No MORE Legislature for two years.—Ex.

NOT so. Biennial Sessions do not take effect until 1880.

CROW WING county is mad because she was not "reimbursed" by the Legislature for some of her own legitimate expenses.—[Pioneer Press.

The Pioneer Press lies.

IT is about time for the Merrill-Appleton gang of jobbers and their newspaper organs to stop sniveling. After pleading poverty all winter and attempting to steal $50,000 out of the treasury they are now bragging about their wealth. It is probably owing to their putting some of this wealth where it would do the most good, that they succeeded in securing their swindle.—Globe.

Did Liberty Hall pay you to support him for Congress, or to advocate the Book Ring.—[Rush City Post.

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due.

In another column this week will be found an article from the St. Paul Dispatch also quoting the St. Cloud Times, referring to Senator W. H. Houlton. The position taken by the Times is quite similar in some respects to that of the TRIBUNE. Confident now that our estimate of Mr. Houlton last fall was not supported by the facts and that the TRIBUNE attacked him wrongfully, it gives us pleasure to lay before our readers the high encomium of the Times and Dispatch, and to add that our acquaintance with the gentleman and our observations of his official acts have been extremely gratifying to us and have entirely removed all foundation for the TRIBUNE'S former opposition to him.

THE Brainerd TRIBUNE says that if the people have not the money to buy text books under the Merrill law, they must borrow it or sell a cow and get it. Is that possible? But please inform us how they managed to raise the money to purchase text books under the old system. —[Little Falls Transcript.

If the editor of the Transcript should pitch his newspaper, type and material over the falls in order to purchase anew because he can buy cheaper now than when his present office was obtained, would his inquiry, "How did I manage to raise the money to purchase the first," avail him or prevent his neighbors ticketing him for St. Peter.

THE tax law as codified and re-enacted at the late session, is now as near perfect in all its parts as the wisdom of our legislators, aided by the lights of experience, can make it. Assessments commence May 1st. The time from then until December is occupied in assessing, transcribing, equalizing, etc. The tax is due in December, A penalty of 5 per cent. attaches to unpaid taxes on personal property, on March 1st, and of 10 per cent. on real estate taxes, June 1st. No interest is then charged until the tax sales, which begin on the third Monday in September. During the two years allowed for redemption after the sale the interest is 18 per cent. per annum.—If the property is not sold at the regular sale, nor during the two years following, it will become the absolute property of the State, but the parties holding an interest in the land may redeem it at any time, while in possession of the State, by paying the interest and expenses. After the redemption shall have expired the State may dispose of the property at public or private sale, and the purchaser shall acquire an absolute title.—[St. Paul Dispatch.

Senator W. H. Houlton.

St. Paul Dispatch.

During the last fall's campaign the Dispatch took occasion to speak some words in commendation of Wm. H. Houlton, of Elk River, Republican candidate for Senator from the Sherbirth district. We also took occasion to defend him on our own knowledge of his character and history, from some of the foul aspersions cast upon him by the malicious editor of the Elk River News, whose motives and grievances were also perfectly well known to us.

We regretted at the time, to see that some well disposed persons, who were ignorant of the facts, and of the relative worth of the parties to the bitter contest, had accepted and quoted as true the charges of the Elk River News. Among those who were thus misled was the staunch Republican editor of the Brainerd TRIBUNE, who since, if he has not seen and acknowledged the absolute falsity of the statements to which he gave credence and currency, has at least warmly complimented Senator Houlton for his zeal, intelligence and sincere devotion to the interests of his entire constituency.

And now comes the St. Cloud Times, which, although Democratic in politics has always maintained an enviable reputation for political candor and fairness. It indorses Senator McDonald, has sat with Mr. Houlton during the past session; has had abundant opportunity to know him, and in his last issue makes an honorable retraction of its former slurring and deserved tribute to his colleague as follows:

During the political campaign last fall, we copied from the Elk River News, an article which reflected very severely upon Mr. W. H. Houlton, of Elk River, at that time the republican candidate for Senator in the 30th district. We had never met Mr. H., knew nothing at all about him, and as our sympathies were naturally on the side of the Democratic competitor, we copied the article alluded to, believing that no friend would publish such a statement without some foundation for them. Mr. Houlton was elected, and, during the session of the Legislature just closed, we became intimately acquainted with him. We found him to be a pleasant, genial gentleman, and a prominent man in every sense of the word. As a Senator, he is intelligent, steadfast in his principles to the discharge of his legislative duties, and was highly esteemed and respected by his colleagues on both sides and parties. We are free to say that our acquaintance with Senator Houlton has convinced us that the article quoted from was unfounded in the assertions asserted, and we take pleasure in saying that we have spoken in the highest terms of him. We are aware that we have subjected ourself to a good deal of criticism for the course we have pursued in this matter by a Republican, but no more able or faithful servant can be selected than Senator Houlton.

