TO FIND SOUTH POLE.
BELGIAN ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION TO GRAMM LAND.

The American Explorers in the South Pole. A. Reagin, of the South Pole. A. Reagin, of the South Pole. A. Reagin, of the South Pole.

When the Belgian Antarctic Expedition, which is now on its way to Gramm Land, south of Cape Horn, begins its work of polar research in the antarctic seas, it will usher in a new epoch in the history of the quest for the great antarctic continent. Fortunately for America we take hearty satisfaction in following the work of the Belgians, since not only was the first American land discovery by an American in 1841—the land the expedition first touched—but the revival of a belief in an immense ice clad continent at the south pole was due to another American, who was the first to see its extended coast line, marked by giant ice cliffs and extended by dependent icebergs that never fail to amaze and awe those who gaze upon them. In fact, it may be said the glory of rehabilitating the mysterious continent of the south pole lies exclusively to the credit of the Belgian, the English under Cook, in 1774, established the first belief in a Magellanic continent which had engrossed the attention of explorers for centuries and to the English in the forties gave it as his belief that the lands were by the land.

The progress of science, however, has proved the American right and the English wrong. Through very little has been added to our knowledge of antarctic lands since the American expedition under Peary in 1911, or since the Norwegian Captain Wilkes in 1840. The expedition from 88 degrees to 100 degrees west longitude. It reports with the antarctic pole, we know from other accurate conditions that there must be a high degree of polar land mass. The argument is based on the size and character of the icebergs that frequent at certain periods the southern coast. Certainly enough, the statistics on the north polar regions have given us the means of predicting the size of affairs at the south pole. What we know now is this: Icebergs are not the result of the heaving up of ice floes in polar seas. On the contrary, they are not oceans in origin, but are produced by glaciers that protrude from great inland ice masses of the polar land masses, and they flow out in all directions to the sea of the glaciers that discharge them. And, moreover, the size of the glaciers depends on the extent of the continental ice cap and the configuration of the coast line where they breach into the sea.

Recently neither Wilkes—afterward the hero of the Trent affair—nor Ross knew this fact of iceberg formation in 1840. Wilkes later believed in an entire continent on his observed land masses, while Ross, perhaps the greatest continental traveler largely because of his discovery of the icebergs, has them, they indicate a vast isolated area, or in nothing in the antarctic region so extraordinary as the size of its bergs. The Greenland bergs, "calving bergs" as the phrase goes, and in considerable numbers they indicate a vast isolated area, or in nothing in the antarctic region so extraordinary as the size of its bergs. LUCK OF A ROER.

He Was the first to Discover the Famous Wisconsin Mine. A simple-minded Roer—that is, he was simple minded at first—discovered the famous Wisconsin diamond mine in the most extraordinary manner. He had been out on the wide prairie the horses one evening when he noticed a small animal coming "meekly" across the dirt from the burrow. Some peculiarity of the earth led him to put one of its hooves on the animal and he found it to be a diamond. He examined it that night. To his astonishment and delight he found it to be a three-carat diamond. Further search at the "meekly" hole revealed other diamonds, and before six months had passed the Dutch farmer had been offered and refused $2,500,000 for his farm.

THE CARE OF SILVER

All silver used entirely for ornamental purposes, such as spoons (when in use), candlesticks, trays of all kinds, etc., should be so treated as to require nothing but a regular rub every so often with a clean soft cloth. This is easily done by having them properly lacquered, and is a great addition to their utility and their appearance. In cities, especially, silver tarnishes with fearful rapidity. To prevent this, it should be kept in a dry, well-aired place, and should be rubbed with a soft, dry cloth every so often. This will keep it bright and shining as long as it is properly cared for. It is also a good idea to rub silver with a little oil of sweet almond every so often. This will keep it bright and shining as long as it is properly cared for. The New Bridge.

The county commissioners on Tuesday rejected all bids for the construction of the new Mississippi river bridge, and engaged Chas. F. Loweth, of St. Paul, a bridge expert, at a salary of $200 to draw new plans and superintend the construction within the same time. The plans will be ready in about two weeks, at which time new bids will be called for, the bidders to be required to conform to the specifications instead of submitting plans of their own and bidding accordingly as they did under the last advertisement, and which made it necessary to do the work over.

Not Yet Settled.

Two meetings of the citizens have been held during the week for the purpose of considering some matter left by which Mr. C. N. Parker could be induced to continue operating the electric street car line. Mr. Parker finally informed the gentlemen in writing that if $2,500 was raised he would operate the line for another year. On Wednesday evening some thirty of the business men were in attendance and a committee consisting of Geo. A. Kewee, H. I. Cohen, J. F. McLintock, Con. O'Brien and J. W. Koop were appointed to see what could be done to raise the amount. Yesterday something over $1000 was subscribed and probably the amount can be raised to $1,500 but it is quite improbable that $2,500 can be made up. The committee expect to meet Mr. Parker today and have a private conference with him. The discontinuance of the line is a matter that would seriously affect business interests and would be a great inconvenience to the traveling public and it is hoped that some arrangement can be made whereby it will be continued.

A Highly Gifted Indian Girl.

Miss Etta Scott of Redfords, Ind., a teacher in the kindergarten department of the Indian schools at Fort St. O. T., returned home the other day, bringing with her a 3-year-old Indian girl who is a prodigy. The little girl, Nahma Coffie by name, speaks English fluently, sings like a lark and carolines with one of the most intricate dances. Nahma is the leader of her class and is instructed with the direction of the girls. She was one of twins, and, according to the Indian superstition of the Indians, was condemned to die, it being considered an ill omen to raise twins. Nahma, having raised the other twin, was in the hands in a famished condition, and she had adopted her as her own child. Nahma is remarkably bright and interesting. She holds leaves every day and has a constant stream of callers.—
