FIFTEEN DEGREES says he'll never fight again. He has some sense after all.

SPRING, lovely spring. But what's the use of talking about something so far in the future.

NO WONDER this Democratic weather continues, McKinley hasn't fired the Democratic weather clerk. Get there, Mac, and help out a long suffering community.

A. TANNER was elected mayor of Little Falls on Tuesday over Uncle Nate Richardson, who was popularly believed to have a stick on the office as long as he wanted it.

WHAT'S the matter with the 16 to 1 silverites? They are not agitating their skin game as loudly now as usual. They can't realize what an elegant chance to injure business they are missing.

BISMARCK, N. D., enjoys the somewhat doubtful distinction of being the only point in the North and States. And yet they had some pretty hot times there doing the recent session of the legislature.

HON. PADE MORRIS got right to the front in the house of representatives in drawing his seat, and we predict he will get right to the front in shaping legislation and serving his constituents for a new member.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY has made a very favorable impression in Washington already. Personally, he is said to be the most agreeable president we have had for years, and, we predict, he will be the most successful.

SPEAKING about war clouds, the European war cloud isn't in it with the mud we have on hand in this city in the sacred precincts of Third street. And in the meantime the city will be short considerable revenue.

EUROPE doesn't like the new tariff law, which is the strongest argument why it should be adopted. The Republican party always has had a pleasant habit of legislating for the benefit of Americans, to the annoyance of Europe.

THE outs turned out the ins in the recent election in Walker. The ins having fattened themselves out of the public revenues, are now willing to return and let the outs do likewise. In the meantime the burden of the tax-payers increase.

CHARGES of boodling have been made in connection with the recent fight in the legislature over the location of the insane asylum, and the Hastings people propose an investigation. Their action looks like an admission of guilt.

IF there is anything more disgusting, more brutal and degrading than such an exhibition as was seen at Carson City, Nevada, on Wednesday, it is unknown to the civilized world. Compared with Wednesday's exhibition a Spanish bull fight is an elevated amusement. No community, not less to all sense of honor or decency would tolerate it.

WHAT a contrast President McKinley's brief and business like message to congress is in contrast with one of Grover's long winded efforts. That never said anything of benefit to anyone, but tried to impress one with the alleged importance of the author. But Mr. McKinley is anxious for the prosperity of the country and welfare of the people, and is not seeking to force an impossible and impracticable theory on the country to the distress of every one.

THE abuse which has been poured upon the head of Ex-Gov. Merriam during the past two weeks by some of the daily and weekly press, is powerful and undeserved. Mr. Merriam has done much to develop the resources of the state, and there are many men who owe their financial standing to Mr. Merriam's kind assistance in the past, and it ill becomes them now to jump on him because he is down financially. He has been in politics to win, but he has used no more questionable means than nine out of every ten politicians do every day.

Prosperity Here.

Newton, Mass., March 15.—W. S. and F. Cordingly, manufacturers of wool and merino goods at Newton, Lower Falls, this week began to run their factory night and day to keep up with a large number of orders which have been received. The factory has been running on short time for two years, and up to the present has been in operation only three or four days a week.

Representatives of Philadelphia capitalist have been looking up the possibilities of Minneapolis, the upper peninsula, and so well satisfied are they with the capabilities of the Minnesota soil and climate in this region that they are now negotiating with Minnesota railroads with a view to securing shipping arrangements, under the firm name of M. Mahlum & Co., to establish factories and a refinery in this state. The locations of these plants have not as yet been definitely upon, and that will in all probability depend very largely on the shipping facilities offered by the different points.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Why not make an effort to have one of these factories located here? No better point in the state and none better for raising beets than Crow Wing county. The effort should be made.

Build a New Bridge.

The matter of building a new bridge over the Mississippi river here has got to be a serious matter and cannot be delayed any longer. The old bridge has been condemned and any one crossing does so at the peril of his life. It may, by a little repairing, be made fit for use a few months longer, but this even is doubtful. A new bridge must be constructed at once, or all the people in the country living north and west of the city will have no means of getting here to transact business. This is a state of affairs that cannot be brought of for a moment. Means of crossing the river must be had at whatever cost, and it is passing strange that the county commissioners should fool along and neglect the interests of the whole community in the manner they have. But, they say, we have no money, and can not get any unless we issue bonds. Then why in the name of common reason don't they take steps to issue bonds to get the money. Surely no one a with just appreciation of the necessity of a bridge will object to the issuance of bonds for this purpose. If the county can issue bonds to build useless dams and to help railroad companies, there certainly can be no objection to bonds for roads or bridges, for without these this county or city will never amount to anything. Roads and bridges we have got to have, and in this case a new bridge must be built within the next few months or the old one will go down, with loss of life, perhaps. The commissioners are going to put up a sign on the bridge a few days that it is condemned, and anyone crossing must do so at his own risk This is a nice state of affairs, a splendid advertisement for this community.

We are reliably informed a new bridge, all steel, one that will last indefinitely, can be built for $10,000. Bonds to pay for it could be issued and sold without question at 6 per cent. This would make an interest charge of only $500 a year, or not to exceed a quarter of a mill addition to the tax levy, an amount so small that no individual tax payer would feel five cents that it would cost. In fact, it would be as nothing to the loss that would be inflicted on the people in the western and northern portion of the county by not having one. In view of these facts, it is absurd to say that there would be any serious opposition to issuing bonds for this purpose. Let the commissioners do their duty, and submit the question to the people, and they will decide the matter rightly, and let it be done at once, before any bad accidents happen as a result of delay. Immediate action must be taken by the commissioners or they will neglect what is their clear duty in the premises.

Opera House, Tomorrow Night.

"The Bicycle Craze" is aptly burlesqued and pantomimely illustrated in this year's production of Chas. H. Yale's "Forever Devil's Accident," and Manager Yale may be congratulated upon the immediate hit of his "Trolley Car" pantomime and which has created no ends of laughs the past two or three seasons. The main point in the success of the "Bicycle Craze" is that it is timely, while the subject itself is treated in such an absurd manner as to prove more than funny to the most blase theatre-goer. It deals with the other startling and realistic experiences of that genius home known from Maine to California as the "Hobo," in an attempt to secure by fair means or fond a number of the "silent Sweets" and in their inability to do so, they manufacture a few home made machines from different articles which are obtained under most crying circumstances. A number of very funny characters and incidents are aptly introduced, and the entire episode goes from start to finish with a rush that proves conclusively that the average audience recognize and appreciate anything that is novel and timely, and in so doing stamp it with the seal of their approval, which means in managerial parlance,—capacity at every performance.—At the opera house tomorrow (Saturday) evening, March 20th.

The Great Mill.

