

RESULT OF A RIOT

Striking Cigarmakers Succeed in Shutting Down Every Factory at Tampa.

American Union Had Ordered a Strike but Spaniards Refused to Obey.

Battle Follows Between Opposing Forces and the Police. Close All Shops.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 16.—A ministerial hot broke out at the gates of the cigar factory of Gonzalez, Mora & Co. Several hundred strikers were fired. No one was injured and the mob was dispersed by the police.

For several days trouble has been brewing between the members of the International Cigarmakers' union and the Spanish union, known as the International. Members of the International union have quit work at a number of factories, throwing out about 1,000 persons out of employment.

The Spanish union is apparently not in sympathy with the movement and about 60 of its members continued to work in the Gonzalez factory. The International marched up and demanded that these men come out. They were warned off the premises. An International man tried to push his way through the gates and was fired upon by the Italian guard. A volley was fired in reply from the street. The front and side of the building were riddled. These inside fired blindly through the windows. No one was hit, however. The police soon arrived and dispersed the crowd.

All factories closed at noon and to prevent further trouble 100 extra police and a squad of deputy sheriffs were sworn in.

KILLED BY A CABLE CAR.

Wall known New Hampshire tried to Over in New York.

New York, Nov. 16.—Rev. Father John E. Barry, vice general of the Province of Manchester and Concord, N. H., and pastor of St. John's church, Concord, was almost instantly killed by a cable car on Broadway late in the afternoon. In company with Rev. E. M. Callahan of Plymouth, N. H.; Rev. G. W. Murphy of Portland, Me.; and Rev. W. J. O'Leary of Manchester, N. H., he was crossing the street immediately in front of the car when it was passing at the time and Father Barry, being in the lead, was caught by the front of the other car and thrown in front of the wheels. His body was dragged for some distance, the wheels of the first truck passing over and mangling it. Traffic was stopped for some time, owing to the difficulty in removing the remains.

Father Barry was 65 years of age and was well known throughout New England. The conductor and motorist of the car that killed the vicar were arrested by the police.

It is expected the men will meet at Tattersall, Chicago, on Jan. 18, for 50 per cent of the gate receipts, the winner to take 75 and the loser $1,000, with Houseman as a forfeit. The articles were forwarded to William A. Brady, manager of Jeffries.

It is stated his relatives have made full provision for his defections and that he will spend gaily and throw himself upon the mercy of the court. White has been in South Africa and England.

TEES TO NOTHING.

Altkin Bluntly Beaten by Brainerd High School.

Nearly 200 Altkin enthusiasts came down on Saturday to see their high school team, as they fondly hoped and expected, literally wipe the earth with the Brainerd team, but they returned in the evening a sore and disgusted crowd unable to conceal their chagrin at being badly scooped in a hotly contested game. The party arrived at noon in two special coaches and through the streets during the afternoon sporting the colors of their team and making all sorts of noises on horns, trumpets, megaphones and other ear-splitting devices.

The game was called at 3 o'clock and was witnessed by several hundred people. Altkin was not in it at any stage of the game, the home side outplaying them at every point. The score at the close stood 10 to nothing in favor of the home team.

An entertainment and refreshment made was provided by the high school scholars at Gardner Hall for the entire party, but before the programme was well finished it was announced that the train would leave in 15 minutes. The balance of the programme was omitted and an attempt made to serve the refreshments, but the visitors practically left the hall and went to the depot, where they waited over an hour for the train. A delegation went there and requested them to return to the hall for refreshments, but they were apparently, sore over their defeat and refused to be entertained.

The local club will go to Little Falls tomorrow to play the return game with the Little Falls team.

What Democracy Thinks of Organized Labor.

The Cass Lake Times, a democratic paper, edited by ex-Judge Isaacson, contains the following:

What has been the result? Organized labor practically organized green, has been "whipped into line" by the republican bosses and their vain boasts have aborted. We are weary of these boasts of malcontents, they have no fixed principles, have no back-bone their leaders are venal and the rank and file too pusillanimous to enjoy personal freedom.

The Tax Levy.

The commissioners made the county tax levy for the ensuing year at their meeting on Tuesday. No levy was made for general county purposes or the poor fund, which makes it possible to keep the entire levy for the city. The levy for the city for the year 1901 is $4 per cent, say at about 28 mills, notwithstanding the big levy for school purposes which will be about one-half the whole amount. The levy last year was 47 mills, which makes a reduction of eight mills. It is confidently expected that the tax rate will never exceed four per cent, as the greatly increased valuation owing to the many improvements being made, will keep the rate in the future below that amount. This reduction in taxes will make property more salable, and all classes will be benefited.

Christmas is but a few weeks away, so do not put off having your photos taken until the last minute.

A BRILLIANT SOCIAL FUNCTION

Was the Wedding of William G. Cameron, of Staples, to Miss Mabelle Davis, of This City.

The Marriage Service was Conducted at the Congregational Church— Reception at the Bride's Home Followed.

Brainerd society turned out en masse on Wednesday evening to witness the marriage of Miss Mabelle S. Davis, eldest and charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Davis, to Dr. William Gooderham Cameron, of Staples.

