ROBBED OF $700.

Frank Reinard, a Lumber Cook Relieved of a Large Sum of Money While Drunk.

Frank Reinard, a cook in the lumber woods, was robbed of about $700 on Tuesday night about 8 o'clock in Crawford & Donant's saloon on Fifth street. Mr. Reinard arrived that day from Atkin, and spent the afternoon in the saloons about town, getting a fair-sized jag. About 8 o'clock he hung up his vest in the water closet at Crawford & Donant's saloon, leaving it hang there for a few moments. The vest contained about $600 in cash, and a certificate of deposit on the First National bank, of this city for $400. When he recovered his vest his money was gone. The police were notified, and a short time later a lumberman by the name of William Flatler was arrested as Kellehan's for the offense. From what the officers have been able to learn another lumberman by the name of Wm. Harris, is implicated, but he has $500, and a reward of $250 has been offered for his apprehension. About $75 was found on Flatler's person, and he gave $50 to Mr. Kellehan for safekeeping. It is known that he gave Harris some money, but Flatler is thought to be the man who did the stealing. He was arraigned in court on Wednesday afternoon charged with grand larceny in the 2nd degree. He pled not guilty and his examination was set for Wednesday, April 19th. Bail was fixed at $500, in default of which he is in jail.

Annual Bicycle Meeting.
 The annual meeting of the Brainerd Cycle Path Association was held at Garden Hall on Wednesday evening, about 75 or a 100 cyclists being present. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

President—H. W. Linnemann.
 Vice President—Henry J. Cohen.
 Treasurer—F. A. Farrar.
 Secretary—Jas. R. Smith.

A motion was made that the president appoint a committee of five to get with the officers as to the executive committee to conduct the affairs of the Association.

The matter of building cycle paths in the city was discussed, and it was decided in the sense of the meeting that the Association use its funds to build paths in the city.

On motion the executive committee was instructed to procure 300 tags to be sold at $1 each.
 The president was instructed to appoint a committee of five to arrange for a dance to be given by the Association at Garden Hall on May 14th, the proceeds to be used for cycle paths. The Association intends to raise the necessary money for building paths by receipts from the dance and from selling membership tags at $1 each. Every member in the city should contribute his mite for paths by buying a tag and procuring a ticket to the dance.

Shooting at Jenkins.
 Westley Curo, of Jenkins, was in the city on Monday. He came to make complaint against Andy Hayford for attempting to shoot him, but for some reason no action has as yet been taken. Deputy Winters was at Jenkins on Monday and from him it is learned that Hayford shot at Curo through the window of the dining room at Curo's place with a 32 revolver. He missed his man. Curo was sitting by a stove in the dining room. The shooting occurred about 9 o'clock Saturday night, and was witnessed by several persons. Hayford and Curo both conduct stores at Jenkins, and are said not to be friendly. Hayford was one of the men under arrest for the Barclay shooting. Hayford, it is reported, was the worse for liquor at the time of the shooting.

Card of Thanks.
 I desire to extend my heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends and neighbors for sympathy and aid during my recent deep affliction. And I am especially grateful to Miss Larson, Miss Nelson and Mr. Kaud Nelson for all, to the Norwegian and Danish Lutheran Young People's societies for flowers, and to the employees of the Brainerd Lumber Co. for collection and wreath given on that sad occasion. Their noble and generous assistance will always be held in grateful remembrance.
 HANS OLSON.

LETTER FROM MANILA.
From the Pen of George A. Gallagher, a Brainerd Boy, Describing the Philippine Outbreak.

Rev. G. W. Gallagher received the following letter from his son, George, recently.