On Wednesday occurred the greatest event of the year for a great deal people of sporting proclivities, and, as usual, the favorite was knocked out, and the championship belt of the world passes from Corbett to Fitzsimmons. The fight occurred at Carson City, Nevada, just at noon. According to the press reports Corbett had the best of the fight in the first eight rounds, but lacked endurance, and in the 14th round Fitzsimmons gave Corbett a blow over the heart that knocked him out. Fitzsimmons was terribly punished and bled like a hog, but he fought on regardless of his condition and won the fight. The odds of both men were assed the contest.

Telegraphic returns of the fight by rounds were received in W. P. Buckley's saloon in this city, which was jammed with excited men anxious to hear the news.

IN THE PEACH ORCHARD AT SHILOH.

Still to the or-hard shade they lay,
Stark in their wet stained blue and grey,
Brothers met each at the north.
Never more would they thunder forth,
Shouting the battle's labor—
Dead on the field of the shifting strife.

Over them—on the lines of the road,
Peach fruit fluttered down and fell and lay,
Jarred from their boughs by the following guns.

The floral shroud of the warring ones,
Just for the turning of a light,
For all the same mantle of pink and white.

Spring came on forever and ever,
Deemed their duty to grey and blue
Yet to each as to her mowing or rain,
But he bids all issues of the hatred fight.
He, in it silence, holds the victory,
In the nation's heart as it beats today
With no North and no South.

Brothers all lovers from this time forth!

Human Electricity.

An extraordinary business is carried on at the Maison Pinet, 56 Berners street, W. M. Pinet is a professional height increaser. This is effected in two ways: First, by using in one's boots the plush covering called elevators, and, second, by wearing specially made boots. For anything up to 1¼ inches in height the elevators are recommended; up to 6 inches the specially made boots. The elevators cost from 7s. 6d. to 15s. 6d. per pair. They are about 1 inch long and 2½ inches wide. The boots run up the scale from a sovereign or so to 7 or 8 guineas.

Clients out of employment, waitresses, shopgirls, footmen (to whom stature is everything) and even policemen are all among M. Pinet's clients, also army officers, members of parliament, lords and ladies, barristers, clerics of all degrees and divers of the sterner sex by the thousand. In many cases ladies use the elevators solely because they raise the instep and make the feet appear smaller.

One hears of the dignified gentleman who left his elevators in his boots, when he put them outside his hotel bedroom door. When the boots were brought up polished, the pads were missing, and the gentleman was waiting for them in his room. He didn't care to make inquiries about the things. When he did venture out, he was somewhat lower in the eyes of his friends. The moral is, keep duplicate pairs.—New York Tribune.

A Witty Lawyer's Escape.

Judge B. F. Parks, late of Anoka, Ills., was not one of the well acquainted with the Bible as most lawyers, was at one time engaged in the trial of an important will case in Kendall county before the late Judge Leland and a jury. During the course of an eloquent, convincing argument he quoted the jury from what he said in the Bible the following: "The Lord tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."

Judge Leland, who was noted as a dry joker, thereupon interrupted the speaker by asking him to give the chapter and book where the words quoted could be found.

Judge Parks, who was as quick at repartee as he was forcible as an advocate, and who realized he must have committed a blunder which must be overcome, promptly retorted:

"Yo, your honor, I am addressing an intelligent jury of farmers who read the Bible. If I were speaking to the court, I would be careful to refer learnedly to the chapter, book and verse from which I quote."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Not a Complete Success.

"My love," observed the king of Mwpkin, "this canned customary hardly seems sufficient enough!"

"Oh, dear!" sighed his spouse. "I was afraid of that. The other day when they were getting the fire ready he seemed so worked up about it!"—New York Press.

If by any means a bird attained the lightness of a balloon, it could not fly. A balloon drifts with every gust; steering is impossible; the wind chooses its course. The bird balloon, as light as the wind and as strong as iron, is a figment of the imagination.

Pinocle is a Mexican corn dainty. The corn is roasted, ground to a coarse meal, mixed with sugar and spices and then stirred with water. It is very nutritious and often forms the sole food of travelers on long journeys.

The Only Exception.

The Punxsutawney Spirit tells of one old gentleman in Jefferson county, Pa., who had worn the judicial ermine of an associate judge for ten years. One day he was asked by an admiring friend if he had ever been consulted by the court while on the bench. "Never but once," said the judge. "Only once in ten years?" exclaimed the friend. "It must have been a very important case." "Oh, no," replied the ex-associate, "it was not a question of vital importance. It was one day when the court had been in session about ten hours, and I had sat there and dreamed and dozed and scarcely realized what was going on. During a lull in the proceedings, just before court adjourned, his honor turned to me and said in a sort of sympathetic way, 'Isn't that seat pretty hard?' I admitted that it was, and that was the only time in ten years that the court ever asked my opinion about anything."

ATTACKED BY A COUGAR.

The Beast Leaped Full at the Locomotive of an Express Train.

To do battle with a huge mountain lion, lasting its length and 253 pounds in weight, on a trestle at night, is the thrilling experience that befell Edward C. Depew, an engineer on the Great Northern railroad. The fierce beast leaped at the engine and narrowly escaped crashing through the window of the cab. Altogether the episode was one of the most exciting that the engineman has ever experienced. Mr. Depew's statement is as follows:

"I was the engineer in charge of engine No. 219 of the Great Northern, which was attacked by a monster cougar, or mountain lion. I was pulling the overland passenger train going east, and as we were a few minutes late we were trying to make up a little time. After we had left Lowell, and almost two miles east of there, about half way across a long trestle, my fireman, George Lawrence, jumped down off his seat box and came quickly to my side of the engine. I noticed a startled look on his face, and, turning quickly, asked what was the matter, but he did not speak. All he could do was to glare through the window of the cab and point ahead. I looked ahead and saw, through the darkness, some black looking object on the track. My first thought was of some obstruction on the track. For a second or two I thought of hurrying flashed through my mind, but I banished it. This takes quite a while to tell, but it could only have been a few seconds at the most in which it all happened.

"As soon as I saw the obstruction on the track I felt that a possible accident was at hand. Nothing could be done. We were too close to the danger, and the fright had the same effect on me that it had on my fireman. It took away my power of speech. Instinctively I crawled out of the cab on to the side of the engine. The train dashed on, and an instant after I had discerned the form I saw the monster's eyes flashing through the darkness, green and yellow by turns. Lawrence was still in the cab, speechless, with fixed eyes, and finger outstretched toward the animal. His expression was frightful to look upon. As the train approached the lion I could see its prepare to spring, and finally when the leap was made, the force was astonishing. To jump then was certain death, for we were right in the center of the trestle, and yet as the lion made its leap I could almost feel its hot breath on my throat.

"When the engine crashed into the beast, or it crashed into the engine, whichever way you wish to put it, the lion fell back on to the trestle, writhing as if in frightful agony, and then, for the first time, I realized that the danger was over. I learned afterward that the cougar, after we had struck it, lodged in the cross ties of the trestle. It was found there by the train crew of engine 496, who picked it up and brought it to Skykomish. There it was skinned. The claws were taken by some of the other firemen and engineers, who had watch charms made of them, which are very attractive and look somewhat like the emblem worn by the Knights Templars."