JOHN F. CASH, formerly a wholesale dry goods merchant of St. Paul, owns 30,000 acres of land on the St. Paul & Pacific and Northern Pacific railroads.

POSTMASTER DAY, of St. Paul, has invented a postal card so arranged as to transmit a message on one side and return its answer on the other, and the invention is being favorably considered by Congress.

A VERY little boy had one day done wrong, and he was sent, after paternal correction, to ask in secret the forgiveness of his Heavenly Father. His offense was forgiven, and when asked what he would say, his mother followed to the door of the room. In lisping accents she heard him ask to be made better; and then, with childlike simplicity, he added: "Lord, make me a temper better, too."

Skull and Cross Bones.

Rush City Post.

Two of our citizens last week received pleasant little epistles in the shape of the following:

Take notice that you are hereby ordered to leave town within thirty days or suffer death.

(Coffin here.)

The bullet is moulded.

Layer Dent received one of these entertaining notices, and William Vannetter, an honest farmer living near here, the other.

THE Minnesota agricultural and mechanical association has received assurances from the Hon. James G. Blaine that he will be in Minneapolis during the coming exposition and deliver an address to the multitude. There is probably no other public man in this country whose presence would be greeted by so many thousands of admiring men and women of Minnesota on such an occasion as Senator Blaine. With thousands of personal acquaintances in this State, and hundreds of thousands of political friends and admirers, this bold and dashing champion of his party, who was so warmly supported by Minnesota for the presidency in the last republican national convention, will receive such an ovation from the people of Minnesota as has never before been accorded to any public man.—[Pioneer Press.

Ruffee, the Heathen.

A delegation of Episcopalians, mostly from New York, arrived here the other evening, after office hours, and insisted at that late hour, to see Secretary Schurz, to protest against the appointment of that unconverted heathen, Charles A. Ruffee. It appears they have just heard of this appointment, and took the first first train to Washington to protest against it. Mr. Schurz, however, could not see them until morning, and a member of Congress, who happened to be present, waiting to see the secretary on other business, reported that they got very little comfort from the secretary. I don't know it to be a fact, but I have heard that they confidently informed the secretary that when Mr. Ruffee was last in Washington with a prospect of getting this appointment, he was in frequent consultation with Tiwana Bean, with a view of obtaining from that celebrated sculptress models of the most approved idols for Indian worship. The secretary gave respectful attention to the delegation, and, after it was through, ordered Mr. Ruffee's commission to be sent to him.—[Washington Cor. Pioneer Press.

The Narrow Guage Road to the Hills.

A company has just been organized for pushing to completion a projected narrow-guage railroad from Bismarck and Fort Lincoln to Deadwood. The formal title of the corporation is the Bismarck, Fort Lincoln and Black Hills railroad. The incorporators are the officers and directors, and they reside at Bismarck. J. W. Raymond is president; W. T. Mitchell, vice-president; Geo. W. Sweet, secretary, and John McLean, treasurer. The board of directors is composed of the above named officers and Dr. Porter, Col. Lounsberry, Edmund Hackett, Wm. Donahue and Charles Cushman. The capital stock is $1,800,000, and $250,000 has already been pledged. The officers think they see their way clear to raise the whole amount necessary to build and equip the road. Mr. Raymond, the president of the company, is now in the city, and the information regarding the project was extracted from him by a Times reporter. He says the length of the line by the shortest survey, from Bismarck to Deadwood will be two hundred and twenty-five miles. The route proposed traverses a region of country only slightly undulating, and prescribing no engineering difficulties to speak of. A party is now engaged in running surveys of the line, and contracts for grading will probably be let early in the spring. The Northern Pacific is extending substantial aid to the enterprise, the company having agreed to transport all materials used in its construction at mere nominal freight charges. The new road, when completed to the Hills, will be an important feeder to the N. P.—[Chicago Times.

ENJOY LIFE!
What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us a grandeur of mountains, glens and ocean, and thousands of means for enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worried out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia or Liver Complaint is the direct cause of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

HELP IN ACQUIRING KNOWLEDGE.—In acquiring a knowledge of the English Language, and especially in learning the meaning of words, probably no other work, nor many other books together, can afford so much aid as Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, with its 3000 Pictorial Illustrations, its precise and full definitions, its careful discriminations of synonymous words, and its many valuable tables. It is, in itself, a whole library of the language. Let one family have a copy of this work, and use it faithfully, and another be without it,—the difference in the progress of the two families in getting knowledge will be very great.

COUGH, Hoarseness, Asthma, or any Irritation of the Throat or Bronchial Tubes, will be relieved by taking Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It has cured thousands. Recommend it to your friend and neighbor. Your druggist keeps it. Price 25 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

English Grain Trade.