The ceremony occurred at the First Congregational church. About six hundred invitations had been issued, and nearly all were responded to, as the spacious auditorium was completely filled by the invited guests. The church was tastefully decorated with potted plants, cut flowers and graceful ferns. The space about the altar was covered with pure white cloth, which formed a most pleasing background for the graceful forms and floral decorations.

Messrs. G. H. Spear, and H. D. Treiglawney and Drs. Bachelder and Coventry officiated as witnesses.

Precisely at nine o'clock the wedding party arrived in the vestibule of the church, and as the strains of the organ pealed forth the wedding march the bride party entered the auditorium and proceeded up the center aisle to the altar. The ushers came first, followed by twelve little girls dressed in white, composed of the bride's Sunday school class, singing the wedding chorus from Lohengrin. They were Marie Crogan, Elsie English, Edith Lagerquist, Hazel Jones, Mabel McPherson, Mildred Swartz, Bessie Wieland, Sarah Sanborn, Irma Parks, Winnie Wright, Alice Claus and Laura Donaldson. Next came the bridesmaids, Misses Adah Clark, of Minneapolis, and Miss Florence Merritt, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Maud Davis, the bride's sister, unattended. Two flower girls, one Jean and Lucile Atherton, dressed in white and carrying baskets of flowers came next. Master Vernon Henstead, dressed in a white suit followed, wearing a cushion, and then came the bride escorted by her father. She was attired in a magnificent white silk multi-gown cut castraine and trimmed with fur, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor wore a light blue multi-gown and carried pink carnations, while the bridesmaids looked lovely in pink multi-gowns with pink carnations. As the bride party approached the altar, the groom, supported by Dr. Mower, emerged from the choir room on the right and met the bride at the altar where he kissed her. The Rev. G. W. Gallagher conducted the ceremony that united their lives. The beautiful wedding service of the Episcopal church was used. While the wedding service was being conducted Mrs. J. C. Atherton, who played the wedding chorus for the children, delightfully sang "O Promise Me," her place at the organ being supplied by Mrs. C. S. Hazen. The bride and groom returned the marriage vows in clear distinct tones that could be heard throughout the assemblage. The bride's father gave away the bride. The bridal couple then knelt and received the benediction when the bride party left the church in the order of entrance, and the most interesting and charming ceremony ended.

After the ceremony a reception occurred at the home of the bride's parents, to which only the bride and groom party and a small party of friends were invited. The house was also tastefully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. The dining room where supper was served to the bride party, was handsomely decorated, the prevailing colors being pink and white. The champagne was strained with pink ribbon, and tremblers of pink silk ribbon entwined with amaranx were festooned to the four corners of the table and fastened with pink satin bows. A magnificent bouquet of pink carnations formed a center piece. Mrs. D. D. Smith and Mrs. Ames, assisted by Mrs. E. O. Webb and Mrs. F. W. Wieland, had charge of the supper arrangements.

After greeting the newly married couple and extending congratulations, and viewing the many and costly bridal gifts, the bridal party and guests partook of the marriage feast, and enjoyed a splendid social time until the hour for their departure on the midnight train. They were escorted to the train by the bride party and left amid a shower of rice and the heartfelt wishes of their numerous friends for a happy married life. They went to their future home in Staples, where a splendid new residence, a gift of the bride's parents, elegantly furnished throughout, awaited them. They were the recipients of a splendid array of wedding presents, among which might be mentioned a check of $500 from the bride's father, a grand piano, from Miss Maude, the bride's sister, and an elegant saddle suit, hat and muff for the bride from her mother.

The bride is one of Brainerd's fairest society ladies, whose splendid character and sweet disposition and winsome ways have made friends and admirers of all her acquaintances.

The groom is a rising young physician at Staples. He was assistant surgeon in the Sanitarium here for some months, during which time he made the acquaintance of his bride. He is a young man of excellent character and is making his mark as a physician and surgeon. The Dr. partook with hosts of friends of the congratulations and best wishes.

MARRIED.

The marriage, on Monday evening, Nov. 12th, of Dr. J. A. Thabes and Miss Daisy A. Bademan, was the occasion of a very pretty home wedding, the ceremonies occurring at the home of the bride's parents, on 4th avenue in East Brainerd, at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. H. Carver, of the Presbyterian church, conducting the marriage services. The house was tastefully decorated with potted plants and flowers. Only the immediate families of the bride and groom and a few invited friends were present. The groom was attended by H. P. Dunne, and Miss Maude Evans, of Duluth, was bridesmaid. Phyllis Benjamin flower girl and Evelyn Storm ring bearer. Mrs. J. H. Zimmerman presided at the piano, and delightfully rendered the wedding march as the wedding party entered the parlors and the bride and groom were presented at the altar. The ceremony, after which the newly married couple received the congratulations of the assembled guests and a sumptuous wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Thabes left for Minneapolis on the midnight train. They will return in a few days and begin housekeeping in a home provided by the groom at the corner of 5th and Holly streets.

Both of the contracting parties are well known, having resided here from childhood. The bride has taught in our schools for some years and is a refined and educated young lady greatly admired by all. The groom is a graduate of the medical department of the state University, and is associated with Dr. Camp in the practice of medicine, and has a large and lucrative practice. They both have the best wishes of their friends in their new relation.