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 20th, '99
DEAR FATHER—On the evening of February 4th, I was on guard at the theatre. About 9:30 p. m. there was a rumor around that every American soldier was ordered to quarters. We had had so many scares that no one believed it. At 9:45 p. m. we heard a great yell and every one made a rush for the doors, there was a little excitement for a time but no one was hurt. When we got every street cleared we could hear the firing which was not more than a mile or a mile and a half away. There was very heavy fighting that night. The boys poured in volley after volley all through the night. I was on patrol so had a chance to move around and see things. The end of our company's district extends very near to the outpost, and was up to the rear of the reserve line. The street I was on presented a very warlike appearance. Towards the end of it were pile boxes of ammunition, hospital wagons were moving back and forth, several guns of the Irish battery were situated a little farther on. Troops were in marching order, waiting to move at a moment's notice, and still farther ahead, General McArthur and his staff rode in full view, while all the time a terrible fire was kept up. Our own company was up all night. Extra patrols were sent out and extra guard for the electric light work. The fighting was not in one place, but all around the city. The morning broke, the boys had driven most of the "groggins" back, but not more than a few hundred yards. On Sunday, February 5th, the hardest fighting occurred. The batteries and heavy guns from the fleet did splendid work, driving the insurgents out of their trenches. The hundreds of them. The soldiers did some fine work that day. One of the most brilliant parts of the whole campaign consisted of the charges made by the men. The insurgents cannot stand the charge and every time they have been driven into quarters we have driven them out. On Saturday, Feb. 4th, the hardest charge was made by the 14th regular infantry. They drove the insurgents out of their trenches, with a loss of twelve killed and twenty wounded. They got into a lead hand and fought, and the "groggins" were just out of sight of the trenches. One of them, in one trench, as fast as the men could get up and shoot, they were firing. I got up in one of the church towers and could see the fire and smoke in every direction. About four miles out you could see the puff of smoke from the guns of the batteries, looking out on the bay see the Monterey firing her big 22 inch guns, and when one of those shells struck, things flew. We have captured about two hundred insurgents, and in town, who have had papers and arms on their persons. The only trouble we have had in town occurred over a week ago. Some fool of the California regiment thought he detected niggers in a tower signaling and opened fire. In two minutes all the patrols in the city were firing. Of course, we were all hustled out and thought that we were going to have some fun. The only results were the wounding and killing of two Filipinos. We have been confined to quarters very closely, but most of the boys have been out the firing line some time or other. They either were excited or annoyed. I got excited by Captain Corcoran, rolled up my sleeves, strapped my old rusty Springfield over my back, took an extra clip in my revolver belt, and started out seven o'clock in the morning, looking for blood. There were three of us started together. On the outside every house had a white flag out, and they were a scared lot of people. A quarter of a mile out we came to the first signs of the conflict, deserted houses with here and there bullet holes shot through them; farther along there were no houses, in their place were big black spots, with wraith dogs barking around them. We then came to a cemetery, where there had been some hard fighting, and which was only taken after a gallant charge by the Montana regiment. The walls were torn up by shells. It was a sorry looking place. Inside was a small chapel which had been looted. Going farther, we passed dead dogs, horses and caribou, the stench was something awful. At last we reached the rear guard of the brigade. They asked us to what regiment we belonged, we answered "The Kansas" and passed on. No Minnesota men were allowed to pass on account of so many of us are afraid of the fighting line and leaving the city unprotected. Two miles from the front. We went on. Signs of the fight were all about us. Troops were moved down, houses were riddled with shot. Finally we got where we could see some of the town. We passed several fields, hospital, and a lot of ammunition. Here we could see the trenches. We turned to the left and went as far as we could go; this was where the Kansas regiment was. They had thrown up fair trenches and seemed to be enjoying themselves. They had built little coverings, into which they could crawl in the day time to get out of the heat of the sun. The heat is something awful. The slight before they had been up all night fighting. Everything was still from except a shooting of the out troops. We turned to the right and followed the trenches. We came to the Irish guns and the Montana regiment. We walked a little to the right of the trenches to look at the scene on the left, when "jing" went a bullet over our heads. It was funny to see us duck. A sharp shooter had seen us and taken a shot at us. With the glass we could just see too far away for anything like sure shot, so we did not waste ammunition on him. We passed along the trenches of the 3d artillery, who were acting as infantry. They had elegant trenches facing on an open plain, which stretched two miles to the town of Calocoon, then occupied by the 3d. A little to the right of the 3d were three guns of the 6th artillery, commanding the plain and a portion of the town. Immediately to the right of the 6th was a large church with a high wall around it and a large stone block house. The front of the church was blown off. These grounds and the block house were guarded by the 10th Pennsylvania. I got to the wall and looked over to Calocoon through a glass, and could see natives hurrying along the edge of the woods opposite me. A little to my left Calocoon could be seen to the right of the wall. When I could see about a thousand natives throwing up trenches under the direction of their officers. I could plainly see them use their rifles and shotguns. It was now ten o'clock and I started back for town. I returned to pass two guns of the Irish battery and a battalion of the Idaho men going out to the front. They were three machine guns. They told us they were going to attack Calocoon at 1 o'clock. I had known what was going to happen, and would have stayed out there, but I was not so far in the last use that we were completely tired out and could not have stayed out again for the night. The 10th Pennsylvania were ordered to go to the front at a moment's notice. We thought we would have to go to the front at a moment's notice. The 10th Pennsylvania were ordered to go to the front at a moment's notice. The 10th Pennsylvania were ordered to go to the front at a moment's notice.

