THE struck jury law must go.

THE city of Anoka has $22,000 of bonds for sale.

DONNELLY promises to occupy his old position as ring-master of the legislative circus.

JOHN SHERMAN will be the new secretary of state. A better selection could not have been made.

ONLY a little more than a month of democratic times yet. We hope the Lord will never see fit to again chastise his people in this manner.

L. P. HUNT is enjoying a very respectable boom for the position of public printer and the newspaper boys of Minnesota all hope he will succeed.

THE Minneapolis Journal and Times have been divorced, and they didn't have to go to Dakota to do it either. It was considered by every body as a misalliance from the start.

MR. W. J. BRYAN'S $3,000 a night lecture tour is proving a fiat failure. The receipts are not nearly one-half that amount, and the lecture is pronounced as very ordinary.

THE St. Paul Dispatch is in a very bad frame of mud, and all because Bro. Thompson was not consulted in regard to appointments by the governor. The Dispatch had given it out cold, that what Thompson said "went" but it didn't go, hence these wails.

THE question of the legality of the Anderson bill ought not to have any bearing on the Dunn-Day contest in the state senate. The courts will decide that question without any regard for what action the senate may take. If that matter is not considered, there is no doubt that Day will get his just deserts.

THE settlers of Cass county, we are informed, are almost unanimous in opposing the organization of Cass county, and want a chance to vote on the question. It is no more than right that they should have the opportunity, as they will have to bear the increased taxation, hence any law for county organization ought to have a provision for submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county.

CONGRESSMAN TOWNE is before the people as the only member from Minnesota who opposed the diary interests of our state by refusing to vote for a bill providing that oleomargarine should be sold for what it is, and not as butter. Towne is willing to protect (?) the farmers by wild money schemes, but when it comes down to something that will benefit them, he is not there. How his Populist friends must love him.

Brighter Business Prospects.

R. G. Dunn's Weekly Trade Review this week says:

The greatest growth and prosperity the country had ever seen came suddenly in 1879, after several months of disappointment because specie resumption had not yet brought the benefits expected. It is not the largest and most powerful vessel that can be started most quickly, and it takes time for new confidence to reach, through easier money markets, larger orders, resuming mills, expanding employment and larger distribution, the results which make still greater and lasting gain possible. Such gradual and steady improvement has been in progress for more than two months.

The output of pig iron has gained 12.3 per cent in December and 41.6 per cent since Oct. 1. The output of coke has increased 88.7 per cent since Oct. 1. Sales of wool have again become large, though not yet full reported. Money markets feel a steady increase in demand for commercial and manufacturing loans. Additional works have gone into operation each week in January and the working force is larger than for six months. It is not a time of high prices. Many who are anxious to get early hold on the market are making for the moment lower prices than they could afford to maintain. Some have secured orders enough for months to come, and begin to be less keen in competition. With the increase in output of pig iron to 159,720 tons weekly, against 142,278 last month, the price is a shade lower at the East and Chicago, but buyers purchases already advance Bessemer a shade at Pittsburg. A sale of 10,000 tons of Tennessee No. 4 for export will yield only $6.87½ at the mill and the shipment of 9,000 tons billets to Manchester will yield only $15 at Pittsburg. Steel bars have been reduced 1 cent and some other finished products $1 per ton, but the demand on the whole is steadily growing. The coke output has risen from 60,000 to 94,342 tons weekly and minor metals are a shade stronger.

More print cloths were sold than for many weeks. But some made of clean yarn run to the complete satisfaction of its patrons. Your ticket agent can show you a map and sell you tickets over the Wisconsin Central.

Folly to Organize.

ELLIS, Cass Co., Jan. 21, '97.

EDITOR DISPATCH:—We saw an item in your last issue in regard to the Walker-Cass county organization scheme. You are quite right in your comments, as the case now stands. By the loss of the seventeen towns, of which we, of this part of the county, are fully convinced, it would be folly to think of organizing. I have talked to a number of the people and they are all of that mind. Walkerites need not look for help in this end to help their boom. Since Wadena has given us the black-eye, we had far better be under the protection of Crow Wing, than to take up with the Walker scheme.