J. W. Gabio and Miss Mary Gooderham were united in marriage on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, at St. Francis Catholic church, Rev. Fr. Lynch conducting the marriage ceremony. A reception was held at the bride's home at 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the residence of the bride's parents at the corner of Oak and Tenth streets, a large number of guests being present to greet and congratulate the newly married couple. A sumptuous wedding feast was served and a pleasant social time was enjoyed. Both of the contracting parties are very estimable young people long residing in Brainerd, and have the best wishes of all in their new relation.

ARRESTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

C. W. Schneider, formerly R. & N. M. Auditor is in Trouble.

The Minneapolis Times of Tuesday contains the following concerning C. W. Schneider, formerly auditor of the R. & N. M. and well known in this city.

Charles W. Schneider, auditor of the Brainerd & Northern Minnesota railroad, was brought to the central police station last evening, and remained in the captain's office over night.

Schneider was taken in charge by Inspector Howard late in the afternoon, and early in the evening several conferences were held at police headquarters, which were attended by some of the officers of the force.

It is further said by the police officers that Schneider was arrested on a warrant charging him with embezzlement, but when he was left at the police station no charge was made against him, his name not even being placed on the "tab," and furthermore the warrant, if there was any, was not turned over to the judge.

When Schneider was seen late last night, he said that his detention was merely due to a misunderstanding.

He endeavored, by telephone, to reach certain friends, but was unsuccessful.

From one of the officials of the road it is learned there was a belief that Schneider's books were in a condition to warrant his being held for further developments. This official said the matter was of long standing, and had occurred prior to the present management, which assumed control last December.

It is understood that the amount of Mr. Schneider's embezzlement as charged is $62,728. He was arraigned and plead not guilty and was released on bail. The case will be heard next Tuesday.

Favereau, made the following statement with reference to the intentions of Belgium in China: 'The government does not entertain military operations in China for the formation of a protectorate. RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Postmaster General Henry Smith has framed his estimate to be submitted to congress, and will ask an appropriation of $11,000,000 as the appropriation for the entire year for the year ending June 30, 1902. This includes an estimate of $2,000,000 for the rural free delivery service. By the close of this fiscal year 4,000 rural free delivery routes throughout the United States will have been established, and the general extension contemplated for next year will involve about 4,000 additional routes. The success of the service so far instituted has resulted in plans for a very general extension next year. The postmaster general, together with other officials, is investigating the feasibility of putting the service in operation at every point throughout the country not reached by the regular free delivery sections in operation in the cities.

LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL. Minnesota Inhabitants Cannot Be Treated as Felonies. ST. PAUL, Nov. 16.—The state supreme court has decided that the Minnesota 'tag law' is unconstitutional. The law provides that in counties of less than 50,000 population, and is limited to a license to obtain a license in each county, one per year to each 50,000 of population, to be exact. The action upon which the decision was rendered came up from Ramsey county, where Edwin Murray, the father of the Murray institute for the care of insane, and the county commissioners for fees.

No timber sale ever held by the state brought in so much money. The proceeds were phenomenal, averaging about $100,000 per acre, which is more than twice as much as the average price received at the last stumpage sale, two years ago.

EUROPE ANXIOUS

News of the Illness of the Czar Is Received With Serious Apprehension. Situation Too Critical to Lose So Favorable a Factor in the World's Peace. London Press Comments on Emperor's Illness With Peculiar Sympathy.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The serious apprehension with which the announcement of the fact that the czar was suffering from typhoid fever filled Europe emphasizes how much the peace of the world is believed to be dependent upon him. But for the statement contained in an official bulletin of the czar's malady is taking a thoroughly favorable course the news of his illness would have created nothing less than consternation. It is generally felt at the present critical state of international affairs that even a temporary weakening of the influence so favorable a factor in the maintenance of the world's peace justifies grave anxiety, especially as the czar is regarded in Europe as a kind of counter pole to Emperor William. The London newspapers comment on the czar's illness with peculiar sympathy. The Times remarks that it is hardly necessary to say that the czar's case 'reprecipitated the national sentiment toward him and cherished real regard and reverence for our beloved czar.' The Times also says: 'The case has been a source of attachment to the cause of peace. It is hardly necessary to say that the czar's case will lead to a change in the occupation of the czar's throne at the East. The czar's illness would be a serious blow to the situation.'

OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED. Czar Is Suffering From an Attack of Typhoid Fever. ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—The Official Messenger, published by the imperial court, announces that the czar is suffering from a dangerous attack of typhoid fever.

Van Sant's majority is small, but it is just as effective as more.

Van Sant will probably be kept busy from now on until Jan. 1st in dodging the office seeker.

Here the legislative and congressional districts will be reapportioned during the coming sessions of the legislature and congress.

John Lash's strength lies in the national policy of his fellow countrymen in this state, and certainly not in his record as governor, which is not creditable.

It is to be hoped the present illness of Senator Davis will not result in his death, as he is a most capable and faithful public servant, and the nation can ill afford to lose his services.