The Mark Lane Express review of the British corn trade for the week, says: English wheat has been marketed in small quantities and in an unsatisfactory condition. Both in Mark Lane and in the provinces business was restricted, as growers are not able to make up their minds to accept the lower rate, at which buyers expected to purchase. Sales, however, have only been practicable at decline of a shilling per quarter, although the reduction principally affected badly conditioned parcels. Imports of foreign wheat into London and Liverpool have been large, and buyers were enabled to satisfy their wants on rather easier terms. Trade has been somewhat less repressed than of late, but the demand nevertheless has been mainly retail. considerable interest is centered for the moment upon the black Sea ports and the large shipments of grain taking place in Odessa, but in what condition these supplies will reach us after having been stored in the up country districts of southern Russia for many months, is a matter of conjecture. There will be some delay in shipping wheat from this source, the transport service being very inefficient. New American maize has come to hand freely in good condition. Feeding stuffs ruled slow. New maize and barley has been a turn lower to sell, but oats, of which arrivals from abroad have been light, fully maintained rates. Arrivals of wheat cargoes at ports of call have been moderate, but trade ruled exceeding dull, and prices declined two shillings per quarter. Maize and barley were also neglected, and values gave way six pence to a shilling per quarter, with a firmer feeling at the close.

The Sacramento Flood.

A correspondent of the California associated press, who has ascended the Sacramento river to Monroeville, 190 miles above Sacramento, telegraphs that for the entire distance, the country presents the appearance of a continuous sea. On both sides of the river, not five thousand acres of land along the river for the whole distance have escaped the flood. The river is now falling rapidly, and vast tracts of wheat land are making their appearance, much of which may be saved if drying north winds follow the recent continued storms. Between Sacramento and Monroeville there are about 250 breaks in the levees. Dr. Gleen, a large farmer in Colusa county, lost 20,000 sheep and six thousand acres of wheat by the flood. The main wheat lands of Colusa county are five miles from the river and are safe. About 10 per cent. of the wheat crop of that county is ruined, and about the same amount damaged. The loss between Sacramento and Monroeville in levees, buildings, stock and crops, will reach $800,000, besides a decrease in the value of property in some localities. There is however, a prospect of an enormous harvest, and much sediment has been deposited, which will renew the land where worn out by continuous cropping. The flood has caused comparatively few cases of personal suffering and want.

Fiendish and Diabolical Murder.

One of the most fiendish and diabolical murders ever committed, recently occurred near Hoge Stantion, Kansas, a man named Andrew Butts being the victim. He was traveling with a companion named George Stuttman, both being from Mount Carmel, Northumberland county, Pa. While he and his companion were sleeping by a camp fire, three tramps whose names are unknown, came up and asked permission to sleep by the fire. This being refused, the tramps went away and the two young men went to sleep. About midnight Butts was awakened to find his clothing in flames and a burning railroad tie laid across his body. He tore the burning rags from his body, but he was so badly burned before he could do so that the flesh dropped from his body in various places. He crawled to a farm house near by and had his wounds tied up, and was then taken to the poor house at Leavenworth, where he died the next day. His companion has not been seen since that night, and the general supposition is that the tramps made way with him.

Mails Burned East of Chicago.

A baggage car from New York was burned on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road on the 11th inst., while approaching Edgerton, about 170 miles East of Chicago. All the contents were destroyed, including a considerable amount of mail matter which was in one section of the car. The fire was discovered shortly before arriving at Edgerton, and when the train stopped at that place the flames had rendered the use of water of no avail. No estimate of damage can be made although reports of heavy losses by passengers are current. The fire caught from a candle which was carelessly left burning in the vicinity of a large pile of papers. Some 8,000 pounds of mail was burned, but there were no letters, and the mail was chiefly for Iowa and Nebraska. Among the principal losers by the destruction of baggage were M L. Scott and daughter of Erie, $3,000 worth of diamonds; Daniel Dows, New York, valuable papers and baggage, and many others for less amounts. The car was formerly in the fast mail service, and was valued at $3,000.

Changes in the Tariff Bill.

The committee on ways and means have considered the tax on sundries. Brimstone, crude, was made free. Britania ware was increased from 20 to 25 per cent. ad valorem. Card cases, pocket books, souvenirs and all similar articles of whatever material composed, are increased form 20 to 30 per cent. ad valorem. Chicory and the root, ground or unground, burnt or prepared, is reduced from 3 to 4 cents per pound. The rate on castor beans or seeds was fixed at 60 cents per bushel of 50 pounds. Crude cocoa and cork bark were made free; cork bark manufactured 30 per centum ad valorem. Chloroform 50 cents per pound. Cream tartar was reduced from 9 to 6 cents per pound. Zante or other currants were reduced form 2 to 1 cent per pound. Raisins were fixed at 2½ cents per pound. Corsets, manufactured of cotton, were reduced from $3 to $2 per dozen. The tax on unwrought clay, pipe clay and fire clay was fixed at $4 per ton; kaoline $4 per ton and fullers earth $3 per ton.