The beast was still alive when the men of No. 496 discovered it, but its hind legs were cut off, and when the men got down to investigate they kept at a safe distance until it was known to be dead. In fact, Foreman John T. Wright would not go near it until he had emptied a couple of chambers of his revolver into it. Then they listened to the newcomer.—Lowell (Wash.) letter in Philadelphia Times.

Injuries to Character.

The late George Newport, F. R. S., showed clearly, by many experiments, that if insects, whether accidentally or intentionally in their larval or chrysalidal state these insects showed traces of the injury in their perfect state. For instance, if a foot were injured in a grub, or the place where the wing or antenna would be developed in the pupa, the foot, the wing or other organ was defective in the perfect insect. In like manner it constantly happens that human character, when mature, exhibits the defacement of injuries done to it in its earliest stages. We can trace imperfect fidelity, imperfect honesty, imperfect truthfulness and many other blemishes in the dispositions of our friends to the unfortunate injuries inflicted upon various sides of their character by nurses, parents, teachers or companions in the early days of its development.—Exchange.

Stockings.

Stockings were made by machinery much earlier than is commonly supposed, a frame for stocking weaving having been invented in England by Rev. Mr. Lee of Cambridge in 1589. The stocking making machines are now almost absolutely perfect, receiving the yarn, starting the stocking and turning the heel and toe complete.

MEMORIES OF DONELSON.

General Lew Wallace Tells Some Interesting Details of Buckner's Surrender.

"I first knew General Buckner two years before the war," said General Wallace. "We had a military encampment in Crawfordsville, and among the companies invited was that in Kentucky commanded by General Buckner. The invitation was accepted, and when General Buckner arrived I put the camp under his command. Subsequently I was the guest of General Buckner's company at a two weeks' encampment in Louisville, when I made the acquaintance of twoscore of the flower of the young men of Kentucky.

"At Donelson Buckner was the heroic figure on the Confederate side. There were no generals who outranked him who, if they had taken his advice, would have cut their way out of Donelson before all of Grant's forge had come up and got into position. When surrender was the only thing that could be done, Floyd, who had been a member of the president's cabinet, said to Pillow, the next in command, 'I turn the command over to you.' General Pillow, in turn, said to General Buckner, 'I turn the command over to you.' The soldierly Buckner replied: 'Very well. I am content to share the fortunes of these men who are to be surrendered.'

"Already terms had been asked of General Grant, and his famous response to the request was 'unconditional surrender.' I had orders to assault the Confederate lines at break of day and was forming my division for that purpose when an officer rode out toward us with a flag of truce. General Fred Kneffer, who was my adjutant general, escorted the officer to me, and he informed me that General Buckner desired to surrender. Taking Colonel Jim Rose, one of my staff, I rode inside the works with the officer of General Buckner. Through the lines of men with stacked arms we rode to General Buckner's headquarters in the little village tavern. The general was at breakfast, but seeing me standing announced to one of his staff to invite me inside. He was at breakfast with his staff.

"With that courtesy which is so natural to him, he soon forced me to be served to a meal, and, turning to his staff, said, 'General Wallace, you know, is a gentleman.' It was true, for they were among the officers I had met when I was their guest at the Kentucky encampment. With my Kentucky hospitality Buckner asked, 'Have you breakfasted?' I replied that I had not. 'Sit down and have breakfast,' he ordered, and, as soon as one was made for me at his side. Breakfast must have been a light affair with General Buckner and his staff that morning.

"'Tom,' said Buckner, addressing his servant, 'what have you got to eat?'

"'Not much, general,' said Tom, with a bow.

"'Have you any meat?' continued the general.

"'Yoss,' said Tom.

"'Have you any bread?'

"'A little corn cake,' was the reply.

"'Any coffee?'

"'I will see,' said Tom as he disappeared.

"In a few moments Tom appeared with some corn bread and a coffeepot. The coffee had been watered to make economy. 'Wallace, do you take sugar and cream in your coffee?'

"'Never in the morning,' I answered.

"'It is well, for we have not even sugar,' was the Kentuckian's reply.

"So I conversed while I ate my very frugal breakfast. The surrender followed on General Grant's terms, but we all admired the chivalrous General Buckner who was to be displayed in his remaining with the army and sharing its fortunes in the surrender, when he might have escaped, as did his superior officers. General Grant had known General Buckner in the old army, and they were fast friends. By the special intervention of General Grant, General Buckner visited him a short time before his death and was one of the pallbearers."—Indianapolis Journal.

Pepper.

"It has always amused me," remarked a botanical expert, "to hear people talking of their preference for black pepper over white and the various explanations they give for the same. Little do they know that both black and white pepper grows upon the same shrub. Over the pepper seed grows a black covering, and the seed itself is white, nearly so. To make black pepper the seed and its external covering are ground up, while the white pepper is the seed alone ground up. White pepper is milder than black, the greater part of the pungency being in the covering. Pepper and the seed covering alone would be such, to use a slang term, hot stuff that it would burn the mouth. The black is the only pepper seed contains the oil."—Washington Star.

GLIMPSES OF PARLIAMENT.

A Back Bench Man Recalls His Experiences In the House of Commons.

As a back bench man the only real sympathy I have to make is of the waste of time. One goes down to the house every day—Saturdays and Wednesdays excepted—at 4 o'clock, and you are supposed to remain there till midnight. On Wednesdays the house meets at 12 and adjourns at 5:30. What do we do all this time? To be interested in everything that is going on is flatly impossible. A quantity of the business is of a local character, dealing with places and schemes of which we know nothing. Then there are terribly protracted debates on the second readings of bills, occasionally interesting, but necessarily very dull. Members do not well see how this is to be prevented, but it is a shocking infliction. The committee stage of a bill you have to sit through measured is interesting and instructive, but even this stage is too protracted, and then comes a report stage—which is, as a rule, a great deal is said all over again, and even this is frequently followed by a debate on the third reading. Of course you can go out all the time. There is the library, the tearoom and the smoking room, where you may play chess or dominoes, but no other game whatsoever. But nobody does anything vehemently. An air of languor pervades the whole place. Listlessness abounds. Members stroll from one room to another, turn over the newspapers and yawn in each other's face. In the summer months the terrace by the riverside has been recently converted into a kind of watering place. From 5 o'clock on it is crowded with fine ladies and country cousins drinking tea and devouring strawberries. Occasionally some parliamentary people of importance will choose to stalk by, and even—such is the affability of true greatness—have a cup of tea with a party of friends. A poorer way of killing time has not, I think, yet been discovered, but it is envied by people of the ennui of parliamentary life.

The great problem of ministers is the reform of the rules of the house of commons—how to make the house at once a deliberative and yet a businesslike assembly.