It is hoped that Bryan will remain a presidential probability for another four years, when Teddy as the republican presidential candidate, will beat him as easily as McKinley did in 1900.

The Minnesota jag cure law has been pronounced unconstitutional by the state supreme court, in that it is not general and only applied to counties having a population of 50,000 or over.

Marcus Daly and Henry Villard, two of the financial giants of the country, died on Monday. Daly was also a politician, fighting with Boodler Clark for democratic supremacy in Montana.

McKinley's success on Tuesday released millions of dollars worth of orders condition on his election, and business has been booming since. Republican success always means commercial prosperity.

Bryan has already expressed a desire to try a third time for the presidency. Republicans should encourage his candidacy, as he stands for reputation and national dishonor and can never be successful.

My, how bad Charley Torne feels! He smuts a wall that is heart-reading. Charley can get no satisfaction for the country unless he is galled on to save it as much as possible, but the people generally don't agree with Charley. How sad!

This democracy now from the level of the reorganization and regeneration of their party, and the matter being discussed. The people generally have long recognized this need, and it is encouraging that the democrats are seeing the error of their ways.

A BRAM of reform has seized the mayor of West Superior, and the ordinance concerning the closing of saloons and gambling will be strictly enforced. It is proposed to stop street-car traffic unless the city attorney decides it is worth a loss of $5,000.

The Duluth Herald now says that the statements made by it concerning imperialism was only a trick to catch votes. That neither the Herald nor any intelligent person would attempt to change the republic into an empire, and yet in the face of this admission that it deliberately and willfully lied for partisan advantage, it will have the nerve to ask the public to believe its statements in the future. Only a sheet thoroughly impregnated with Bryan delirium would have the effrontery to make such an admission.

INUNCTION GRANTED.

Receiver of the Strong Estate Must Not Sell Certain Securities.

New York, Nov. 16.—Judge Leacock of the United States district court, on the application of Elias T. Griswold of Philadelphia, has granted a temporary injunction against Mary U. Strong, P. H. Strong and Albert H. Strong, individually and as executors and trustees of the will of the late William L. Strong, which restrains certain mortgages, bonds, stocks and other securities claimed by the complainant.

The bill of complaint states that prior to Nov. 2, 1900, the complainant entrusted to the late William L. Strong certain money, approximately amounting to $192,000, for the sole purpose of loaning the same for his benefit and account; that Mr. Strong advised her from time to time that such investments were made in good and sufficient mortgages, bonds and stocks and other securities.

The papers also assert that on the death of Mr. Strong the defendant took possession of his estate, including which on the 14th of November they refused to deliver to the petitioner; and she therefore asks that the three defendants and their agents be restrained from selling, delivering or parting with the property mentioned.

The connection of Mr. Strong with the Griswolds extended over a long period. He was one of the most intimate friends of the elder Griswold, now deceased, and was at the time of the Griswold's death, a partner in the business.

Major Patman B. Strong said that his mother owns the house, 12 West Fifty-seventh street, which was worth $175,000, and that she also has a small income from property left her by her grandfather, Israel Shelton, a Southern planter.

Mrs. McKinley's Nephew. Assistant Paymaster J. A. Barber Dies at Hong Kong.

Washington, Nov. 16.—News has been received here of the death from typhoid fever of Mrs. McKinley's nephew, Assistant Paymaster J. A. Barber, at Hong Kong. The news came in the form of a dispatch to the navy department from the commandant of the Monterey, to which young Barber was attached.

News of the death was conveyed to the White House personally by Captain Crowder, acting chief of the navigating bureau, and caused great grief to Mrs. McKinley and the president.

Mr. Barber entered the Ohio volunteer army at the outbreak of the Spanish war as a private, with his brother, James McKinley, and was commended for gallant conduct. He was promoted to the rank of sergeant at the end of the war and was honored with the cross and bars for service to which he was exposed, he was given commission in the navy as an assistant paymaster.

TWO BARKEN LOST. Believed They Have Foundered and Are on Board Bermuda.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—F. W. Munn of this city has received a dispatch from Captain Hiley of the tug Tanager at Providence, R. I., to the effect that the coal barge Hudson and Robert Lyle Carter had been lost. The barge, in tow of the Tanager, left a week ago for Providence. According to the dispatch, the barge became separated from the tug off Montauk point Tuesday night during the height of the gale. It is believed they have foundered and on board last on board the Hudson were Captain Leonard Webb of Wakefield, Mass., his brother John and an assistant, Captain L. P. Bartlett and three assistants under the command of the latter who became lost.

WENT THROUGH THE ICE. Prominent Young South Dakotan Is Drowned Near Redfield, S. D.

Redfield, S. D., Nov. 16.—Walter H. Wheeler, aged 20 years, lost his life in Twin lakes, about seven miles southwest of Redfield. The deceased attempted to cross the lake on the ice and when within twenty rods of the opposite shore he broke through. Before he could be rescued he sank from exhaustion and was drowned.

The deceased leaves a wife and a young child. He had been a candidate for county judge on the fusion ticket in the recent election.