THE RIGHTFUL HEIR

By T. CALDON.

A handsome terror seized Lucy Violante as she read these few lines. She had heard her father say that marriage to the Count Germain.

"You choose the wrong time to talk of marriage," cried the king in impudent, the treasury empty, and this assembly has been convened since indicated to take all authority into their own hands.
These frequent mobs have a ugly look; none excited the cannals are like wild beasts. Something prompt and decisive should be done, and that Louis XVII. is not the one to enforce." Any warning to her father from such a source she knew would be unheeded. Fortunately, he himself saw the unpleasantness of further stay at the capital, and hurried back to Geneva.

The preliminary riot of the 20th had left an unpleasant impression. It was evident that humiliating cup was not to be the bitter draught which the king was to sip. The king's lips were frowned, but the excited fever had drifted toward the very borders of the land.

"At Grenoble the frantic zeal of the militiamen seemed increased. They were shouting with a perturbed roar:
"Violante," said Count Beaulieu
to his daughter, "do not be alarmed."
"Violante," said Count Beaulieu
to his daughter, "do not be alarmed."
"Violante," said Count Beaulieu
to his daughter, "do not be alarmed."

"He will not come. If I can help him hereafter, I shall do so. If he is late, his blood be his own head."
answered Bernard, leaning down to the delicate lace borders from the grasp of the Countess Germain had not been restrained by her own bride, and had not been his set teeth, while he gave one giant, and that proud, proud
"stand back, madame, and let her pass, and if you choose, follow
yourself; much as I loathe, detest,
and hate you, in this dire extremity
will I not preserve your life."
The Countess flung him a mingled glance of hate and scorn and hurried to seek the gentlemen at the stables, while Bernard, lifting Violante in his arms, ran off with his own hands, with and with one wild cry of a mother's anguish again she fell forward senseless. At the same moment the crowd, maddened into frenzy, shouted:
"Let the others follow; short shifts for those who have had no pity for us."

Bernard knew from the white Violante leaved against him, his nerves could bear no more, yet he was not to be
out. The dense mass of hervees which wedged them in like a vice, and the sudden movement might cause an explosion, whereupon, he felt, while an icy shudder ran through his heart, in the present excited tide of rage, there was not the slightest doubt but that graceful form would swing beside the lifeless body of him who as brief a time he had been with her, and
lose the altar, in the bloom of health and strength. All he could do was to behold her so that she could not see the fierce hands that were grasping her father's throat. Suddenly a small, spare man, with huge muscles, grey hair, black, tanned away from a Peregrine, he leaped and leaped half of his life, with eagle eyes that shone luminous with quenchless fire as the stare of a hundred torches burned over him, leaped upon a rostrum, improvised from a black fowling stand
and waving his hand, cried:

Five Thousand Books Written by Women Miss Louise Baxter, daughter of the late Justice Nathaniel Baxter of the supreme bench of Tennessee, according to the St. Louis Republic, is responsible for a most unique collection of books at the Tennessee Centennial.
Having traveled abroad, and being familiar with the literature of many countries, Miss Baxter was inspired with the idea of making a collection of the writings of women from all corners of the earth for the centennial of her native state. To do this Miss Baxter wrote seven hundred letters to foreign governments, many of them in the language of the countries to which they were sent.