Another matter I wish to ask your indulgence in printing is this: The people are very much incensed at the action of the Cass county commissioner's doings at their last meeting. Geo. Hardy and W. W. Bryant met and allowed $1,000 for attorney's fees, and $40 for expenses in retaining said seventeen towns. Now, as we all know, Cass has no general funds wherewith to pay such bills. The question is, what fund are they to come out of? and, in plain English, the people question the legality of those bills and the action of the board. If you can give us light on the case, we will take it as an act of kindness. I could get a score of bona fide names to this letter, but as the snow is deep, I will sign my own.

See the Great Specialties.

Great specialties will be interspersed between acts every night next week at Sleeper Opera House. Do not miss the illustrated songs, the first illustrated songs ever given in Brainerd.

Pointon Items.

Can not some arrangement be made by which fires can be started at the school house in time for the room to get warm for meeting and Sabbath school? Several times this winter people have come and stood around till they were thoroughly chilled and gone home, some of them having driven 4 miles. It is detrimental to the best ends of the meeting and to health and comfort. Let some one see that the room is warm for the children.

Mrs. Jacob Shew returned from Brainerd where she has been for the last two weeks under the Dr's. care, having successfully passed the ordeal of a surgical operation, the removal of a tumor from the left shoulder. She is convalescent.

Ed. Garlinghouse who nearly smashed his foot by a tie falling on it before Xmas, is able to be out. He is still unable to do any work.

Geo. Petre found a bob cat in his trap one morning last week, which he dispatched in short order. It was a very large one. Georgs has a corner on the wolves and other bounties in his neighborhood as he catches two or three a month.

J. W. Billings has been rustling round the past week, securing machinery for his saw mill and the chances are he will be running soon. It will be a great benefit to the people at the north end of town.

Mrs. Mulholland, who has been confined to her room for some time past with a severe cold, is some better at present writing.

Ed. Hastings, an old soldier who has been visiting his brothers, Warren and James Hastings, will return to his home in St. Paul this week. X.

T. J. Nary went to Brainerd yesterday to spend Sunday with his family.

Owen McClary, who has been staying with his sister, Mrs. McCabe, for some time has returned home to Brainerd.

Miss Ines Eastman returned from Brainerd Saturday evening, where she has been for the past two weeks visiting her parents. Monday morning she again took up her position as principal of the Walker school.

Chas. Kinkele came home from Detroit to spend Sunday. A deputy marshal came up with him, and they together with two witnesses went back Monday morning. Gbarley had a hearing on the charges of selling liquor to an Indian. He cleared himself of the charge and came home Tuesday night.

The Warner Comedy Company.

The above named popular, company will entertain the people of Brainerd every night next week at Sleeper Opera House, opening Monday night with the "Golden Giant Mine." The company will present during the week a select repertoire of standard and up to date plays at popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents. Every person holding a reserved seat ticket will be entitled also to a lady's admission and reserved seat free for the opening night, and it is recommended that reserved seat tickets be purchased in advance, to avoid the inconvenience of crowding about the box office on the night of the entertainment. The company is a good one, and has been playing with great success in every city where it has appeared. The house will be well warmed every night, and special care will be taken to make it thoroughly comfortable, no matter how cold the weather may be. This is the first dramatic and comedy attraction that has visited Brainerd since December, and a large attendance is expected all through the week. Reserved seat sale will open Saturday morning at E. F. Atwood's drug store.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Architect of the universe to take from us our beloved Brother, Michael Hagberg, whose death occured Jan. 12, 1897, be it

RESOLVED, That we bow with humble submission to the will of Him that doeth all things well; and while we mourn the loss of a Brother whose gentleness of manner and nobleness of soul drew the entire community to him as friends, his brethren are moved to profound sorrow by his untimely death. Many years had he mingled with us in supreme friendship and brotherly love. Upright in business matters and generous to a fault, none can justly say aught against him. We lament his early death, and will keep his memory green while life shall last.

RESOLVED, That in the death of M. Hagberg Aurora Lodge No. 100, A. F. & A. M., has lost a true and faithful Brother, whose life was an exemplification of true Masonry, and the city a valuable citizen whose well balanced judgment will be sorely missed.

RESOLVED, That we tender to his widow our sincere sympathy in this her hour of profound sorrow, and beg her to take hope in the care of her sons, to whom we commend the honorable career of the kind and indulgent father whose counsel they can claim no more; and we trust that their kindly interest in their bereaved mother's future welfare may stamp them true sons of him we so sadly lament.