FIRE IN THE MORTUARY. Flames Fortunately Checked Before Reaching the Stages.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 16.—Mail advice from the Orient says that fire broke out in the United States steamship Mortuary Oct. 21. The flames came from the electric light room, and it was feared that they would spread to the magazine. Volunteer firemen, however, soon brought their force into play, and in a short time the danger was passed. Five of the crew who had been below narrowly escaped extinction. The damage was small.

Continued at Northeast Minnesota. Minnesota, Nov. 16.—An engine on the Northern Pacific switched into the Northern Pacific engine in Northeast Minnesota. The passengers on the train were badly shaken up, the pilot of the engine smashed and three lives were demolished. There were great possibilities for a disaster, but this was escaped by the fact that the passenger train was moving very slowly at the time.

THE COLLEGE STUDENT

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,
Author of "The Sign," "Marmion," "The Crucifixion of Philip," "St. Robert's Seven Days."

Copyright, 1910, by C. M. Sheldon. Published by the Author.

"I wish to say frankly that I am not in favor of those long trips of the foot ball team away from the college. I have heard it said that it is a good advertisement for the college to have the team go out. But I am sure those advertisements could well afford to miss the college, especially that part of it which turns night into day and disturbs the slumbers of innocent citizens on college hill, many of whom, I think, frankly tell you, are inquisitive with respect to that thing called football. I ask the football team how much good advertising the college receives, and how many of its best friends at home are growing loath to see any more of its advertising the college to strangers?"

Here there was a slight attempt at a pun on the part of a few students who enjoyed the way in which the football team was "advertising it into" the college. He instantly and with some sarcasm checked it and continued:

"Henceforth I wish it to be distinctly understood that the college shall be held as strictly to account for its grades in all class and laboratory work as any other student. I ask you if it be understood that the college is to be held as strictly to account for its grades in all class and laboratory work as any other student? It is not the nature of a threat, but it is simply a statement which I am authorized by the trustees and faculty to make." At our next meeting the matter was almost unanimously agreed that there had been in the past too much prominence given to athletics and not enough to other forms of development.

"I said personally I am not opposed to football if it is rightly played. But I feel very strongly my responsibility as the head of this college to make its purpose as a Christian institution clearly felt. If anything, whether it be athletic or something else, assumes more than its rightful share of a student's time and strength, to the danger of his intellectual and moral life, I will not always speak frankly to the college for its own good."

The president stepped rather suddenly, as his habit was when he thought he had said enough, pulled to the rear for a moment and did not return. But that was only the beginning of his efforts to revolutionize the attitude of those college. It met with a determined resistance from the more thoughtful element in the college, and Edward Blake was not the only student that year and next to feel the effect of the president's action. The air cleared up considerably for many of the students, however, and a better condition of things began to exist in the department of physical culture. The college had discovered that the president, after all, did have some rights in the matter and did not intend to have them ignored.

So the fall passed on, and Edward was fairly into his year's work, every day of a new field with some new experience. His literary work on the part of this time began to assume more of the best of his time. If he was ever unpopular with one class of men in college, he was especially popular with an opposite group and was beginning to find encouragement in the society of students who had so far been strangers to him. He began at this time to take a special pleasure in debating on current questions in the debating society. He soon came to be recognized as a good thinker and a careful speaker, not brilliant, but safe and exact.

It was not surprising, therefore, that by the end of November he was elected by his society to lead the debate with the rival society on the question of the war in the Philippines. The question was, "Resolved, That the United States is justified in carrying on the present war in the Philippines." Edward was assigned the negative of the question. He had been laid at work on it for several weeks. During the time he had, between the date of the debate and his assignment to the place as the society's debater a movement had been begun in the college by the Christian association, heartily seconded by the president, to increase the Christian life of the college. A prominent college evangelist had been called to conduct meetings for two weeks. These meetings were now in progress, Edward had not been influenced by them. It was not until the first of December that he had heard of the meetings now being held in the college and the probable contents of Willis' letter. His mind split for the first time, and as he did so he was conscious of a curious excitement as he opened the letter and read it.

one of them to begin his evening's study, and he found the stress over Edward since he had been in college but each time it had been to see him, about matters connected with his studies. Professor Clark lived outside the row of college professors' houses on the campus front, and Edward had no far not met him at all except in the classroom where at the beginning of the sophomore year he had gone into a division of the class in political economy. In this division he was just beginning to hear the lecture that had provoked the anger of Mr. Hankins. So far as he knew Clark he respected him, as the other students did. But he seemed to be a person that reserved man and lacking in sociability.

This fact made his present appearance all the more astonishing to Edward. He rose hastily and stammered out an invitation to his visitor to take a seat.

"I came in to ask you to go over to the meeting tonight," said the professor as he took a seat offered him.

"The meeting?" "The meeting?" Edward asked in the invitation.

"Mr. Willis," said the professor, "is doing a good work in the college. He is a very sensible, straightforward, Christian man, and the students ought to hear him as much as possible. I am talking about the meeting to you, and you are at Edward's house, and they said you had been out to the meetings only once or twice. So I thought I would call and ask you to go with me."