There are four books written by a Chinese woman, A. D. 25. They were sent by the emperor of China. The Chinese woman wrote about the manners and customs of women and recommended chaste and husband. The emperor of Japan sent 126 books written by the women of his realm. There are twelve modern Greek books sent from Greece.

There are books from Armenia, Peru, Hungary, Roumania, Russia, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Denmark.
Norway and Sweden. All of the South American countries are represented.
Many of these books were the only ones by women ever published in the country from which they were sent.
This was the case with the volumes from Honduras and Guatemala.
Many of them have been presented to Miss Baxter by the different governments which responded to her requests.
She will have one of the most valuable and unique libraries in the United States.

CHAPTER VII.
A citizen Hugo, who is late at the revel," called out a stunt, "I am a man; where were you when we warmed up the old German chateau?"
I know you'll not sorry tonight you are not in your right mind, I think I've heard somewhere, should be of the kind of that damned wretch Count Emile, he called himself. Par-dant but we'll soon let out of his mouth the vilest of the vilest blood which he boasted," and with a loud laugh the man turned his burning eyes around the crowd, demanding applause for his jest.

Men, boys and creatures in the likeness of womanhood, but changed to demons by the scorching heat of the greeted the speech with loud laughter, and a hundred voices rose shrilly, demanding if the aristocrat had yet been traced to his hiding place.
"Ah, Hugo," said another, "I wondered where you were. Your under-

citizen Jean, is our orator tonight.
What pale face stripes! have you been? "But, boy, get thee to bed, such brave signs as these light the blood from your cheeks." Bernard sprang with a light foot, and drew on with his trembling companion nearer to the avenue. "It dearly, however, at the entrance gate, went up a shrill cry of rejoicing.
"They are taken! they are brought back, Bernard and Beaulieu—all are here. Now for our turn. Let us show them who are lords now!"

"I salute tightened her hold of her companion's arm, but only the dilated, horror frozen eyes betrayed her emotion, and every eye in the crowd was directed to the avenue, along which, pushed forward by the bayonets of a serried body of new made soldiers, were the frightened, disarmed group, who had so lately fled from the chapel. The Countess Germain, with wonderful courage, held up her head proudly and looked to the right or left.
One bold ruffian reached forward, and snatching off her mantle, set the jeweled bandon that encircled the country's head, and flung it into a crowd of horses, feral, women, who clapped their hands in applause.
"I could not see a living soul in the chateau, doubtless they fled the moment you entered the chapel. Once more, will you follow me?" If you had come at first I might have insured safety now it will be a race for life.
Count Beaulieu looked irresolute.
Count Emile remained laughing, though his voice shook with terror.

"It is folly to think of help from you; quick, quick, we can make the horse ourselves," and he plunged desperately toward the stables.
Bernard turned frantically to Violante, who stood from beside the Countess Germain, and who, seeing her stammering, said to her:
"Violante, will you with me?"
"Yes, yes, Bernard, but, oh, my father!"

"He will not come. If I can help him hereafter, I shall do so. If he is late, his blood be his own head."
answered Bernard, leaning down to
the delicate lace borders from the grasp
of the Countess Germain had not been
restrained by her own bride, and
had not been his set teeth, while he
gave one giant, and that proud, proud
"stand back, madame, and let
her pass, and if you choose, follow
yourself; much as I loathe, detest,
and hate you, in this dire extremity
will I not preserve your life."
The Countess flung him a mingled
glance of hate and scorn and hurried
to seek the gentlemen at the stables,
while Bernard, lifting Violante in his
arms, ran off with his own hands,
with and with one wild cry of a mother's anguish again she fell forward senseless. At the same moment the crowd, maddened into frenzy, shouted:
"Let the others follow; short shifts
for those who have had no pity for us."