RESOLVED, That as a mark of respect and sorrow the Emblems of the Lodge be draped for a period of thirty days, and that an engrossed copy of these resolutions be presented to Mrs. Hagberg.

Let them be duly recorded in the minutes.

Few men really know when they are well treated.

The more you talk about business being poor the worse you make it.

Public men learn in time that it is better not to talk when they have nothing to say.

After all is said and done, a professional is often nothing more than an amateur run to seed.

The epochs of our life are not in the visible facts, but in the silent thought of the wayside as we walk.

If a man is so proud that he will not see his faults, he will only quarrel with you for pointing them out to him.

After a woman is thirty-five she ceases to prevaricate about her age, and begins to tell how young her children are.

People who isolate themselves soon form wrong opinions of the present and the future and are also apt to unduly magnify the past.

It is difficult to understand why reformers should have special dislike for each other, beyond the right which all human beings have to fair treatment.

The women do not possess full suffrage in Kansas, but they secured more public offices in the last election than did the women of Utah or Colorado—twenty county and superintendents of public instruction, and all the offices from mayor to chief of police, in two cities.

A novel lawsuit has just terminated in the court of common pleas, in Cleveland. On November 5, 1894, Humphrey Johnson shot and killed his wife Nellie, at their home in Collinwood. Then he committed suicide. Both had children by former marriages. The administrator for the wife's children sued the administrator for the husband's children for $10,000 damages for the killing of Mrs. Johnson. The jury brought in a verdict for $3,000.

In the heart of San Francisco is the city's principal cemetery, where are buried the bodies of her thousand dead and where loom up in the sky the grand mausoleums of her millionaire mining and railroad kings. The interment to bleat this cemetery with a new street has aroused much opposition, yet it is by no means certain that sooner or later the whole cemetery will not be moved to a quarter where the dead would cost less in real estate and taxes.

Latest Tacoma mail advices from China "state that the Russian government has secured permission from China to extend the Siberian railroad through Northern Manchuria, and also in case of war, to have possession of a warm water port on Chinese territory. These important concessions, it is set forth in the articles of agreement, are made in consideration of the strict friendship to China in the settlement of the China-Japan war, in which settlement Russia prevented many countries from taking possession of Manchuria."

Daniel Mayer, the English musical agent, says America is the only country besides England where "great money" is made by musicians. In continent charges for admission are small, and there are not so many big halls, consequently artists have to be content with lesser receipts. A fee of £50 is considered as something very high indeed for a single performance "across the water." The musical life is a very uncertain one, it seems. Only those who have made quick money can make big incomes. A great many "big" vocalists and instrumentalists receive payment, even while at the height of their popularity. Musical suns are apt to set very suddenly. Singers go out of fashion quickly and do not get into fashion again.

The Paris Journal des Transports publishes some interesting statistics showing the rapid development of electric tramways in Europe during the past year, "the number of lines in working order having increased from 70 to 111, while the total length of lines has gone up from 437¼ miles to 564. Germany heads the list with a total length of 218 miles and 1,000 motor vehicles, France being second with 82½ miles and 223 vehicles, while England is third with 67 miles and 160 vehicles, Switzerland coming fourth with 29½ miles and 86 vehicles. Bulgaria and Denmark are the only countries which have no line with electric traction. Of the 111 lines now being worked 99 are driven by wires overhead, while 8 have a central rail, 3 accumulators, and 3 an underground current."

Elizabeth Wood, the 8-year-daughter of a prominent merchant of Edenton, Va., lost her life while trying to save her playmate from the flames. The child was playing before a fire with another little playmate, and, stepping out of the room for a moment, she returned in time to see her playfellow endeavoring to extinguish her burning skirt. The brave child rushed to the rescue and succeeded in saving her little companion, but in the excitement she herself caught fire and received burns from which she died within a few hours.

Marguerite Evelyn Yost is a 14-months-old niece of Reading, Pa., who rejoices in the rather unique distinction of having four great-grandmothers living. But one of these great-grandmothers wears spectacles, and all the while a short distance off in the west of this presumably well-coddled miss.

