A ROMANCE OF THE RAIL

BY FREDERIC REDDALL

PROLOGUE

On a certain morning in May the daily papers of the United States, from Maine to California, from the mountains news dispatch, it was set forth with all the bold and vivid tattle of black "wore heads" and pun-give headlines.

Some time during the previous night part of a limited express train on one of our great main trunk lines had been derailed without leaving a trace behind either of coaches or passengers.

So who would not be a railroad press agent, even if the head that carried the "bulletin board" news is sometimes in a way.

When John Draper, a married state and a young man of a good nature, was called to the office of the railroad president, even if the head that carried the "bulletin board" news is sometimes in a way.

John Draper was bound for Denver to attend an important meeting of the presidents of some of the greatest trunk railroads in the country.

Now, as a matter of fact, it was as much as Philip's reputation and safety career of duplicity culminating in actual crime.

That a high bred, high strung and high minded maiden like Florence

John Draper was his partner. He purchased the real estate partner's interest, paying $50,000 down, raising the mortgage to $100,000. He was in possession of the property for several months, drawn by himself and purchasing it in his own name.

With the name of the great financier on their backs these men began to get on the streets as "right sided paper," and they had no difficulty in getting on the streets. The inducements were skilfully forged, and James K. Filley was the forger.

No announcement of his partnership with the new firm was to be made, at Filley's request, for six months. Every thing was going in the stock market, and by the end of the term he was identified by the public as the man who had made the fortune.

Anyone desiring a dictionary should purchase Webster's International Dictionary, an advancement for which appears elsewhere in this issue. It is new and up to date, and contains over 2,000 pages with illustrations on nearly every page. Don't be fooled into buying one of the numerous reprints of Webster's dictionary which flood the market because they are cheap, as they are dear at any price. They are inaccurate, obsolete and out of date, and money spent for them is thrown away. It always pays to buy the best and latest, and that is universally conceded to be Webster's International Dictionary, published by C. & G. Merriam, Springfield, Mass.

CANDICE WANTS

5,000 COLD PLUNKS. Demand Made on The City For $5,000 Damages For Personal Injuries.

Up to The Time of Going To Press No Check But Best Offers For The Amount.

Candice E. Grant put in a claim to the city council on Monday for $5,000 damages for injuries which she alleges she received as a result of being backed down the embankment at the west end of the Mississippi river bridge by a fraudulent horse, the embankment having no railing or protection of any kind. The communication she sent to the council was type written, and she at first fixed her claim at $2,000, but probably as she contemplated her injuries the amount seemed insignificant, and she raised it to $5,000 by writing a 5 with a pencil over the type written 2. However, the council did not order a check drawn for the amount, but held it over until the next meeting with other claims against the city. The following is a copy of the communication sent to the council:

BRainerd, Minn., July 12, 1900. To the City of Brainerd, and to the City Council, the Mayor and the City Clerk of said city:

At 10 o'clock the bishop, attended by the visiting clergy, marched around the church outside and inside, giving it his blessing. At 10 o'clock high mass was celebrated, the clergyman assisting being Rev. Hoffmeyer, of Duluth, Rev. Bode, of St. John's University, Rev. Mayer, of Aitkin, Rev. Claude, of St. John's and Rev. D. W. Lynch, the pastor. The church and altar was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the choir rendered Hillard's mass. Bishop McColrick delivered a strong sermon, during which he congratulated the congregation in erecting the church of St. Francis, the Mayor and the other officers who administered the rite of confirmation.

Ten Meetings. The services in the 'big tent' have been quite interesting this week. Next Sunday afternoon there will be a service for both men and women at 8 p. m. The 'Young People's Union' will meet at 7 p. m. and will be led by Mr. W. V. Smith. Evangelistic services at 8 p. m. Mrs. Chulow will preach. To all these services the public are cordially invited.

THE LIMIT PASSED. One Scheme Which the Girl's Stepmother Would Not Sustain. 'Papa, I beg of you do not refuse' Cordelia had said, clinging tightly about her neck and embracing her mother's neck and raised kisses upon her cheek, while Anastasia, her sister, did likewise for her.

But their pleading seemed of no avail. The elder Pasadena shook their gray heads firmly in negation, though it was evident that the affection of retaining their daughters' request pained them beyond measure. Gently, but with decision, as one shakes a hard shelled crab from a scull net, the parents disentangled their daughter's arms from their about-neck, mastering his emotions, the father said:

'No, Anastasia and Cordelia, what you ask of us is too much! Never before have we refused a request of yours. We have moved from city to city, from state to state, to the injury of our business and the destruction of your mother's health, in order to do more for us, for every time the poor old one place would begin to suspect your true ages you have insisted on our packing up and going elsewhere, that you might be nearer to the outside. The idea—' Mrs. Pasadena here.