Bernard knew from the white Violante
leaved against him, his nerves could
bear no more, yet he was not to be
out. The dense mass of hervees which wedged them in like a vice, and the
sudden movement might cause an
explosion, whereupon, he felt, while an
icy shudder ran through his heart, in
the present excited tide of rage, there
was not the slightest doubt but that graceful form would swing beside
the lifeless body of him who as brief
a time he had been with her, and
lose the altar, in the bloom of health and strength. All he could do was to behold her so that she could not see
the fierce hands that were grasping
her father's throat. Suddenly a small, spare man, with huge muscles,
grey hair, black, tanned away from a Peregrine, he leaped and leaped
half of his life, with eagle eyes that
shone luminous with quenchless fire
as the stare of a hundred torches
burned over him, leaped upon a rostrum, improvised from a black fowling stand
and waving his hand, cried:

HEALTH and beauty are the glories of perfect womanhood.

Women who suffer constantly with weakness peculiar to their sex cannot retain their beauty. Preservation of their features and rounded form is a duty women owe to themselves. The mark of excessive monthly suffering is a familiar one in the faces of young American women.

THE MARKS OF SUFFERING

Don't wait, young women, until your good looks are gone past recall. Consult Mrs. Pinkham at the earliest start. Write to her at Lynn, Mass.

Miss Rosa Ellis, Higginson, writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham—I am a school teacher and had suffered untold agony during my menstrual periods for ten years. My nervous system was almost a wreck. I suffered with pain in my side and had almost every human flesh is heir to. I had taken treatment from a number of physicians who gave me no relief. In fact one eminent specialist said no medicine could help me an operation. At my mother's request, I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham stating my case in every particular and received a prompt reply. I followed the advice given, and in a few days I began to feel better. I am now suffering no more during my menses. If anyone cares to know more about my case, I will cheerfully answer all letters."

Miss Kate Cook, 16 Addison St., Mt. Jackson, Ind., writes: "I am by occupation a school teacher, and for a long while suffered with painful menstruation and nervousness. I was cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I have gained more benefit from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound than from all remedies that I have ever tried."

"Congressman" Falkington says the question of expansion demands serious consideration. "He has always been in the fence."—Pack.

When a person is down in the world, an ounce of help is worth a pound of advice. "The doctor and his wife seem to be the only cure for Sweden, Baring, Burning, Breveting, Feet, Forns and Fustions. Ask for Dr. Foot, Bane, a powder to be shaken into the shoe. At all Drugists and Shoe Stores. See Samples sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Ormsted, LeRoy, N. Y."

A good watch. "The doctor and his wife seem to be the only cure for Sweden, Baring, Burning, Breveting, Feet, Forns and Fustions. Ask for Dr. Foot, Bane, a powder to be shaken into the shoe. At all Drugists and Shoe Stores. See Samples sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Ormsted, LeRoy, N. Y."

Two rules of Russian dress. "The doctor and his wife seem to be the only cure for Sweden, Baring, Burning, Breveting, Feet, Forns and Fustions. Ask for Dr. Foot, Bane, a powder to be shaken into the shoe. At all Drugists and Shoe Stores. See Samples sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Ormsted, LeRoy, N. Y."

It's a poor contentment that can't make both ends meet.