And yet men do not willingly strike off the chains of this slavery. A private member of parliament nowadays gets nothing, neither public honors nor praise, in exchange for his time and his money. Patronage he has absolutely none—not a single place, even in the postoffice, to give away. Nor has he a single privilege that I am aware of. His routine duties on committees are onerous, nor are his opportunities for making speeches, if he wishes to do so, otherwise than few and far between. His leaders treat him with frigid civility, and nobody cares for a letter from him unless it incloses a postal order for at least 10 shillings. And yet the labor of winning a seat and of retaining a seat is very great, nor is the expense insignificant.

When one thinks of all the different ways of spending £700, a parliamentary election does not obviously strike you as being one of the most delightful. It may be said you have the opportunity of legislating on your own account. You may bring in a bill of your own and have the satisfaction of hearing it read a third time. Hardly is this one of the former days some of the most useful laws in the statute book were pioneered through the house by private members. But now, so greedy have governments become that they take nearly all the time available for legislative purposes, and unless the private member gets the first place in the ballot he has not a chance of carrying any measure of importance.—Cornhill Magazine.

GIVING OUT THE POTATOES.

An Old Soldier's Reminiscence of an Event In Army Life.

"Sometimes," said the old soldier, "we got considerable many potatoes and then again we wouldn't have any at all for weeks, very likely nothing but hard bread and coffee and pork and may be corned beef, and perhaps beans, but whether we got them often or seldom potatoes were always more or less of a luxury.

"It was likely to be known in the company when we had potatoes. When we had something the men didn't care anything about, or something that we had been having right along, it made but little excitement when half the men would get into line at the cook's tent or at the fire when the call sounded. There was likely to be enough—there might be some men who wouldn't want their ration at all—and you would see men straggling across the company street toward the fire slightly and, later, carrying their tin plate and moving leisurely. No hurry. They were quite willing to take their place at the end of the line, and, in fact, they didn't try to get there until the line had been pretty nearly all served, so that they wouldn't have to wait long, and they wouldn't have cared much if it had been all gone when they got there. But on days when we had potatoes it was different. Then the whole company turned out promptly and formed in line, single file, the right resting on the cook's tent and the whole line moving forward as the men got their rations.

"There was no greater test of a cook's ability to prepare than the way in which he gave out potatoes, and the man who could do this to the satisfaction of everybody was a skilled cook, indeed. It was impossible to give everybody exactly the same quantity, but an effort to get near to this as possible, a spirit of fairness was recognized instantly and nobody expected more. The potato he got might not be so big by a quarter as the one he saw put on the plate of the man ahead of him, but he said nothing. Somebody had got to have the other potato, and I might just as likely have come to him.

"But something more than fairness was required to give out the potatoes successfully. A man had got to keep the run of what he had given out and the number of men supplied and have some idea of the number of potatoes left and of the number of men to come. He could give himself some margin by issuing the big potatoes generally first. On a pinch, along at the end, he could give out to three or four men a single one of the biggest of the smaller potatoes instead of two. But he must know whether there were any men who had not come yet and whether they were likely to turn up or not, and he must keep the run of all these things without stopping to think, as he forked up the potatoes, from the mess chest and put them on the plates held out to him by the men as they passed. And generally he came out just about right, more than once I have known him to put the last potato on the last man's plate.

"But he did not always bring things out with that nicety. I have known as many as three men on the end of a line to be left without any potatoes—and gone. Why was it? Why was a situation—no potatoes issued for a month before and none likely to be issued for a month again. Here was a chance for the men in the company eating potatoes at that minute and none for them. You can't very well describe just how they did feel, but they never said a word. They looked at the cook and the cook looked at them. It was a miscalculation, and that was all there was to it. The cook had given out his own potatoes and had none for himself, and the three men walked down the company street, looking neither to the right nor to the left, and to their tents, and ate hard bread on a day when all around the camp was filled with luxury."—New York Sun.

Chatfield, Minn., Special.—John Baker of Jordan hanged himself here about a warrant for the arrest of John Hancock, Jim Fagan and Jack Wilson, on the charge of having wilfully set fire to a house wherein a human being was sleeping at the time. Hancock has been arrested and bound over. The other two are at large. Baker, the man who now is at the Clayton hotel in a precarious condition under the care of a doctor, was an eye witness of the affair. One is that the men had been drinking, and that one of them, Miner, laid down to sleep, when the others poured coal oil over him and set it afire. When he was awakened by the pain of the fire the others dragged him out and extinguished the fire. "Yet I appreciate—no man more—the high honor conferred and the great confidence which dictated it. But high as the honor is, it will surely fade unless ever I can be personally worthy of having had experience, expect to engage in any work that will justify hope, with your assistance and your kind forbearance, to administer justice to each respondent and to the advice of the chamber under the rules established by the board of supervisors without fear, favor or the hope of reward."

According to time honored custom, Mr. Helmer (Rep., Pa.), the oldest member in point of continuous service, administered the oath to the speaker.

After the new membership had been sworn in by the speaker the oath was administered by unanimous consent to Messrs. Dolliver and Allison of Iowa, as and Pierce and McMillin of Tennessee, whose credentials had just arrived. Mr. Grosvenor then presented a resolution which was adopted for the election of the president and the other offices of the house selected by the Republican caucus, as follows:

Clerk, Alexander McDowell of Pennsylvania; sergeant-at-arms, Benjamin F. Russell of Massachusetts; messenger, William J. Glenn of New York; postmaster, Joseph A. Sterling; chaplain, Henry N. Condee. The usual formal resolutions for notification of assembling were then adopted.

When Mr. Henderson of Iowa offered the usual resolution for the adoption temporarily of the rules of the last house as ineffectual. The session broke under the leadership of Mr. Hepburn, an Iowa Republican, to limit the operation of the last of the interchanges which were adopted temporarily to thirty days. The Democrats, Populists and fourteen Republicans supported the motion, which was lost by a vote of 152. This was the only incident out of the ordinary connected with the proceedings. The Hepburn motion was opposed vigorously, as was Mr. Bingley on the ground that it was a tariff bill. The speaker appointed the Republican members of the old committee on rules as the committee on committees, and added Mr. Bailey of Texas, Mr. Bellamy of New Hampshire and Mr. Swanson of Virginia to the Democratic membership. In view of the refusal of the Democratic caucus Mr. McMillin, who was at the head of the minority of the committee on rules, declined to be a member of the committee on committees.

The house then adjourned.

To Visit the State Farm.

Aitkin, Minn., March 12.—The legislators of Aitkin county farmers will visit the state farm at Moorhead on March 19, the Northern Pacific company having generously tendered the use, free of charge, of a special car for the trip. It is expected the jaunt will result in much good and create a renewed interest in farming.

Many Distranchised.

Fergus Falls, —no., March 12.—The loss in the city assessment roll on that portion of the state shows that the amendment to the constitution requiring all voters to pay a poll tax disfranchised from 25 to 33 per cent of the voters of the eight counties.