'We have submitted to this nomadic life for our love of you, but your most recent refusal is too much. We absolutely refuse.' But their firm parent remained firm. 'No,' answered Mr. Pasadena; 'we will not, absolutely will not, celebrate your fifteenth birthday in order to prove to people that you two cannot grow up in the outside. The idea—' Mrs. Pasadena here.

HISTORY OF THE NINTH

Fine Record of the American Regiment in China.

The Ninth regiment of infantry which suffered many losses in the fighting at Tientsin, which sustained its existence in January, 1900, under the leadership of Major-General G. A. Bland, the president to raise 12 additional regiments of infantry with Joseph Curtis Hall of Maryland as lieutenant colonel commandant. It was ordered to the Philippines and was recruited in that state, says the 'New York Times.' The regiment was disbanded in 1875, 1880, and organized in March, 1882, with Simon Learned of Massachusetts as colonel. It succeeded to that state and figured in several campaigns in the war of 1812, among them those of Niagara Falls and Landry's Lane.

Disbanded in 1818, the Ninth was again organized, with Thomas H. Bannum of Vermont as colonel in April, 1847. As Chaplain of the regiment, and later, and Colonel Bannum was killed at the battle of Chancellorsville. His successors were Colonel James M. Withers and Colonel Henry L. Webb. It was conspicuous for gallantry at Corcoran, Chancellorsville, San Antonio and Molino del Rey, and again disbanded in August, 1864, the regiment did not figure in the roster of the army until its reorganization at Fort Moore in March, 1885, with Lieutenant Colonel George Wright of the Fourth infantry as colonel. In December of that year the Ninth went to the Pacific coast, part of the command doing duty at Fort Vancouver and the rest at Fort Steilacoom, Wash.

The regiment saw much service in the field against hostile Indians in 1860 and during the next two years was engaged in building posts and making roads. Company F was detached in 1861 as an escort to the northern boundary of the territory and was on that duty for three years. Company B, in a reconnaissance of Fort Walla Walla in May, 1858, took part in repelling an attack of Indians and retired by a forced march at night without the loss of a man or a horse in spite of overwhelming odds. Other distinguished services were rendered by the regiment in Indian campaigns and in protecting California until June, 1860. In these 13 years the Ninth had participated in the wars of the Pacific coast, from Alaska, to Fort Mojave, Arizona. In July, 1860, Colonel Wright perished in the wreck of the steamer Brother Jonathan and was succeeded by John H. King.

For the next 17 years the Ninth did duty in the department of the Pacific. The Twenty-seventh infantry was consolidated with it in July, 1860. Its duties embraced the care of the Yellowstone expedition escorting the January exploring party and the Indian campaign which brought it under fire at Tongue river, Rosebud river, Slim Buttes and Goose creek in 1870. It figured in the Powder river expedition against the Sioux and in 1877-Comanches B. D. H. and K did good duty at Chicago during the railroad riots.

Indian duty kept the command to active service until 1891, when the regiment, which in 1890 had been sent to the department of Arizona, was transferred to the department of the west. In 1890 Colonel King was retired. His immediate successor, Colonel James Van Vorst, did not join, and he was succeeded by John B. Mason, who was retired in 1893, and was succeeded by Charles G. Moore. In the department of Arizona the regiment garrisoned every post in Arizona and some in New Mexico. Colonel Moore, retired in 1890 and was succeeded by Charles G. Hart. This succeeded Jacob Ford Kent, took a division to Cuba.

The Ninth was at San Juan and under Lieutenant Colonel E. F. Powers. In the engagement the regiment lost one officer and four men and had 27 wounded. Emerson H. Liscum became colonel of the Ninth April 22, 1899. The regiment arrived at Manila April 22 of that year and did garrison duty in the Philippine islands between Cebu and Manila. Captain O'Donnell, Captain Hamilton, Major Conception and Major Magallon. The Ninth received orders to embark for Tientsin on June 27.

Get Bicycle Tags. From now on the ordinance requiring bicycle tags for all wheels will be strictly enforced, and riders without tags will be promptly arrested. It was decided to wait until a day or two after pay day for riders to procure tags, after which arrests will be made.

Several arrests were made at Minneapolis yesterday under an ordinance exactly like ours, and the judge promptly assessed a fine against each of them. This action of the court disposes of the claim made by some that the courts would hold the ordinance invalid.