HOW TIMOTHY ENRIGHT DIED.
Death Came While on Patrol Duty—Was Instantaneous.
 The St. Paul Dispatch contains the following further particulars of the death of Timothy Enright, of this city. Death came while on patrol duty, and although he did not lose his life in the shock of battle with enemies, and was as heroic as if in a charge at the cannon's mouth.
 The Dispatch says:
 "Adjutant-General Lambert yesterday received a supplementary report from Col. Ames of the Thirtieth regiment, dated March 11th. The report gives the details of the killing of Timothy Enright, the private of Company B who was killed by a live wire. The report states that Enright met his death at 4 o'clock in the morning of the 11th while on patrol duty. He had a wife and a child at his arm, and was about to break it off on the end which was charged when he received the shock, which killed him instantly." Held to the Grand Jury.
 The preliminary examination of John Ryan and Mrs. Lottie Nash, charged with adultery, was held on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in the district court room, an audience completely filling the large room before the prosecution occupied the morning session at the morning and afternoon sessions of the court. County Attorney Alderman, one W. H. Crowell appeared for the defendant. The prosecution occupied the morning hours, although a great deal of time was consumed over the examination of testimony. Ralph Sipp, night clerk at the Arlington, was present with the register, and by him it was shown that on March 24th Ryan came into the hotel and asked for lodging, and was assigned room 17. He registered "John Ryan and wife" and went out and returned with a woman, who Mr. Sipp now identifies as Mrs. Nash. They occupied the room all night, asking to be called at 3 a. m. for the Duluth train which was done, but they did not come down until about 4 a. m., after the train was gone. Ryan's testimony tended to show the relation that existed between them was introduced. After dinner Attorney Crowell said the defense would introduce testimony at this time, but submit the case on the testimony of the state. The court decided that they were probably guilty and held them for the grand jury, fixing the bail at $500 each. As they are both broke the chances are they will stand for the summer with Sheriff Erickson.
 No End to Styles.
 No end of charming effects, direct from the leading manufacturers in the east, at Mrs. C. Grandemyer's, also our own stylish styles. Grand display of trimmed hats. The stock is the largest and best in town, and embraces all the choicest novelties of the season. The collection includes a superb variety of beautiful hats made by the most artistic designers. Our own designers contribute many pretty and becoming styles, that stylish women consider just the imported ones, but of course much cheaper in price. For reality and complete assortment we surpass all previous efforts, and our prices are low.
 Mrs. C. GRANDEMYER.
 A Fine Company.
 The Clara Mathes company opened an eight nights engagement at the Garden Opera house last night to a crowded house. The opening bill was the society drama "La Esmeralda," a play replete with dramatic interest and containing enough comedy to make it interesting and amusing. Miss Mathes appeared in the title role, and won the generous applause of the large audience by her able and conscientious work. The company is well balanced, all the characters being presented with force and ability. The company is undoubtedly one of the strongest repertory companies on the road playing to popular prices, and will undoubtedly deserve the generous patronage given on the opening night. Between the acts some very good specialties were introduced. Because of the previous engagement of the house for the clerk's ball no performance will be given this evening, but to-morrow night the company will present a double bill opening with the three act drama "The Kissing Passion," and concluding with the laughable farce "The Crushed Tragicomedy."
 Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 the company will give a matinee at which their exclusive version of "Peck's Bad Boy" will be presented.

Annual Parish Meeting.
 The annual parish meeting and reception by Rectored and Miss Kite, of St. Paul's Episcopal church, was held at the Guild room on Monday evening, Rev. and Miss Kite received the members. Church business was transacted as follows:
 Minutes of last meeting were read and accepted, and financial report of the church was read and approved. Parish officers were elected as follows:
 Senior Warden—L. P. White.
 Assistant Senior Warden—R. P. Walters.
 Junior Warden—W. D. McKay.
 Vestrymen—Thos. Halliday, J. J. Halsted, John Lowry, F. W. McKay and E. M. Egan.
 After the parish meeting the Ladies' Guild elected officers as follows: President—Mrs. H. Edwards.
 Vice Pres.—Mrs. W. E. Striklen.
 Treasurer—Mrs. A. J. Forey.
 Secretary—Mrs. L. M. Fage.
 A luncheon was served and a very pleasant social time enjoyed.
 Municipal Court Notes.
 Two plain drunks and one vagrancy case were tried yesterday. The defendant in the vagrancy case was fined $5.00. Two pleaded with the court for a discharge, and they would get right out of town, and other officers no more. All got $5 or $10.
 A man by the name of C. E. Bridgman was arraigned in court on Tuesday on complaint of Andrew Hayford, of Jenkins, charged with obtaining goods of the value of $51.57 on false pretenses. The man represented himself, it is alleged, as superintendent of the Pine Tree Lumber Co., of Little Falls, and the goods were sold him on that representation. The defendant pleaded a plea of not guilty and the examination was set for Thursday, April 20th. Bail was fixed at $200, which was given.