Honest Money League.

The executive committee of the "honest money league" has issued a call for a meeting of persons friendly to the object of the league, to take place at the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, March 15th. The call states that the object of the meeting is to effect a permanent organization for the Northwest, to thereby disseminate sound views of finance and to counteract the influence of organized agitators who would lead the nation to the adoption of irredeemable paper money. The leaders of the movement report that it is rapidly gaining strength and that letters are received daily expressing warm sympathy and a desire to co-operate.

Discouraging Prospects for Lake Navigation.

The vessel men at Milwaukee anticipate little or no business during the early spring. There is absolutely no demand for charters, and no likelihood of there being any before May at the earliest. The amount of wheat there is only six hundred thousand bushels, not more than a quarter the amount usually in store at this season of the year. There will be nothing for vessels to do before the middle of May, and even then freight rates will be ruinously low. There are so many vessels, and so little grain, that vessel men expect to see rates lower than ever before.

Attempted Fraud.

Captain George Williams, of the British brigantine Allice, bound from Porto Cabello for Hamburg, conspired with a passenger named J. F. Kinner, and his crew, to realize upon a cargo of coffee and hides valued at $92,000 gold. He ran the vessel into Baltimore, where Kinner attempted to dispose of the cargo asking $60,000 advance upon the sale. Suspicion being aroused by some irregularities in the papers of the vessel, inquiry disclosed the conspiracy, but before criminal proceedings could be taken, all concerned, except a colored body servant of Kinner, had left the city. Kinner is said to have been advanced $1,000 upon the cargo by Eugene Severing & Co.

Steamboat Sunk.

The steamboat Shannon, from Quachita river, with 900 bales of cotton, collided with the monitor Canonicus, near New Orleans, La., and sank in a few minutes. Captain Bepart thinks no lives are lost. The Canonicus is at anchor in the river, at the foot of Canal street. This is the second steamboat sunk by collision with her. Steamboat men claim the light displayed by the monitor was insufficient. The boat is a total loss. A portion of the cargo may be saved, badly damaged. Boat and cargo valued at $60,000.

Suicide of a Fifteen Year Old Girl.

About seven weeks since Miss Ella Schultze, aged 15 years, suddenly disappeared from her adopted home with Henry C. Buell, a wealthy farmer living near Geneva Lake, Wis. Deligent search was made, but no trace of her whereabouts were discovered until on the 6th inst., her lifeless body was found in a water hole near Caledonia station, Boone county, Ill., twenty-five miles away from home. A corner's jury pronounced it a case of suicide.

Suicide for Jealousy.

Mrs. Kaiser, wife of A. Kaizer, a prominent business man of Burlington, Iowa, committed suicide by taking morphine. The testimony at the inquest developed the fact that she had contemplated self-destruction for some time. Jealousy and imaginary wrongs on the part of her husband were the causes.

CONGRESSIONAL,

SENATE, March 7.—A bill was introduced by Senator Cockrell for the improvement of the Mississippi. The house bill for the relief of Surgeon General Hammond was discussed. The bill amending the revised statutes relating to guano islands passed. Mr. Sargent then called up his resolution relating to Chinese immigration and made a speech thereon.

HOUSE, March 7.—The political disabilities of Robert R. Chilton, of Georgia, was removed. There was a sharp discussion on the resolution to appoint experts for the investigating committees, which was finally passed. The deficiency appropriation bill was considered in committee, and after some discussion reported to the house and passed. It appropriates $55,500.

HOUSE, March 8.—A communication was received relating to the abolition of the duty on type. The senate amendments to guano islands bill were concurred in. The long bond bill was referred to the committee on ways and means. Private bills were then considered. A resolution was agreed to calling on the secretaries of war and the interior for information in relation to geographical and geological surveys ordered. The house went into committee of the whole on the bill to pay Southern mail contractors, and after a lively discussion rose without action and adjourned.

HOUSE, March 9.—Mr. Kelly made a speech in reply to Garfield, and considerable desultory discussion followed. The house, then went into committee of the whole on the consular appropriation bill. Mr. Singleton explained the bill in a speech. Mr. Hubbell spoke in favor of maintaining our foreign commerce, after which the committee rose without action

SENATE, March 11.—The West Point appropriation bill was reported with amendments, and the bill for the appointment of additional commissioners to Paris, unfavorably reported and indefinately postponed. A resolution appointing Gen. Sherman a regent of the Smithsonian institution in place of George Bancroft, resigned, was agreed to. The Pacific Railroad bill, agreed to by the railroad committee was reported. Mr. Blaine called up his resolution asking for the correspondence relating to the appointment of the third commissioner to determine the Halifax award, and made some remarks thereon. Hamlin and Dawes also spoke and the resolution was agreed to. The bill providing for a commission on the alcoholic liquor traffic was passed—29 to 19; Mr. Conkling reported a bill in aid of the Bennett polar expedition