He was in favor of the investigation, but the committee should be large enough to cover the ground. He was opposed to the state's getting into the battling not for the present, but for the immediate future.

Mr. Schmidt, of the Duluth delegation, seconded Mr. Donnelly's motion for the $20,000,000 investigation.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Condensed Proceedings of the National Legislature.

Washington, Jan. 15.—After a very dull day devoted to passing bills of minor importance the house plunged into a warm controversy over the anti-make-clomazarine and other imitations of dairy products, subject to the laws of the state into which they are transported. The question is a parliamentary struggle over the measure on account of the determination of Mr. Cannon of Illinois to prevent, during time for its consideration, and adjourned leaving it unfinished.

The open session of the senate was taken up with routine business and adjourned two hours. After this the balance of the day was given to Mr. Bacon of Georgia, in a speech against the power of congress to recognize new governments. An agreement was reached for a vote on the free bone-steal bill to-morrow.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The senate passed the senate bill to refund the Tennessee bonded bill, which has been under consideration since the holiday recess. The effect of the bill is to relieve the clement all public lands acquired from Indians, free of charge, to the state government beyond the minor office fees, and to release from payment of those who have heretofore been held to these lands. Following the disposition of this bill, which passed by a big, advantageous position of the unfinished business of the session, Mr. Blackburn sought to have the Nicaragua canal bill made the unfinished business. On Mr. Morgan's motion to take the bill up the vote was 33 to 0, or less than a quorum, as many senators were absent. Mr. Morgan secured the adoption of a resolution for an inquiry by the judiciary committee as to whether the properties of the Union and Central Pacific railroads companies belonged to the United States by reason of the failure to pay the instalment of bonds. Other resolutions adopted were by Mr. Chandler, instructing the interstate commerce commission to inquire into the reported combination of the cereal interests to maintain rates; and by Mr. Cullom calling on the civil service commission to explain delay in making annual reports. The senate adjourned over to Monday.

The house spent almost the entire day debating the anti-bone-steal bill, which was under consideration for a time yesterday, to subject oleomargarine and other imitation dairy products to the laws of the states into which they are transported. The debate developed the fact that the states should be allowed to regulate the sale of oleomargarine as the sale of other articles is regulated under false colors, and the opponents' view was that the bill would establish a dangerous precedent and invade the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The proceedings in the house were very routine. It was private bill day, but the whole time was taken up with debate upon the house bills favorably acted upon in committee of the whole during the holiday recess. The widow of the late Maj. John Gibbon was the beneficiary of one bill, and there is also a special range cattle will soever great injury.

One of the oldest school trustees was a crank on the subject of fire, and when he called around with the examining board he always confined his remarks to a question addressed to the pupils as to what they would do in case the building should catch fire. One boy answered that he was an amateur hobby, so she prompted her scholars as to the answer they should give when he put the question to the unexpected inquiry. When the board called, however, the old trustee, perhaps, perhaps from a desire to emulate his associates in their addresses, rose and said: "You boys and girls have paid much nice attention to Mr. Jones' remarks, and I guess what you would do if I were to make a little speech?" Quick as thought a hundred voices piped in unison: "Form a line and march down stairs."—Detroit Free Press.

SOME IDIOTIC DUELS.

THE CODE AS IT EXISTS IN FRANCE

As Editor Called Out Because He Reduced the Price of His Journal—Secret Duelling Threats Practiced There.

N an article in the Cornhill Magazine Mr. Pemberton - Grund writes interestingly of duels, which are reviewed by the London Chronicle as follows:

In the modern French penal code there is no reference to duels or duellists, and, as every newspaper reader knows, a French duel is as common an incident in the French social life as any athletic contest between individuals is among ourselves. This comparison suggests at once the ground of difference between the British and the Gallic point of view. We as a nation admire physical strength directed with skill and courage; the French do not. "Jeux de mains, jeux de vilains." The "Code du Point d'Honneur" of the Marquis de Chateauvillard, the recognized authority upon such matters in France, declares axiomatically: "A blow is not an answer to a blow." We, again, recognizing the difference between hot blood and cold blood, refer in the apology; the French rule says, "There is no apology for a blow." We consider that the law of the land is open to each individual alike; in one of the most valuable of French law and custom today that a man who kills another in a fair duel shall only be tried to be formally acquitted.

