there are streets and business places such as one would find in a frontier town. The company's buildings are large and well constructed, consisting of a large warehouse where the supplies are stored, boarding house, office building, three stall round house and repair shops. W. J. Bain is located there and is village doctor and postmaster. Fred Luken has a branch store there, and Sisler & Cowan run the only licensed saloon in the place. F. C. Mearns, in charge of the company's office at that place, took particular pains to show us the town, and is a very pleasant gentleman to meet.

From Lothrop to the bridge which crosses the south arm of Leech Lake it is six miles, and in company with J. O'Leary, who has charge of the construction work, we took passage in a box car to that point. The bridge across the arm is 2000 feet long, and was constructed last winter, and in order to reach the opposite shore one has to walk a 16 inch plank, at an elevation of 20 feet above the lake. The contractors are at work on the grade which is nearly ready for the ties three miles beyond the bridge, and the road follows the shore of the lake about seven miles.

Frost & Shaw run a steamboat for freight and passenger business across the arm, and are doing a good business. Mr. Frost has taken a piece of land some five miles up the lake from the bridge, and has one of the prettiest locations on that beautiful sheet of water. He had arranged a dancing pavilion and a dance was to be given there yesterday, to celebrate the Fourth in fitting style, with a moonlight excursion on the lake. The Indians at the agency were also arranging for a grand celebration with canoe races and athletic sports, an account of which will be given in these columns next week by a special correspondent. Another large steamboat is in course of construction by N. Dallis, of Eagle Bend, which will be used to haul logs across the lake to a saw mill which the gentleman will erect.

A Summer Outing.

Where to go for a summer outing of any extent is no longer if it ever was a Hobson's Choice. The railroad companies offer excursion rates and routes by the hundred. The Seaside, the White Mountains, the St. Lawrence, the Great Lakes, the Colorado mountain resorts, Yellowstone Park, and far-off Alaska, are all to choose from, time and money being supposed no object. The demands of business and the size of the pocket-book, however, make it impossible for thousands to do more than pass a few day's vacation in a quiet way and at moderate expense. To such, we might suggest, if they have not taken it, a journey along the Upper Mississippi. There is no river scenery in our country that really surpasses it in either variety or beauty. From the rapids at Rock Island to the Falls of St. Anthony, through the placid expanse of Lake Pepin, is an ever shifting panorama of beauty, while there are many towns and villages enroute where a stop of a day can be made with a great deal of pleasure. If this trip is to be made in a short time, the best way is to take the trains of the Burlington Route, which run for three hundred miles close along the east bank, affording a thousand charming views. An agreeable inexpensive outing may be had in this way for a trifle of cost. Apply to any of the Burlington ticket agents for maps, time tables and tickets, or for more detailed information, address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Crow Wing, Minn., July 5th.

The Knights Templar conclave will be held at Boston, Mass., during next August, and it will be of interest to Sir Knights and their friends to note that arrangements have already been successfully accomplished by the Nickel Plate road, providing for the sale of excursion tickets over direct lines going and returning or by circuitous routes, viz: going one line and returning another. By so doing many of the following notable resorts may be visited without additional expense. Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson and the Hoosaac Tunnel. The above arrangements will no doubt make the low rate excursion tickets offered by the Nickel Plate Road very popular. Call on or address J. Y. Calahan, Gen'l Agent, 111 Adams streets, Chicago.

State Teachers' Summer School

Will be held under the direction of the county superintendents of Aitkin, Crow Wing and Morrison counties, at the Central School Building, Little Falls, beginning July 8th, 1895, and continuing four weeks.

Instructors, F. V. Hubbard, conductor, and H. W. Brewster and W. E. Johnson, assistants.

Summer schools have become very popular, and justly so. In four weeks, under the instruction of efficient educators, a great deal can be accomplished. They are held at a time when teachers have vacation, thereby giving all an opportunity to attend. Summer schools are becoming more and more proficient, and, in nearly all the states, they are now permanently established institutions.

The grade of the work will not be all elementary, (except in methods), and teachers should not remain away if they have attended a normal school or college; they will find that they can work profitably whatever subjects they wish to pursue.

Teachers should bring all their text-books with them; also paper and lead pencils.

Teachers and those intending to teach are required to attend.

Boarding can be obtained at reasonable rates, both at hotels and with private families.

Co. Supt., Crow Wing Co., Minn.