Fell Dead on the Street.

Minneapolis, March 12. — While returning from school Magdalena Herberg, the 14-year-old daughter of Christian Herberg, an employe of the public library, fell dead on the street.

Newport, Minn., Special—John Corwine, paymaster of the naval station here, who is accused of obtaining money under false pretenses, has had his case continued until March 23. Corwine's bondsmen refuse to appoint commissioners to draft a city charter, owing to a disagreement over deposit; relating to interest; to legalize the creation and organization of certain counties; relating to authority of justices of the peace.

St. Paul, March 12. — There was a fair quorum present when Speaker Jones called the house to order. All the routine order of business was passed over and the house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Staples in the chair. The first bill taken up was the bill for the relief of the university tax levy. After a long discussion it was decided to refer the bill to the committee on judiciary. Providing that insurance companies organized under the laws of other states shall be introduced with the town, city or school clerk a duplicate of the report of the county treasurer for funds loaned by such companies; allowing treasurers to send money to the state treasurer by bank draft, as well as by express.

The following bills were introduced: To repeal an act of 1891 for a bridge in Chippewa county to the mouth of Yellow Medicine river; relating to elections; to reimburse McLeod county for expenses incurred in the trial of Sheriff Rogers; to legalize certain incorporations of villages; to prohibit the throwing of sawdust, slabs and edgings in incorporated cities and villages at certain seasons.

Village Destroyed.

Memphis, Tenn., March 15. — The Mississippi river continues to rise and the gauge at this city, as well as Kansas, opposite this city, is very serious. The rise at Memphis was about a rise of 7 in twenty-four hours. This is the largest rise recorded since the establishment of the weather office here in 1872. The government gauge records 48.3 feet above low water mark, and owing to a change in the gauge since the previous high waters that record is read on the old gauge 37.2. The high water mark on the old gauge was 30.3, which was in 1882 and 1890.

The Little Rock & Memphis railroad tracks are under water for several feet in the city, but made no attempt to move the freight trains. The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis brought trains into the city until midnight Saturday night, but commenced using the tracks of the Iron Mountain. The latter road is also using the tracks of the Memphis & Arkansas road, which is the dominant member of that couple.

What the Soldier Would Do.

A good story is current in Berlin recently cited as concerning Emperor William. It does not illustrate the cruelty he was inspecting a number of newly-joined recruits for the First regiment of Foot Guards, and, in accordance with his invariable custom, was examining them as to what they would do in this or that emergency. Addressing a tall, stalwart fellow, he inquired what he would say to a man who was attempting violence to on his duty, "Nie to the devil! Get out from your majesty," responded the recruit. "Right," said the emperor, laughing, "I will take no chance of spoiling their walls by shooting a deserter at the next turn. A few cents. Thus it is again demonstrated that true courage and true politeness are of first-class articles will be supported by the people.

Character From Clasped Hands.

Dr. Elliott Flower, the fashionable palmist is telling the character by clasped hands.

A clasped-hands character specialist says that this mode of telling what character is easier and more correct than all other ways.

"A woman," says he, "who is frivolous, will clasp her hands together with the fingers of her right hand in the space between the thumb and first finger of the left hand. But the first finger of the right hand lies between the second and third on the left when constancy prompts the clasp. The first finger of the fingers of one hand between the thumb and first fingers of the other are deceitful, and not to be trusted."

It is stated that, in a married couple, the one who in clasping hands and interlacing fingers brings the right thumb uppermost is the leader, with the other agrees correspondingly placed in relation to the left hand will be the dominant member of that couple.

What the Soldier Would Do.

A good story is current in Berlin recently cited as concerning Emperor William. It does not illustrate the cruelty he was inspecting a number of newly-joined recruits for the First regiment of Foot Guards, and, in accordance with his invariable custom, was examining them as to what they would do in this or that emergency. "Right," said the emperor, laughing, "I will not, but I won't go near the dock, and with a laugh he turned to the next man.

Theory and Practice.

Bradley—What's become of Tom Tarkington? When we were in high school together I used to regard him as an exceedingly bright fellow. He always stood high in his classes, by the way.

Wyman—Yes, I remember, he was very clever at that. The last time I saw him he was driving a coal wagon; but it seems he made a failure at bookkeeping after that about his being his only employment in the commercial incompetency.—Cleveland Leader.

Hoped to Improve.

"This bicycle riding is all a nonsensical fad!" exclaimed the old gentleman as he wrapped up in political enthusiasm.

"Perhaps it is," replied his wife; "but you didn't see me working like a day laborer pushing a wheel around the kitchen."

"No. But give me time. Perhaps after the end of the war is appropriated I may be able to abandon this bicycle and walk lighter or shorten miles with a torch and by the naked eye. Until then, or the next session of congress, I will be content with one hand."—Detroit Free Press.

Merit Wins.

The invention of Adolphus marked a new era in wall coatings, and from the beginning has steadily grown in favor as the most important discovery. It has from a few pounds per month become the envy of every country of the civilized world. The mono tone of Adolphus is unlike any other. It is properly owners that manufacturers of Adolphus are constantly receiving letters calling them by some other name, and attributing the success of the Adolphus company's reputation.

Through extensive advertising and personal efforts of the Adolphus Paint & Varnish Co. the Adolphus are so thoroughly known that the imitations are of little avail. The company will take no chance of spoiling their walls by shooting a deserter at the next turn. A few cents. Thus it is again demonstrated that true courage and true politeness are of first-class articles will be supported by the people.

Business Houses Burned.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 16.—Fire, which started in the building of the Wheeling Corrugating company in the town of Elkins, the home of Senator Elkins, burned almost the entire business portion of the town. The Elkins has no fire department and the flames spread unchecked and burned, leaving mostly frame buildings in their path. FISHERMEN IN DANGER.

Carried Out on the Broken Ice in Lake Superior.

Schewaing, Mich., March 13.—Heavy wind broke up the ice on Saginaw bay one hundred and sixty fishermen, of whom about fifty are from Bay City, have been carried out on floating ice miles from shore. Mostly all escaped to Nalson and Lone Tree islands. It is reported that five men from Bay City are on the ice yet and have been carried out with the floe. The wind has shifted to the northwest and will probably bring the ice back. It is very cold. About two dozen sets of nets and twenty shanties were carried out from the settlement near here. It is very cold. Many more were carried out but were rescued by boats after being on the ice two days.

Recommended to pass after several amendments had been attached. The following bills were introduced:

To transfer an appropriation made by an act of 1891 for a bridge in Chippewa county to the road and bridge fund of said county; relating to elections; to reimburse McLeod county for expenses incurred in the trial of ex-Sheriff Rogers; to legalize certain incorporations of villages; to prohibit the throwing of sawdust, slabs and edgings in incorporated cities and villages at certain seasons.

Fatality From a Gun Explosion.