HOUSE, March 11.—A large number of bills were introduced, among which were one by Ewing, for the issue of legal tender notes; one by Turner, declaring United States bonds subject to taxation; one by Patterson, to fix the value of timber cut on public lands; and two for the issue of silver certificates. The house then went into committee of the whole on the consular and diplomatic bill, and Mr. Hewitt made a speech. He criticised the diplomatic service, and the President's civil policy. After his speech the bill relating to the tax on spirits, and the naval appropriation bill were reported, and Cox offered a resolution favoring the recognition of Diaz as President of Mexico. An evening session was held for debate only.

SENATE, March 12.—A resolution looking to the trial of claims against the United States exceeding $1,000 in district courts was agreed to. The bill in aid of the Bennett polar expedition passed without debate. A communication from the secretary of the interior relating to the timber depredations in Montana was received and read. The bill for the relief of Surgeon General Hammond was passed—55 to 1. The bill for the payment of Ben Halliday was referred to the committee on claims. Mr. Thurman made a speech on the Pacific railroads sinking fund bill. Mr. Windom called up the West Point bill, but it went over until the 13th.

HOUSE, March 12th.—The house went into committee of the whole on the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, and was addressed by Messrs. Hale, Whitthorne, Dunnell and Cox, after which the committee rose without action, and the house adjourned.

SENATE, March 13th.—Mr. Windom reported the fortification bill. Mr. Merrimon introduced a bill to regulate the counting of the electoral votes. Mr. Kelley introduced bills to aid the New Orleans & Pacific railroad and to establish a mint at New Orleans. Mr. Matthews called up the communication of the secretary of the interior relating to timber depredations and made some rema ks. He was followed by Mr. Blaine. The senate then took up the West Point bill and the committee amendments to the house bill were agreed to.

HOUSE, March 13.—The house went into committee of the whole on the consular and diplomatic oppropriation bill, which was considered by sections. After an explanation by Regan of his assertions made a few days ago, regarding the bill to pay southern mail contractors, several motions to increase items in the bill were voted down. Amendments making it the duty of consuls to make monthly reports of exports and imports and annual reports of the rate of wages in the countries in which they were accredited were adopted and the bill passed. The bill reduces the pay of first-class ministers from $17,000 to $15,000, and makes other sweeping reductions The bill in aid of the Bennett polar expedition passed.

A young woman of Newburg, Wis., severely thrashed her father because he would not raise $500 to give her as a dowry; in order to marry a man who wanted his wife to have that sum.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Twentieth Annual Session.

SENATE, March 7.—This being the last day in which bills could be passed, everybody took the occasion to force their pet measures to a passage. The Senate was in almost continuous session until 5¼ o'clock on the morning of the 8th, at which time they adjourned for breakfast. During the session 384 bills were introduced in the Senate, some of which failed in the last hours owing to the immense accumulation of business

HOUSE, March 7.—This was a stormy day in the House. An immense amount of business was transacted. Bills were rushed through when many of the members apparently did not know what measure they were voting upon. 459 bills were introduced in the House. Many failed for the lack of time The House adjourned for breakfast at 5¼ o'clock on the morning o the 8th.

Daniel McFarland, who was tried and acquitted in this city eight years ago on a charge of murdering Albert D. Richardson, is or was recently an employer in a wagon factory at South bend, Ind. He is said to be a hard drinker and of vagabondish propensities.

Minnesota News Items.

GOODHUE COUNTY.

A bank has been established at Cannon Falls.

The three flouring mills at Red Wing daily turn out 1,000 barrels of flour.

RICE COUNTY.

Rice county had 673 births to 208 deaths in the year past.

A. C. Judd, of Wells township, Rice county, shot a wild swan in Wells lake on the 7th. The bird had seven companions, all escaping.

The Polar Star Mill company, of Faribault, is turning out 200 barrels of flour daily in that city, beside manufacturing 50 barrels daily at its mill in Warsaw.

Patrick Gardiner, a troublesome character in Wells township, Rice county, stabbed James Downie, with whom he was quarreling, on the 4th. When arrested the following day he was permitted by the officer to go into another room to change his shirt, and he levanted through the window. Downie is cut to the bone in two places between the arm and elbow of one arm.

According to a letter in the Faribault Republican from S. H. Kenney, one of the fathers of the amber sugar cane culture, the lowest estimate of that crop in this State for the current year is 25,000 barrels, representing 6,000 acres under the cane. Mr. Kenney affirms that he raised the cane nine successive seasons on one piece of land, seeded it down to grass, and secured twenty-two bushels of wheat to the acre, clearly demonstrating the crop does not impoverish the land, which is still good. A barrel of the soft sugar has been forwarded to St. Louis to be refined.