If Edward could have come into the room and proposed to Edward that he go down and see for the chapel building, it is doubtful if Edward could have been more overawed with an invitation. He had never before of a professor taking any such interest in a student's religious welfare. That was not what the professors in college were for. A vague but growing idea began to dawn in Edward's mind that possibly the president had been doing some missionary work about the faculty, and that there were earnest thinkers and frankness about Professor Clark's interest in him that were not altogether dictated by the desire of any one else.

"I was just beginning my evening study," said Edward slowly, but he spoke by rote and reached after his book.

"I'm sure this matter is fully as important as the studies," replied the professor quietly. And that was all that was said for the moment as they went out and stepped over to the chapel room in the college building. Edward was naturally silent, and the professor seemed to be a little embarrassed by the unusual situation. His action had been due to any more on the part of the student, and he was not at all attempt on Clark's part to attempt more with Edward than seemed possible to do with him. Somehow he knew that Edward would not be moved to make a Christian declaration by any means or by any talking. If he ever decided, it would have to be because he was clear for himself that the only thing for an educated man to do was to be a Christian.

When they went to the meeting hall, and the audience was already gathered, Edward noticed the president and secretary of the church.

"If the professor had not seen me," he said, "I should have been in the meeting hall."

"I will not be in the meeting hall," he said. "I will not be in the meeting hall."

"When they went to the meeting hall, and the audience was already gathered, Edward noticed the president and secretary of the church.

"If the professor had not seen me," he said, "I should have been in the meeting hall."

"I will not be in the meeting hall," he said. "I will not be in the meeting hall."

Edward stood still holding the letter and thinking of the contents for a long time. It was the second letter Willis had written him. In the first one he had described the life in barracks near Manila and some incidents in the city. There was one thing that Willis did not mention, but that Mrs. Preston had written to Edward that the news had reached her that Willis was drinking again. The old habit was strong on him. And apparently the privations of the French, coffee, fern and cannies were so many that when he was allowed to go into the city to leave he had fallen in disintegration that was gradually getting his mark on him and changing his life.

By the time he had finished writing this letter it was nearly 8 o'clock. According to his regular studies habits he pulled his books down and opened the frequency with which his studies failed to make a retraction compared with his seat for religion. "I am not," cried Edward, with a feeling of annoyance at the interruption, "but the astonishment which should come in but Professor Clark."

Two of the professors had called on Edward since he had been in college but each time it had been to see him, about matters connected with his studies. Professor Clark lived outside the row of college professors' houses on the campus front, and Edward had no far not met him at all except in the classroom where at the beginning of the sophomore year he had gone into a division of the class in political economy. In this division he was just beginning to hear the lecture that had provoked the anger of Mr. Hankins. So far as he knew Clark he respected him, as the other students did. But he seemed to be a person that reserved man and lacking in sociability.

This fact made his present appearance all the more astonishing to Edward. He rose hastily and stammered out an invitation to his visitor to take a seat.

"I came in to ask you to go over to the meeting tonight," said the professor as he took a seat offered him.

"The meeting?" "The meeting?" Edward asked in the invitation.

"Mr. Willis," said the professor, "is doing a good work in the college. He is a very sensible, straightforward, Christian man, and the students ought to hear him as much as possible. I am talking about the meeting to you, and you are at Edward's house, and they said you had been out to the meetings only once or twice. So I thought I would call and ask you to go with me."

If Edward could have come into the room and proposed to Edward that he go down and see for the chapel building, it is doubtful if Edward could have been more overawed with an invitation. He had never before of a professor taking any such interest in a student's religious welfare. That was not what the professors in college were for. A vague but growing idea began to dawn in Edward's mind that possibly the president had been doing some missionary work about the faculty, and that there were earnest thinkers and frankness about Professor Clark's interest in him that were not altogether dictated by the desire of any one else.

"I was just beginning my evening study," said Edward slowly, but he spoke by rote and reached after his book.

"I'm sure this matter is fully as important as the studies," replied the professor quietly. And that was all that was said for the moment as they went out and stepped over to the chapel room in the college building. Edward was naturally silent, and the professor seemed to be a little embarrassed by the unusual situation. His action had been due to any more on the part of the student, and he was not at all attempt on Clark's part to attempt more with Edward than seemed possible to do with him. Somehow he knew that Edward would not be moved to make a Christian declaration by any means or by any talking. If he ever decided, it would have to be because he was clear for himself that the only thing for an educated man to do was to be a Christian.

When they went to the meeting hall, and the audience was already gathered, Edward noticed the president and secretary of the church.

"If the professor had not seen me," he said, "I should have been in the meeting hall."

max to the argument. For a piece of work done by a young college man it was really good. His training on the paper proved of great value to him, and he was waiting by to do creditable work as a writer.

He had a feeling of exultation as he walked back and forth, as his custom was, to work off the mental excitement before he went to bed. He felt more and more confident that he could beat Willis, even if Willis did have the popular side of the question.

"If the judges are not prejudiced by their partisan feelings, I think I shall win," he said several times as he continued his short pacing of the room. His mind was full of the subject matter of the debate, and he was very wide awake.

And still as he continued his walk other subjects obtruded on his thoughts.