Athens, March 16.—The correspondent of the Times at Canea says that there has been a fatal gun explosion. Colonel Vollki were practicing a gun burst, blowing the top off a turret. Fourteen men were killed and one officer killed. Sixteen were wounded, five fatally.

Memphis, Tenn., March 15. — The Mississippi river continues to rise and the gauge at this city, as well as Kansas, opposite this city, is very serious. The rise at Memphis was about a rise of 7 in twenty-four hours. This is the largest rise recorded since the establishment of the weather office here in 1872. The government gauge records 48.3 feet above low water mark, and owing to a change in the gauge since the previous high waters that record is read on the old gauge 37.2. The high water mark on the old gauge was 30.3, which was in 1882 and 1890.

The Little Rock & Memphis railroad tracks are under water for several feet in the city, but made no attempt to move the freight trains. The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis brought trains into the city until midnight Saturday night, but commenced using the tracks of the Iron Mountain. The latter road is also using the tracks of the Memphis & Arkansas road, which is the dominant member of that couple.

What the Soldier Would Do.

A good story is current in Berlin recently cited as concerning Emperor William. It does not illustrate the cruelty he was inspecting a number of newly-joined recruits for the First regiment of Foot Guards, and, in accordance with his invariable custom, was examining them as to what they would do in this or that emergency. Addressing a tall, stalwart fellow, he inquired what he would say to a man who was attempting violence to on my duty, "nie to the devil! Get out from your majesty," responded the recruit. "Right," said the emperor, laughing, "I will not, but I won't go near the dock, and with a laugh he turned to the next man.

Theory and Practice.

Bradley—What's become of Tom Tarkington? When we were in high school together I used to regard him as an exceedingly bright fellow. He always stood high in his classes, by the way.

Wyman—Yes, I remember, he was very clever at that. The last time I saw him he was driving a coal wagon; but it seems he made a failure at bookkeeping after that about his being his only employment in the commercial incompetency.—Cleveland Leader.

Hoped to Improve.

"This bicycle riding is all a nonsensical fad!" exclaimed the old gentleman as he wrapped up in political enthusiasm.

"Perhaps it is," replied his wife; "but you didn't see me working like a day laborer pushing a wheel around the kitchen."

"No. But give me time. Perhaps after the end of the war is appropriated I may be able to abandon this bicycle and walk lighter or shorten miles with a torch and by the naked eye. Until then, or the next session of congress, I will be content with one hand."—Detroit Free Press.

Merit Wins.

The invention of Adolphus marked a new era in wall coatings, and from the beginning has steadily grown in favor as the most important discovery. It has from a few pounds per month become the envy of every country of the civilized world. The mono tone of Adolphus is unlike any other. It is properly owners that manufacturers of Adolphus are constantly receiving letters calling them by some other name, and attributing the success of the Adolphus company's reputation.

Through extensive advertising and personal efforts of the Adolphus Paint & Varnish Co. the Adolphus are so thoroughly known that the imitations are of little avail. The company will take no chance of spoiling their walls by shooting a deserter at the next turn. A few cents. Thus it is again demonstrated that true courage and true politeness are of first-class articles will be supported by the people.

THE NEWS RESUME

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

There is not always a high boundary fence between fun and disgust.

Women are in advance of men when it comes to a dislike for the laws of the land.

Generally when a man's ears return to plague him, he whines around that he is persecuted.

We are all apt to fall to discriminate between what we believe and what we hope for.

Witticisms that contain no personal allusions lose much of their pungency in public taste.

Those who climb the highest have the greatest distance to fall when age weakens their grip.

If a clerk man will perform unnecessary work, he should not complain if told it is not well done.

The man who has no interest in the contents of a safe always has the most to say when it is being moved.

It is a self-evident proposition that those who pay the fiddler are entitled to have the kind of tunes they desire.

People who are thoroughly engrossed in their business seldom find time to label themselves so as to attract attention.

If nothing more serious than weather shall ever father about to vex the United States navy the boats will be all right and the country will be in luck.

From the way some of the mothers acted at a Home Protection meeting we are led to the belief that a children's congress to discuss ways and means of controlling the old folks would be a good thing.

The "man-who-can-turn-silver-into-gold" has struck St. Louis in the dizzy course of human events, and now he is to be expected that the Missouri metropolis will full under the belated spell of the chain-letter fakir and the airship boomer.

The San Francisco Chronicle says that the new charter of San Jose will provide that no man be retained as per employe of the city who does not pay his debts. This provision is a practical way of saying that every private integrity there cannot be public efficiency, measuring service as it ought to be measured. A man untrue to himself, as is a shiftless or criminal debtor, cannot be expected not to break faith in some way with the community.

Identification lies along many lines, and regardless of manner and speech are as patent as those of handwriting. At a recent convention in Edinburgh a speaker attributed to Gladstone the saying that a speech which reads well "must be a very bad speech." "No," replied Lord Rosebery. "For said that, and I can prove it. Fox said not very, but a word beginning with 'th,' and I am sure you will agree with me that this part Mr. Gladstone's having said it out of the category of human possibilities."

The six-day bicycle races which have become features of recent exhibitions are to be made a permanent one of the word. The severe strain has in nearly every case resulted in serious injuries to participants. Joseph Jefferson, commenting recently on undue strain of training, said that some years ago he met Laurence Barrett on a street corner in Boston, and Barrett said he was waiting for a street car to take him to a gymnasium. "Why not walk?" asked Jefferson, "that is better exercise than you will get at the gymnasium, and you will save the trouble of going there."

United States Consul-Generaf Karel, at St. Petersburg, "has furnished the state department with full particulars of the conditions under which the plans for the Siberian railway were changed so as to run the eastern portion of the line through Chinese territory. He says it was found that the original plan would be hard to execute, owing to the great technical difficulties encountered. Thus on one section of 1,105 miles the cost per mile would be $46,269. It was on this fact which first led to the consideration of a Chinese section, and investigation showed that by running the line through Manchuria, not only would the construction be cheapened, but the time would be shortened and other advantages be secured. Negotiations were begun and the Chinese government gave a concession to the Russian-Chinese bank, which formed a new company, the Eastern Chinese Railway company, capital $2,570,000, to construct that part of the road in Chinese territory.

The rainfall at the Oklahoma Experiment station for 1894 was 33.14 inches. This is an abundant supply. Unfortunately it was not well distributed. Nineteen inches fell in May, June and July, and over ten inches in thirty-one days in June and July. Had it not been for the great evaporation because of high temperature and strong, hot winds the rainfall of August, 1st inches, would have been sufficient to prevent injury to crops. January, February, April and December were the only months in which the rainfall did not reach one inch.

The X-ray has been put to a practical every-day use quite outside of the medical one wherein it has been so exclusively useful in heretofore. It is to be used as an egg tester, and a Missouri man is the inventor of the device. It will not only supersede the old candling process to determine the goodness of eggs, but it is claimed that it will determine the age of the embryo chicken.

