They tell a tough story about a young man named Otto, out in Kansas, who in chasing a buffalo over the plain recently, nearly wounded the animal with his pistol. The infuriated brute turned upon him and threatened to demolish the adventurous hunter. Nothing daunted, he placed the animal's back as he came up, gripped the long hair on the shoulder of the buffalo, rebounded his pistol, and put the lead in the back part of the animal's shoulder. This brought the buffalo to his knees and Mr. Otto over his head. Gathering himself up he looked around, and there at the buffalo on his knees cazing on him with no hostile look, but one more lead finished him.