His mind began to call up again Professor Clark's unexpected call and the probable motives that led to it. Then he went over again the incidents of the meeting. He could not see the evangelist, with his stern, earnest, sensible face, plodding with the students for a reasonable acceptance of Christian life on its own merits regardless of other people's opinions, and then on the other side, the evangelist, and then Edward Blake, and the students ought to hear him as much as possible. I am talking about the meeting to you, and you are at Edward's house, and they said you had been out to the meetings only once or twice. So I thought I would call and ask you to go with me."

A Jockey's Sensation When Riding.

"If you ride with your head down—that is to say, bent slightly, so that the wind does not beat right on to your face—you can breathe easily, but if you hold your mouth wide open and let the air beat right in your face then you will have great difficulty in breathing."

"A mile race on a good horse is run in about 1 minute and 40 seconds. A mile is 1.6 miles and 40 seconds is at the rate of 20 miles an hour, so, you see, a race horse travels at train speed."

"If you want to know how it feels to go through the air at race horse speed, just hang your head out of a railway carriage window, turning your face toward the way the train is traveling. At the same time imagine that you are sitting in a saddle and have to hold on to your horse and guide him on to victory if possible, keeping him from being run down or interfered with."

"It is no easy task to ride a horse in a race. The jockey must have all the wits about him. He does not have much time to think how he feels. When riding in a deck and neck race down the home stretch, I forget everything but the fact that I must make every nerve to pass the other horses. No thought is then given to the plants on the grand stand."

The Gracie Reader.
What has become of the gentle reader? asks Samuel M. Crothers in 'The Atlantic.' Few does not like to think that he has passed away from the earth and that hereafter he will be confined only with the story given to him by the reading public. Once upon a time—that is to say, a generation or two ago—there was a high esteem for the books which were dedicated with long rambling prefaces and with episodes which were their own excuse for being. In the very middle of the story the writer would stop with a word of explanation or explanation addressed to the gentle reader or at the very least, with a nod or a wink no matter if the gentle reader be in suspense or the plot be intelligibly involved.

"Hang the plot!" says the author. "I must have a chat with the gentle reader or find out what he thinks about it." This is a mistake. One should not be so much interested in the welfare of the gentle reader as to last the author would jump up and say: "Enough of this, gentle reader, permit me it is time to go back to the story."

Miss Kingsley and the Gortals.
On the Cuban river Miss Mary Kingsley's guide once called to her to creep quietly through the bushes and then she saw a family of five gorillas—an old male, three females and a young one. The guide sneezed, which alarmed the gorillas, and they fled with a bare back. The old male swung from branch to branch like an acrobat on a trapeze.

On another day Miss Kingsley and her two guides came suddenly upon a solitary male gibbon who, as usual, had appropriated a forest glade as a seat for his private enjoyment. Furious at the intrusion, the brute, instead of fleeing, came shambling toward them, growling ferociously. "Shut him," whispered Miss Kingsley, "and I will sell you 'milk' and some coffee cake. I have only one gun. The other is out of order. If I miss, he will kill you."

The gorilla came nearer. Roaring and snarling, he bent his breast and roared, just as Dr. Challinor described long ago. Then, running forward, he stopped and roared again and again ran forward until quite close. Then the guide shot the gorilla dead.—Chambers Journal.

Interested.
Mrs. Newrick—I never can remember how many cards to leave when calling. Old gentlemen—The rules are very simple, madam. You hand one to the servant and then on departing leave as many on the plate as there are adult members of the family, adding two of your husband's cards and occasionally dropping in a few more for good measure. Do not be egregiously desultory on cards, as that suggests vulgar poverty.

"I am very much obliged. Are you a professor of etiquette?"
"No, madam. I am Mr. Bristol, the card manufacturer."—Exchange.

"This said the drug clerk, "is a most wonderful hair restorer. It's our own preparation."
"What, give me a bottle," said the bald-headed man. "But, say, come to think of it, why don't you use it? You're pretty bald yourself!"
"I can't use it, You see, I'm the 'before using' clerk." The 'after using' clerk is out at lunch. You should see him."—Philadelphia Press.

Shakespearean Authority.
"This expression of yours, Miss De Miler," said the teacher of the class in rhetoric, who had been examining her essay, "is exceedingly faulty. You say 'It made the very air sick.' How can you think of the atmosphere being 'sick'?"
"It seems to me," replied Miss De Miler, "I have read somewhere of an ill wind."—Chicago Tribune.

Ancient Coat Case.
The manufacture of coat used in India can be traced back over 2,000 years, while there are also examples of numerous wrought iron pillars which weigh tens tons and is thought to be over 1,800 years old.—Chicago Chronicle.

Shinkaliven.

The ore from which shinkaliven is obtained is a brilliant red rock known as chinkar. When of high purity, it is actually vermilion in color. Chinkar is the principal source of the pigment known commercially as vermilion. It is a compound of sulphur and quicksilver, and in order to separate the latter from the sulphur the rock is roasted. Passing off in the form of a smoke, the mercury is afterward condensed and flows out in a fine stream, like a continuous pencil of molten silver.