There is sometimes a vast amount of quiet satisfaction in watching selfishness unconsciously back a losing trade.

The assumption is that if Cuba were to be annexed to this country the purchase price of cigars would be so reduced that we would have clear Havanas to burn.

Mr. Bayard is coming home, to be sure, but it is asserted also that Mr. Thurber is going abroad, so the map will not be overweighted in one spot after all.

The Lexow inquiry suggests the idea that Ananias would have made a cracking good sugar trust director.

If Carter H. Harrison is to be nominated for mayor of Chicago by the Democrats there seems to be no reason why the Republicans should not put up Robert T. Lincoln, and may the best son-of-his-father win.

The sultan is going to fool around until some little old country rises up and wallops the everlasting life out of him, powers or no powers.

CONGRESS AT WORK

SPECIAL SESSION OPENED AND IS READY FOR BUSINESS.

Thomas B. Reed Re-Elected Speaker and Other Republican Officers Re-Elected—The President's Message Read in Both Houses—The Senate Takes Action on Credentials.

Washington, March 16.—The Fifty-fifth house of representatives has organized and the wheels of legislation were performers the scene was a brilliant one. The hall was packed with people. Reed, 100; Bailey (Dem.), 114; Bell (Pop), 21, and Newlands (Silver), 1, aligned herself before unclassified members. All the Republican members but Bell, of the Populists, three, Baker and Jett of Illinois and Marshall of Ohio, voted for Bailey; one, Maguire of Nebraska, voted for Bell, and three, Jones and Lewis of Washington and Fithian of Michigan, did not vote. Two of the Silverites, Newlands of Nevada and Shafroth of Colorado, did not vote, and Hartman of Montana voted for Newlands. Speaker Reed was enthusiastically received on his appearance in the house when he was escorted and made a graceful and dryly humorous speech in assuming the gavel. He said:

"Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: I thank the house for a hundred years for spoken-select to fully express their gratitude and sense of honor conferred by the language by which thanks are conveyed has long ago exhausted. Will you pardon me if I confess that in all the occasions when I have stood here I have been oppressed by the sense of responsibility than cheered by the sentiment of fairness.

"Yet I appreciate—no man more—the high honor conferred and the great confidence which dictated it. But high as the honor is, it will surely fade unless ever I can be personally worthy of having had experience, expect to engage in any work that will justify hope, with your assistance and your kind forbearance, to administer justice to each respondent and to the advice of the chamber under the rules established by the board of supervisors without fear, favor or the hope of reward."

According to time honored custom, Mr. Helmer (Rep., Pa.), the oldest member in point of continuous service, administered the oath to the speaker.

After the new membership had been sworn in by the speaker the oath was administered by unanimous consent to Messrs. Dolliver and Allison of Iowa, as and Pierce and McMillin of Tennessee, whose credentials had just arrived. Mr. Grosvenor then presented a resolution which was adopted for the election of the president and the other offices of the house selected by the Republican caucus, as follows:

Clerk, Alexander McDowell of Pennsylvania; sergeant-at-arms, Benjamin F. Russell of Massachusetts; messenger, William J. Glenn of New York; postmaster, Joseph A. Sterling; chaplain, Henry N. Condee. The usual formal resolutions for notification of assembling were then adopted.

When Mr. Henderson of Iowa offered the usual resolution for the adoption temporarily of the rules of the last house as ineffectual. The session broke under the leadership of Mr. Hepburn, an Iowa Republican, to limit the operation of the last of the interchanges which were adopted temporarily to thirty days. The Democrats, Populists and fourteen Republicans supported the motion, which was lost by a vote of 152. This was the only incident out of the ordinary connected with the proceedings. The Hepburn motion was opposed vigorously, as was Mr. Bingley on the ground that it was a tariff bill. The speaker appointed the Republican members of the old committee on rules as the committee on committees, and added Mr. Bailey of Texas, Mr. Bellamy of New Hampshire and Mr. Swanson of Virginia to the Democratic membership. In view of the refusal of the Democratic caucus Mr. McMillin, who was at the head of the minority of the committee on rules, declined to be a member of the committee on committees. The house then adjourned.

To Visit the State Farm.

Aitkin, Minn., March 12.—The legislators of Aitkin county farmers will visit the state farm at Moorhead on March 19, the Northern Pacific company having generously tendered the use, free of charge, of a special car for the trip. It is expected the jaunt will result in much good and create a renewed interest in farming.

Many Distranchised.

Fergus Falls, —no., March 12.—The loss in the city assessment roll on that portion of the state shows that the amendment to the constitution requiring all voters to pay a poll tax disfranchised from 25 to 33 per cent of the voters of the eight counties.

Minneapolis, March 12.—The St. Louis drug store, at 633 First avenue south, was damaged by fire to the extent of $2,500 by fire. The store was owned by S. Friedlander. The loss is covered by insurance.

Newport, Minn., Special—John Corwine, paymaster of the naval station here, who is accused of obtaining money under false pretenses, has had his case continued until March 23. Corwine's bondsmen refuse to appoint commissioners to draft a city charter, owing to a disagreement over deposit; relating to interest; to legalize the creation and organization of certain counties; relating to authority of justices of the peace.

St. Paul, March 12. — There was a fair quorum present when Speaker Jones called the house to order. All the routine order of business was passed over and the house went into committee of the whole with Mr. Staples in the chair. The first bill taken up was the bill for the relief of the university tax levy. After a long discussion it was decided to refer the bill to the committee on judiciary. Providing that insurance companies organized under the laws of other states shall be introduced with the town, city or school clerk a duplicate of the report of the county treasurer for funds loaned by such companies; allowing treasurers to send money to the state treasurer by bank draft, as well as by express.

The following bills were introduced: To repeal an act of 1891 for a bridge in Chippewa county to the mouth of Yellow Medicine river; relating to elections; to reimburse McLeod county for expenses incurred in the trial of Sheriff Rogers; to legalize certain incorporations of villages; to prohibit the throwing of sawdust, slabs and edgings in incorporated cities and villages at certain seasons.

Rev. H. S. McCowan, of St. Cloud, filled the pulpit of the First Congregational church last Sunday both morning and evening. He was greeted with large congregations at both services. He is a finest speaker and made a most excellent impression.

Engineer J. O. Stewart returned from St. Paul last Thursday morning. It is a pleasure to all his friends to learn that he has not lost the use of his injured eye. It is troubled somewhat with photophobia at present, but in a short time will be as strong as ever.—Staples World.

