Enross Desavers—Will you kindly give notice through your paper to the people of Brainard, that I, J. P. Walker, on the 10th of July that they can ride cheaper on the steamer "Leta" D., than any other boat on the lake, and also as good as any accommodations. N. Dallas, Prop. $1.50 per dozen for Cabinet Photographs a few days longer.

Deceased.

Recently the members of the York Falls Band presented Mr. J. L. Snyder an elegant one of the most beautiful and complete sets of brass instruments ever seen in this city, and the present was accompanied by the following address:

Mr. Snyder: We have no doubt that the present period of your life is the most enjoyable and happy of your experience. We have ready the pleasure of welcoming you back to your adopted field of labor, and of pleasure. We entertain great hopes for your future success, and we assure our previous acquaintance but confirms us in such expectations.

That one and all appreciate your services, and the high regard in which you are held by the community, is evidenced in the beautiful instrument you have just received. It is a fitting testimonial to your Christian life as a fact to which every Christian man and woman in Brainard will gladly subscribe, and we trust that you will use it with the same care and devotion that heretofore present you with your chair as a precious possession, and that you will use it with the same care and devotion that heretofore present you with your chair as a precious possession, and that you will use it with the same care and devotion that heretofore present you with your chair as a precious possession.

Yours faithfully,
E. W. Feltz, Secy.

Yours truly,
J. L. Snyder.

On Thursday morning Dr. W. H. Heston and his wife had been preparing for their visit and had plenty of the staff on hand which he is said to have manufactured himself, and after a banquet of a day or two the Indians began to get sick, Chief Waa-Sag and three others dying and several others being in a critical condition. Many of the Indians had left the place when the payment took place and riders were sent out to look for them, and the death of their comrades and the cause of it, and to gather them together again, and to see that they were safely taken to the city, and to see that they were safely taken to the city, and to see that they were safely taken to the city.

The members of Workmen Post O. A. R. who had been held in Brainard attending the district convocation returned home today. All report having had a splendid time and speak highly of the hospitality of Brainard's citizens—Little Falls Transcriber.

The merry-go-round which has had its riding place in Brainard for some time has been sold and on Monday was taken to Little Falls where its operation will be continued, and the population of our sister city will after July 4th, after which it will be taken to Southern Minnesota.

Thet No 654 drew the bicycle at St. Clouding Co's store Wednesday evening. The holder of the ticket has not yet disclosed his or her identity, but if the ticket holder is known, please call on the store where the bicycle will be exchanged for the price of postage bearing the above number.

A Staples correspondent writes of the late convocation as follows: We have been read of the pastime of Job, and believe we found it exemplified in our commander, J. Congdon. It is quite interesting to find a patient under all circumstances. We wish there were more like him. The ladies of Brainard attend a convocation at the home of Mrs. J. E. Thomas, foreman of the N. P. First shops. Mrs. Thomas' family consisted of herself, wife and three children and they were all in the line of the convocation, the children being upstairs. The convocation was held in the afternoon, and the house was practically wrecked, every room in it bearing evidence of the fighting work. In the room where the children were, the plastering was torn off and the wood work and furniture strewed around the house. In the kitchen the stove was turned around, tinware scattered about and the contents of the ice box mixed up together. A peculiar feature was that all the articles were left by the lightning's visit there was no place where a trace of burning could be found.

DRINK PAINKILLER AND DIE.

Indians at Mill Lake Escaped over the death of a recent of their Member.

J. H. Hallett and Fred Loken returned Wednesday from the Indian payment from Mill Lake and brought with them several Indians who had been dead as a result of drinking a quantity of painkiller and other preparations which they bought of a trader at Mill Lake. Although many of our readers do not know the Indians are in the habit of buying these goods for the alcohol that they get from the trader, and that they had prepared for their visit and had plenty of the staff on hand which he is said to have manufactured himself, and after a banquet of a day or two the Indians began to get sick, Chief Waa-Sag and three others dying and several others being in a critical condition. Many of the Indians had left the place when the payment took place and riders were sent out to look for them, and the death of their comrades and the cause of it, and to gather them together again, and to see that they were safely taken to the city, and to see that they were safely taken to the city.