DAKOTA COUNTY

The steamer Welch has resumed its trips between Hastings and Prescott, Wis.

C. Stebbins, after being connected with the Hastings Gazette for over twenty years, retired from that journal on the 9th. His partner, Irving Todd, will continue the paper as its sole proprietor.

STEVENS COUNTY.

The vote on the incorporation of Morris, Stevens county, resulted, on the 5th, in 55 to 3 in its favor.

Four newly made brides were last week simultaneously fluttering their feathers in Morris, Stevens county.

WATONWON COUNTY.

The Madelia, Watonwan county, Times closed its seventh year on the 8th.

During the year 1877, there were born in Watonwan county 79 females and 80 males, and 32 deaths occurred.

LYON COUNTY.

C. F. Case, editor of the Marshall, Lyons county, Messenger, has been appointed postmaster of that village, in place of W. Coleman, resigned.

TODD COUNTY.

Our winter has been impeached.—Todd County Argus.

The Todd county Argus of the 6th, says fifty tons of hay have been destroyed by fire in the vicinity of Long Prairie, within the last two weeks, all in consequence of burning meadows.

WRIGHT COUNTY.

The brewery of George E. Weiss, situated at St. Michaels, Wright county, was totally destroyed by fire on the 2d, involving a loss of from $3,000 to $5,000, on which there was no insurance.

Frank A. Muckenhern, aged 18 years, while engaged on the 2d, upon his father's farm near Delano, Wright county, in grubbing and pulling out trees with a team, was instantly crushed to death.

The Wright county Eagle mourns over the fact that the turbine water wheel, placed in Walker's dam, at Delano, a year ago, has been taken out and shipped to Minneapolis, thus ending that village's hopes for water power, for the present, at least.

STEELE COUNTY.

L. C. Martin, on the 6th, retired from the Owatonna People's Press, leaving the sole management thereof in the hands of his former partner, E. L. Darby.

Prof. Baker, of Owatonna, has resigned his position as one of the examiners of the candidates for the West Point cadetship, because some of his pupils will be among the contestants.

The Owatonna triangular elopement has been explained. Cyrus Fee, the party of the male part, says he and Miss Green had determined to go to Dodge Centre to be married. He arrived there first and met Miss Johnson, who informed him she had left her home in flight from misusage by her adopting parents, and was going to friends in Wisconsin. Miss Green shortly joined them and she and Fee were married. Miss Johnson witnessing the ceremony. And here endeth the chapter.

SCOTT COUNTY.

The Lanesboro Journal of the 9th, says: "Mr. Duncan Stewart, of the Scotch settlement, ten miles south of Lanesboro, sold his farm of 320 acres, a few days ago, to Mr. T. G. Moore, of the same neighborhood, for an even $10,000."

At the Shakopee, Scott county, fair, on the 4th, work oxen sold at from $80 to $110, beef cattle at about 3½ cents per pound, and milch cows with calves at from $20 to $25. There was a large attendance, and much business was transacted.

Mrs. Sarah A. Porter, aged 51 years, and the mother of eight children, seven of whom are living, died on the 1st at Lydia, Scott county. The deceased, born in New York, settled in that shire in 1856, when there were far more Sioux Indians in that vicinity than white people,

John J. Ring was restored to the treasurership of Scott county on the 5th. In December last, when Ring filed his bond, there was a deficiency of $3,337 not paid over by him; but which he claimed there was some doubt of his owing, and he accordingly resigned, Mr. Yost being appointed in his stead. An examination of the auditor's books having established the fact that Ring did owe the money, he, on the day named, paid the amount over, and was fully reinstated.

SWIFT COUNTY.

The United States land office at Benson, Swift county, after being closed for three months on account of the death of the former register, the late Capt. J. C. Braden, was reopened for business on the 8th, with the new incumbent, Hon. D. S. Hall, on duty, who brought with him a Mr. Thayer as clerk, represented as experienced in the business in Wisconsin. Mr. J. Q. A. Braden, after faithful service in the latter capacity, retires to assume more preferred pursuits.

OTTER TAIL COUNTY.

A two-inch wooden pipe is being laid from Lake Alice into the village of Fergus Falls, Otter Tail county, a distance of about a quarter of a mile. At the latter terminus a fountain is to be erected, to which a hose can be attached in case of fire, and a considerable "head" of water will be obtained, as the fall from the lake is twenty-two feet.

DOUGLAS COUNTY.

On the 5th, two prisoners, named Langdon and Allen, confined in the Alexandria, Douglas county, jail, improvised a saw made out of a clasp knife, with which they severed a double inch plank door, and swinging back the upper portion, delivered themselves without leaving a clue to their whereabouts.

