

KISS ME—GOOD-NIGHT.

Dear mother, when my prayer is said,
Before you take the light, Oh! lean your head so closely down,
And always kiss "good-night!"

One kiss, dear mother, for the love My heart keeps warm for thee;
And one for all the tender years,
That I shall be a child.

A DISCARDED EMPRESS.
The lady who claims to be the legal wife of Kaiser Wilhelm.

An elderly lady recently arrived in this city, and took rooms at a fashionable up-town hotel, where she registered as Mrs. Bramenburg, from Ger-

It now turns out she has come to New York for a very peculiar purpose, which holds good to the domestic peace of the Emperor William of Ger-

Her real name is said to be Anna Countess Dolna Brandenburg, and she claims to have been lawfully married to William as back 1825,

She first met the Prince during the great review which his father, King Frederick William the Third, held over the Silesian troops on the famous battle-field of the Kaiser in Sep-

After several days' secret conferences, they were married late one night by a young country parson, who did not know the Prince. The latter gave his name as William Count Branden-

When her third child was born she implored her husband to reveal their marriage at least to his father. He agreed to do so. Now, it happened at that time that King Frederick William the Third, in order to please the Emmitted to read any newspapers, and her attendants were allowed only to converse with her on certain subjects.

resist the temptation once more to see her faithless husband, and to that end she went to the gala performance at the opera house, which all the princes were to attend. One of the King's party must have recognized her on the occasion, and pointed her out to Fred-

She was permitted to return to Prussia, and the new King offered to compromise the matter with her. This she refused to do. She applied to the Royal Privy Council for redress, but her appeals remained unanswered. Her father's death gave her a large for-

Berlin, June 15, 1825.—Dear Wife Anna: You wronged me cruelly in your letter last night. How could I see you when there was a court reception!

June 17, 1825.—ANNA: The endless love I feel for you will carry me through all the trouble of which you talk nothing. I do not want the other night that as an honorable man,

My husband.—What I told you the other day, to inform your father of our marriage, was only calculated to save my honor. You have again and again called me your darling, your angel. I have given everything to you.

Dear, dear, dear Anna—How can you find fault with me for not seeing you, when I was not in Berlin? Do you know that my brother-in-law,

William.—When you are with me, and kiss me, I cannot find fault with you; but when you are gone, the terrible reality forces itself upon me so that I can not think of anything else. You have married me. My lit-

William.—Is your word good for nothing? The Countess Von Plessen told me yesterday that you had walked arm-in-arm with Augusta of Weimar, Anna.—Don't write any more such nonsense to me. Yes, I did escort the Princess Augusta of Saxe-Weimar, but without saying the slightest affection-

By order of His Majesty, the King: A Countess Dolna having claimed to be the wife of the Prince William, Prince of Prussia, I hereby decree that such a union, if it ever took place,

Silesia. He has now married the Prin-

THE USEFUL WOMAN.
Gail Hamilton in Harper's Weekly.

A lively and entertaining newspaper, devoted, though not exclusively, to the rights of woman, tells us how one woman found the world of life and won the victory.

There lives a widow out West, says this Friend of Woman, "who never did anything useful until her husband died and left her a half a dozen children to take care of."

There are six children, the eldest undoubtedly about nine years old, and they have all to be nursed and fed and dressed and housed; the table is to be set, the meals are to be prepared,

Dear, dear, dear Anna—How can
you, when I was not in Berlin? Do
you know that my brother-in-law,

Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.
It will give you strength and health, vitalize and purify your blood.

If a horse has a good constitution, and has once been a good horse, no matter how old or how much run down he may be, he can be greatly improved, and in many respects made as good as new, by a liberal use of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders.