The discovery of the famous California mines came about in an odd sort of way by observation of the vermilion paint with which certain Indians in that part of the country frescoed their bodies. It was ascertained where they got the pigment, and thus were revealed the rich deposits which subsequently became of such commercial importance. Like gold and silver, mercury is occasionally found in a native or pure state. Sometimes the miner's pick penetrates a cavity that contains a deposit or more of the element and beautiful field.

Miners suffer much from the poisonous effect of the quicksilver fumes. Extreme cleanliness is the best safeguard for workers in this dangerous occupation. Use is also made of a sort of amalgam which is added to a certain extent as an antidote, a strong tincture of the place of lemon juice in the composition of the drink.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Lady and the Cobra.

An English woman residing in India one evening found to her horror that a huge cobra had coiled itself about her veranda rail, near which she was at the time. She was so near the creature that she was unable to play while she gradually edged away. At last she only had to keep the creature there engaged by the unwonted sight of a strange inspiration and her. She played after after a different character.

"The effect was magical," that snake beheld his first victim. He was a disciple of Paganini. Every variation in the music, whether of volume or of tone, produced instantly a corresponding change in the attitude of the cobra. If she played a trill, it occurred its body always in quick time and yet in graceful curves. Once she struck a number of false notes in rapid succession on purpose. The cobra wined and writhed in pain. As it suddenly struck with a whip.

"Thus the creature behaved like the mad musician till the lady, getting tired of the sport, gradually worked herself farther and farther until she made a sudden lunge into her room and banged the door, leaving the cobra to wander disconsolate to its lair in the jungle."

What's in a Name?
Although the present fashion of christening children with family surnames is much to be commended for many reasons, it carries with it some awful possibilities unknown in the days of Mary Queen of Scots. Let us take a glance at the following list, each name of which is genuine, will illustrate sufficiently well the possibilities of nomenclature resting with parents in their choice of names for the men and women of tomorrow:

Edna Hooker Mothershead, Marian Magellan Bore, Jasper Turner, Bonnie act, Will W. Upp, Nedon Pary Daily, Benton Kilns Savage, Owen Taylor Money, Mrs. Little Lamb, Roger Hiss, Borden Hart, H. U. The Temple of Zen.
All the temples of the great temple of Zen, which was 700 years in building, is to be found about 150 yards from the foot of the Acropolis at Athens. The ruins consist of six columns of the Corinthian order, five feet in diameter and 60 feet high. It was the second largest temple erected by the Greeks, one superior to it in size being the temple of Diana at Ephesus. According to legend, the foundation was laid by Duhalion, the Greek Noah, who from the point witnessed the waters of the flood subside. An opening in the ground is said to be the orifice through which the flood disappeared.

Baptist Hymns.
Here is a story from the Baptist conference at Leicester. It is about a minister. He found himself at chapel one morning without his sermon. "My dear brethren," he exclaimed, "I can only give you now what God will send me, but tonight I will come back better prepared."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Not a Rose Bird.
"He said he was swallows, I believe," said Miss Dawkins. "Wasn't that a bird of him?"
"Oh, I don't know," replied Miss Tupper. "It was while you were trying to sing that he made the remark."—Exchange.

Accommodating Him.
Youth—What do you think of my character. I'll make a fool of myself sure.
Madam—Well, you said you wanted an easy part.—Detroit Free Press.

Robert Burns, the poet, divided the good of good wishfully into ten parts: Good nature, 4; good sense, 2; 1; personal charm, 1. The remaining two degrees covered fortune, education, family, blood.
Magnanimousness among goldfishes, introduced by the Chinese by agitating the fertilized eggs at a certain stage of their development.

Joliet Got the Light.

At a small seaport town a star actress of the third magnitude appeared as Juliet.
"I cannot do justice to myself," said the manager. "If I do not have a limelight thrown on me when I appear at the balcony."
"We'll get no limelight, miss, but I think we could get you a ship's blue light," replied the obliging manager; and to this the lady agreed.

"The lad who went to the shop to buy the blue light brought back a signal rocket, which was given to him by mistake. The prompter took the rocket in good faith.
"Home—He jets at stars who never fold a wound."
"Gaiety appears. Prompter lights a match."
"But, sirs! What light through yonder window breaks?"
"That was the match lighting the fuse."
"The sun—or rather the rocket—did rise with a terrific hiss. Juliet was struck off the balcony, the 47 holders were set on fire, and the theater was filled with a sulphurous steam. When the audience, which was fortunately a small one, made a stampede to the door."
"And, fair sun!"

Since then "Romeo and Juliet" has always been looked upon two acts as a dramatic work that could not be witnessed without personal danger.—New York Post.

Royal is the most economical of all the leavening agents.
 Greater in leavening strength, a spoonful raises more dough, or goes further.
 Working uniformly and perfectly, it makes the bread and cake always light and beautiful, and there is never a waste of good flour, sugar, butter and eggs.
 Finer food; saving of money; saving of the health of the family; the last is the greatest economy of all.

Some baking powder makers claim their powders are cheaper. They can be cheaper only if made from cheaper materials. "Cheaper" means inferior materials always. To cheapen the cost of an article of food at the expense of its healthfulness, as is done in alum baking powders, is a crime.