What this "honor" which the duel satisfies really is it is hard to judge easily enough by considering a few duels themselves. In 1834 M. Emile de Girardin reduced the subscription price of his paper, La Presse, by one-half, with the result that its circulation was enormously increased. And this he had to fight four duels with the editors of other Parisian journals, who disapproved of his enterprise. In one of these he killed the talented Armand Carrel, and was himself shot through the hip and lingered between life and death for weeks. He could never be induced to fight again. "Duelling," he said, "is a fault of our education, against which our intelligence protests." But as Mr. Pemberton-Grund well remarks, "In France we should have killed your man to be able to say that." In 1845 a famous gambling club was fought with pistols, and one of the combatants shot dead. The conditions had prescribed that the pistols were to be unknown quantities, but it was afterward discovered that one of them had assiduously practiced in the early morning with the very arms selected to use. The survivor and his second were tried for murder, but were acquitted. They were afterward incarcerated and tried for perjury and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment.

About twenty-five years ago Henri de Pene, the editor of the Gaulois, published an article in which he accused the official hall - mark of "the eternal sub-lieutenant who disputes with his spurs the laces on his superior's epaulets." On reading there were twenty-seven challenges on his table. One sub-lieutenant, selected as the "champion of honor" of his class, and was disabled by the editor, who gave him a sword-thrust in the arm. The other sub-lieutenant stepped forward and declared that it was now his turn. De Pene and his seconds of course protested against the obvious unfairness of one man having to fight twenty-seven in succession. The officer insisted, and de Pene, clapped his fingers in the editor's face, and said, "Monsieur, you are a scamp." The second duel thereupon took place, and Dr. Pene was run through the liver. The officer had formerly been fencing master of the regiment, a notable famous duel one of the combatants spent the previous night with a celebrated professional practicing in a court-yard a secret coup, by means of which he succeeded in running his adversary through the thigh. The duel in which the late brave but idiotic Marquis de Mores killed Captain Mayer, will be in every memory. The Marquis, Mr. Pemberton-Grund says, was a gentleman of whom the militant editors of Paris could not stand somewhat in awe As an instance of the courage of De Mores, he remarks that when one his American friends and cowboys tried to "jump" some of his cattle, he and one of his men fought them off with Winchester rifles, the attacking similarly equipped. Mr. Pemberton-Grund is evidently unaware that local opinion described this affair in very different language, that the Marquis de Mores was at once arrested and put in prison, and that he narrowly escaped lynching. Apropos of the secret coup above mentioned, the writer of this article tells us that it is the habit of every Frenchman, before a duel, to go to his fencing master and take a lesson in it, which costs three or four times as much as an ordinary lesson, and in which the master teaches him one of the secret thrusts for which form a part of his stock-in-trade. This fact in itself is sufficient to reduce the "honor" of the duellist to its proper level.

MONUMENT TO WHITTIER.

A Figure to Inspire the Sculptor—Agitator and Poet.

It may not be out of place to suggest that if there is any American poet who deserved to be commemorated in the action—not the seated or half-recumbent effigy of the thinker or philosopher—it is Whittier. Not only was there in the attitude of intellectual combat with the world—that poet is Whittier, the Quaker Athene. No figure, it would seem, could more readily inspire the sculptor, especially if the man be taken as he was known to his friends, and as he is described him at that epoch has left an account of most impressive vividness. Col. T. W. Higginson has said in him, at 35, "a man of striking personal appearance; tall, slender, with olive complexion, dark hair, a clear black eyebrows, brilliant eyes, and an oriental, semitic cast of countenance." Not as ill-mannered as the sculptor's consideration would be that of Whittier's appearance at the anti-slavery conventions, Philadelphia in the 30's when, according to Mr. J. Miller McKim, who was with him, his figure, with his dark frowning brow and flowing collar, black flashing eyes and black beard," was noticeable; and if it be objected that it should be the poet and not the agitator, who would be thus represented, the answer may surely be made that the ethical fervor which never lacking in Whittier's verse, and that it is as the poet moving his fellow men to nobler deeds, and to higher feelings that this poet at least should be depicted.

STYLE IN LITERATURE.

It Gives a Flavor of Its Own to Every Sentence as Author Writes.