MARTIN COUNTY.

The residence of Harvey and Leonard Goldsmith, residents of Martin county, was totally destroyed by fire on the 7th with a greater portion of its contents, involving a loss of fully $500.

FILLMORE COUNTY.

As Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Elliott were driving across the railroad track at Spring Valley, Fillmore county, on the 5th, they were both accidentally thrown from the buggy, Mrs. Elliott receiving such internal injuries as may prove fatal.

Advice to Boys.

Whatever you are be brave, boys!
The liar's a coward and slave, boys;
Though clever at ruses
And sharp at excuses,
He's a sneaking and pitiful knave, boys!

Whatever you are, be frank, boys!
'Tis better than money and rank, boys;
Still cleave to the right,
Be lovers of light,
Be open, above board and frank, boys!

Whatever you are be kind, boys!
Be gentle in manners and mind, boys;
The man gentle in mien,
Words and temper, I ween,
Is the gentleman truly refined, boys!

But whatever you are be true, boys!
Be visible through and through, boys;
Leave to others the shamming,
The "greening" and "cramming;"
In fun and in earnest, be true, boys!

THE COMANCHE BRIDE.

A Tragedy of the Rocky Mountains.

Upon the eastern slope of Table Hill, one of the most lofty of the Rocky Mountain peaks, sat a white man, although he was dressed in the grab of Indian. He appeared to be entirely alone. And yet not far below him arose the smock of a hundred lodgers, and the quarters of a body of Comanche Indians were visible. The young man glanced at them, and then he gazed away down the valley of the Sweetwater as far as the eye could reach. But only mountains piled up beyond mountains, until they became blended with the gray clouds, met his gaze, save here and there a lovely valley or a sparkling stream. Long did the young man gaze in silence: and then speaking, he appeared to be uttering the thoughts rather than addressing his words to any person, although an Indian girl had approached unseen, and was now standing near him. He said:

"Oh, what would I not give to see the gay world again! But, no! here must I remain and burrow like a wolf, every thing around is hateful! I can not endure it. I will not be kept a prisoner here!"

He ceased speaking, for the young girl had advanced and thrown herself upon the ground before him. She had clasped his knees and looked up into his eyes, while her own had filled up with tears. She did not utter a sound, but there was a thousand questions in the expressio of her face. The young man observed this, and at first he appeared a little confused.

Then he recovered his self possession, and asked:

"Nemonie, did you hear my words?"

"Yes, Albert," she replied. And tears which had gathered in her eyes began to roll down her cheeks.

The feelings of the young man appeared to be touched by this exhibition, and, pointing to the rising sun, he said:

"Nemonie, you can not wonder that I am sad. Away off yonder where the sun rises, was my home. Father, mother, brothers and sisters are there, and for four years I have not seen them. For for years I have been here a prisoner, shut out from the great world; and but for your smiles I believe I should have died before this, for only when with you can I for a moment content myslef."

"Then you do love me, dear Albert?" whispered the young cearture, as she nestled closer to the side of the man she worshiped.

"Yes, Nemonie; and if I coud only forget the past—if memory could become a blank—I might be happy here. But I can not forget. I cannot cease to contemplate the fact that I am a prisoner."

"No, dear Albert, you are not restrained in your liberty. I am sure that my father, the old Chief, has been very kind to you. Has not your lodge been of the very best, and your bed of soft furs? Has he not given you his only daughter, Nemonie, for a wife? Has he not made you one of his braves, and promised to confer still further honors upon you?"

"I grant all this. But let me attempt to escape from the tribe, and what would be the result? Why, my scalp would grace the belt of the first warrior who should overtake me. I know this, and so I can not help feeling that I am still a prisoner."

"And would you leave us if you could?"

"Yes, for I——"

The young man paused, for he had caught the expression of agony which passed over the face of his wife. He drew her to his bosom, and then continued:

"I would go, Nemonie, but not without you. If you were absent from my side, I should never be happy, for I should miss your sweet, innocent face, your kind words, and your caresses. No other could ever fill your place, so here I must live and here die."

At that moment a party of some dozen Indians came up. They were headed by the Chief, Wontum, the father of Nemonie. He seated himself upon the ground, but the others remained standing. That he had something important to say, Albert well knew by his manner, although he remained silent several minutes while he puffed away at his pipe.

At length he exclaimed:

"So our son is resolved to remain content among us?"

"Yes," returned Albert, glancing at his wife.

"Good! Our cause shall be his cause!"

"Yes."

"Good! And our son would not remain inactive when there is fighting to be done?"

"No," replied the young man with enthusiasm. "Give me something to set the blood coursing through my veins. It is becoming sluggish, stagnant. Lead me into battle—I will follow, even into the thickest of the fight! Place me front to front with the accursed Sioux, and I will show them what a Comanche pale-face can do!"