There will be a parlor meeting at the home of Mrs. A. E. Losey, 4th street, on Saturday, March 20th, at 8 p. m. March 20th is the birthday of Neal Dow, the great temperance worker, and has been made "National Prohibition Rally Day," by the national W. C. T. U. and other temperance societies, and the program will be along this line, giving sketches of his life and work. The meeting will be in charge of Mrs. J. E. Barnes of the W. C. T. U. Come every one. A collection will be taken.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Co. has purchased eight large new passenger engines for use on the Montana division of the road. They are considerably larger than engines 629 and 630 that now pull No. 1 and No. 2 out of St. Paul. The first of these engines arrived here the first of the week and is now at the shops where it is being put in running shape. The other engines will follow in a few days. Unlike the big freight engines, they are not compound, but have an unusually large grate and heating surface.

Among the new scenic features offered by Chas. H. Yale's "Forever Devil's Auction" for this season is, "The Cavern of Gigantic Heads," "The Magic Vaults of Benedectine," "The Gardens of the Blue Dragon," "The Palace of Roses," and a magnificent transformation scene of eight distinct changes which for novelty of conception, beauty in design, is undoubtedly the handsomest and grandest pictorial illustrations of the Realms of Fairyland ever presented. To be seen at the opera house tomorrow, Saturday evening.

The basket ball game at the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday night was a success in every way. The contest was between the Browns and Triangles, the score standing 9 to 10 in favor of the Browns. It has been decided to play off 50 points, which may require several evenings, and for the first 30 points it will be free to the public, and for the last 20 points there will be a small admission of 10 cents. All seats will be reserved for ladies till the game is called at 8:15, after that members and those having passes will be admitted. (Get pass of the General Secretary.) About thirty-five ladies were present last Saturday night. Ladies will come to parlor and remain till game is called.

Froze Her Feet.

Mrs. John Porlinger, of the town of Crow Wing, froze her feet so badly on Saturday night last, that amputation of a portion of both feet will probably be necessary. The lady was in the city shopping with the family of Joseph Lightner, in Southeast Brainerd. Some time in the night the lady arose without being heard by any member of the family, and in a fit of temporary insanity or a somnambulistic state went forth from the house barefooted and in only her night clothes. It was intensely cold, the mercury hovering in the vicinity of 20 degrees below zero. How long she was out is not known, as nothing was known of her strange actions until she returned at about 8 a. m., when she had nearly perished with the cold, both feet being frozen as indicated above. Dr. McPherson was summoned at once, and administered treatment. He says that amputation will be necessary, but to what extent is not yet known. It was a most unfortunate occurrence.

FREE—Bicycle—FREE.

E. F. Atwood, the popular Front street druggist, has on exhibition in his store a fine high grade lady's bicycle, which he will give away free on the evening of July 3rd. Every cash purchaser of ONE DOLLAR'S worth of goods will get a ticket free. If you need anything in his line make your purchase at Atwood's, and get a chance on this fine wheel. A gentlemen's wheel of equal grade given if desired. Remember it is a strictly high grade standard machine, Morgan & Wright tires, worth $100. Here is the chance of your life.

Family Matinee.

The newest "Devil's Auction" Co. will give a matinee for woman and children at the opera house tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon, at the extremely low price, considering the merits of the company and its great size, of 50 cents for ladies and 25 cents for children. The performance will in every way equal the evening performance. Here is an opportunity to see one of the greatest spectacular exhibitions in the world at less than half the usual price.

Not Opposed to Organization.

Commissioner Bryant, of Cass county, was in the city yesterday, and was very indignant that he should be quoted as opposing organization. He says he is now and always has been in favor of organization, no matter where the county seat is located or who gets the offices. Any statement to the contrary is false.

Death of R. H. Paine.

On Saturday morning last, about 10 o'clock, at his home in this city, R. H. Paine, one of Brainerd's most prominent and influential citizens, departed this life, his death bed surrounded by those most dear to him on earth. The cause of his sudden death in the prime of life and manly strength was pneumonia. He had been afflicted with a severe cold nearly all winter, but was able to be about and attend to business until Wednesday March 3rd, when he was stricken down with the dread disease that destroyed his life. His death was a great shock to his hosts of friends throughout the city, who, although aware of his illness, were led to believe that the worst was over and he was convalescing. Mr. Paine was an upright, honorable and respected citizen, and had the esteem of every one who knew him. He was active and enterprising, and could always be depended upon to take any active part in anything that had for its object the material and moral advancement of the community, hence his death will be greatly deplored in business circles, as well as in his family circle, where he was a kind and loving husband and just and affectionate father.

Deceased was born Nov. 27th, 1846, in Victory, Cayuga county, N. Y., consequently he was over 50 years of age at his death. Here he spent his boyhood days, removing to Illinois in 1865. In 1867 he was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Kerns, and for over 30 years she has been his constant and loving companion, sharing alike his joys and sorrows. In 1869 Mr. Paine came to Lake City, Minn., where he resided until 1871. In that year he moved with his family to Long Prairie, Todd county, and in 1873 came to Brainerd, and he has resided here ever since except a couple of years in the latter part of the '70's when he lived in Little Falls. The early years of his residence here he was engaged conducting a meat market, but for the last 10 years he has been in the plumbing business. He was very active in politics, being a strong Republican, and always taking an active part in advancing the interests of his party. He has been alderman two or three times, and member of the board of education. He was an active and influential member of the I. O. O. F., and also belonged to the Royal Arcanum and J. O. A. M., all of which lodges, with the board of trade, of which he was a member, attended the funeral in a body.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday, March 16th, at the First Congregational church, Rev. D. D. McKay, of the Presbyterian church, conducting the services. His remains were interred in Evergreen Cemetery, followed to their last resting place by such a large concourse of friends and neighbors that only a small part could gain admittance to the church. Out of respect for the deceased all the business houses in the city were closed Tuesday afternoon during the funeral.

His faithful wife and seven children, besides his aged mother and two brothers, N. M. Paine, of this city, and K. S. Paine, of the state of Washington, survive him. His mother lives with N. M. Paine. His oldest daughter, Mrs. C. J. Husted, lives in Guatemala, Central America, and, of course, was unable to be present at the funeral. The eldest son, Shally, is married, and lives here, while the other five children, two boys and three girls live at home.

A Successful Entertainment.

The presentation of "Shore Acres" at the opera house on the evening of St. Patrick's day by local talent brought out one of the largest audiences that has filled the opera house for some time. Every seat in the parquet and circle was filled, and standerdsbearing room was occupied. The gallery also was completely filled, hence a large sum will be realized for the church and A. O. H. lodge for whose benefit the entertainment was given. The play was well presented and moved with the snap and vim of a professional production. All in attendance were well pleased.

Both plead not guilty, and their trial was set for Monday, March 22nd. Bail was fixed in each case at $100. The trouble occurred in Holmes' blacksmith shop in East Brainerd. Smith has been employed by Holmes for some time, and in an attempt to settle the row occurred.

Stella Brown and Nellie Tyson, were before the municipal court on Monday for keeping houses of ill fame. The arrest was made under the state law which makes the offense a felony. They waived examination and were bound over to await the action of the grand jury, bail being fixed at $250.