"Not only is their thought much better than your average thought, but their language is so much better than your average language," says Bishop, with reference to standard fiction in the Ladies' Home Journal. "I do not mean," he adds, "that the mere rules of speech—but something finer that is called style. Style has been written about very learnedly and very dead men. In its highest development it is a very complicated thing. It is the very quintessence of thought, and of artistic temperament that gives a flavor of its own to every sentence that an author writes. But without entering into the subtleties of style, it is surely evident to every reader of average intelligence and sensibility that there is a great difference in the manner of telling a story, for instance. It does not require a subtle mind to feel the difference in the telling of Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter and Hugh Conway's "Called Back."

"By common consent, Hawthorne is acknowledged the best master of style that America has produced. When you have read one of his stories—no matter how dark the crime that he has studied in it—you never feel that he has dragged down your thoughts. It is not only because he is a great moralist that his style is pure, but because he is a great master of style also. His language is elevated, poetic, fascinating. It is natural to speak of style as if it were in your nature rather than to what is gross."

Love on the Roof.

They have good times, those girls in Somebody's bookbindery establishment, half way between Center street and Park row.

Every pleasant noon, after eating their frugal lunches, they troop up to the roof and engage in the merriest kind of romp. Games of tag are played and the girls seem to take special delight in "ring around a rosy" and other games known to the youthful mind. Sometimes the merriment is marred by the watchers from the high office buildings surrounding saw that the girls had an elevator on the roof to play the measures for their aerial tripping of the light fantastic, as the country editor has it.

Once in awhile some of the young men employed in the establishment get on the roof, too. When this happens the fun grows uproarious. The games of tag have spicy additions to them, and many a battle has been hard fought and won behind a chimney which protects the contestants from the gaze of their fellow men, but not from the delighted observers in other buildings, to whom these friendly encounters are almost as pleasant as if they were engaged in them themselves.—New York World.

Pasteur's Remains.

The transfer of the body of Pasteur from Notre Dame cathedral to the magnificent chapel which has been erected in the Pasteur Institute in the Rue Dutot, Paris, took place the other day. Very few invitations to attend the ceremony had been sent out, as the friends of Pasteur desired the removal to be private—almost a family affair. The crypt is a circular room in the chamber leading to the crypt where the body of the dead scientist will permanently repose.

The dog poisoner has been getting in his deadly work during the past week, and as a result many valuable dogs have died. The act is a cowardly one, and should the man who is responsible for the work be discovered he would be put through a course of gymnastics that would not be conducive to good health.

The preliminary examination of J. O. Searle charged with larceny in the 2nd degree was held in the municipal court last Saturday, and the case against the defendant was dismissed. He was re-arrested on the same charge and is now out on $300 bail. An important witness for the state failed to appear at the examination held Friday.

The report of Chief McIntosh, of the fire department, shows that the fire losses of the city were $15,000, and the amount received on insurance was $11,051.41. The amount paid out for insurance was about $22,000, hence the insurance companies made about a hundred per cent on their Brainerd business. It would seem that justice would require a reduction of rates.

A Bad Runaway.

Con. O'Brien's grocery team ran away last Tuesday and made things lively about town for a short time. They started from O'Brien's store and ran on Eighth street to Front, down Front to Fourth, south on Fourth to Laurel, and down Laurel to Walker's meat market, where they ran into a team driven by Chas. Tifft. The pole of the runaway team struck one of Tifft's horses in the neck, penetrating it, besides knocking the other horse and man and sleigh all in a heap. The horse died of his injuries, and the sleigh was quite badly broken. Mr. O'Brien has settled with Mr. Tifft for his loss.

Gordon Recovers.

Wm. Gordon, the man who tried to commit suicide last Friday at the East Claire house by the strychnine route, has escaped with his life, and is now at the Antlers hotel under the care of his wife who was summoned the day following. Mr. Gordon was near death's door for over two days, and it was only the hard work of Drs. McPherson and Reinstad that pulled him through. Gordon was very angry when he recovered consciousness and found his effort to die was a failure. He does not state why he did it, but it is rumored that he had had financial opedition caused by dissipation. The day preceeding he drew $100 on his mail contract and went on a spree from which he awoke in the morning without a penny, when he took the poison.