"But you are not to be led—you are to lead! From this moment you become my first Chief, and I feel that you will make yourself worthy of such a trust!"

"I will—I will! Oh, now, indeed, you give me a new life, since you give me something worth living for! When do we set out to meet our foes?"

"At once. But you are somewhat in error. It is not the Sioux we fight!"

"No! Whom, then?"

"The accursed pale faces!"

"What! my own countrymen! And you would have me fight my own race!"

"Why not? Are you not one of us now!"

The young man remained silent for a short time. That there was a terrible inward struggle going on was plainly to be seen, and the chief watched him narrowly until he spoke. He said:

"Chief, you have decioved me. For a long time I have seen that you are preparing for war; but you have led me to believe it was against the Sioux you were to fight. Had such been the case, I should have willingly joined you. But I will not fight against my own brothers—my own race."

The chief leaped to his feet and his eyes flashed fire as he spoke. He said:

"If they are your brothers, then you are our enemy, and should die upon the spot."

"Then kill me!" was the firm answer. "I will not fight against my race!"

"Listen young man," continued Wontum; "four years ago we captured you. As our prisoner, we should have taken your life. We did not, but we spared you. More than this, we treated you with the greatest consideration; and, at length we gave you our only daughter for a wife. You swore to become one of us—to make our interests your own. You have lived in indolence and now, for the first time, we ask your aid. What is your reply? You will not fight?

"Not against my race."

"Such a race, indeed! What are they? What have they made us? A few years ago we lived in peace and happiness away off toward the rising sun. The rivers swarmed with fish, and the forest and prairies with game. We were, indeed, Manitou's favored children. But the pale-face dogs—your race—came among us. They robbed us of our lands, they desecrated the graves of our sires, they poisoned our warriors with fire-water, and then they drove us from our homes at the point of the bayonet. With saddened hearts we came hither.

But Manitou smiled upon us once more, to lift our heads in our original pride and manhood. We asked the Great Spirit to give us these lands, and he replied that they already belonged to his red children. We became happy for our exchange was a good one. But the pale-faces learned of our prosperity, and they envied us. Then they followed us with their poisons and their lying tongues. They profess friendship, but we know them. They shall come no further. If they are not driven back they will force us again to leave our homes, and we have nowhere to go but unto the great waters. They shall not come! No, not so long as there beats an Indian heart or there is an arm to oppose them! Join us, fight with us, and you are one of us! Refuse, and you become equally our foe with them, and you shall never live to gaze upon the setting of that sun!"

"You have spoken. Now, listen to me," replied the young man, his eyes flashing and his lips curling with scorn.

"Speak! but remember that your words will decide your fate."

"You complain that the white man has driven you from your homes. True; but why did they do so? They came among you to seek for homes which only by hard toil they could secure. The lands belonged to my Government, and they had as much right to live upon them as you. Had you not molested them, they would have not disturbed you. But you lighted the midnight torch, and burned their houses to the ground. You butchered in cold blood their helpless women and innocent children. The mountains and the valleys echoed with their dying shrieks, and the rivers were crimsoned with their blood. Is it a wonder that strong men should have risen in their might and driven you back? No! And so long as you contiune such merciless acts you will still be driven back!"

"Beware how you speak!"

"You asked me to join you. In reply, I tell you there is no drop of traitor's blood in my veins. Not to save ten thousand lives would I become an apostate!"

"You have decided?"

"I have: and nothing can change my decision."

The Chief whispered a few words to the savages around him. They apeared delighted, and began their yelling, which soon brought the entire band to the spot. These, learning, what was going on, joined in the dreadful chorus, until the mountains echoed and re-echoed with the sounds.

Albert was seized and instantly bound to a tree. Then a quantity of light brushwood was piled around him. His wife had been eagerly watching the proceedings, and approaching her husband, she asked:

"Dear Albert, will we know each other when we meet in the spirit-land?"

"Yes, I think so," was the reply.

"And can you talk to me there, and fold me to your heart and tell me that you love me ever as you have done here?"

"I am sure that I can. But why do you ask?"

"Because your spirit will scarcely have left the earth ere mine will follow it. Perhaps we shall meet on the way and enter that bright land together."

No futher words were permited, for Nemonie was dragged away and the pyre was lighted. The red flame darted upward, encircling the form of the young man. But not a groan or a murmur escaped him, and at length his head dropped upon his bosom, showing that life was extinct or nearly so.

Nemonie had stood watching the dreadful scene. She appeared unusually calm, although she was very pale. Once she had glanced behind her. Within only a few feet from the spot where she was standing there was a cliff of rocks, and below a terrible gulf hundreds of feet deep. As soon as the wife saw the head drop, and knew that life was extinct, she said:

"Albert, husband! now I come to join you!"

She darted for the precipice. Her father and others sprang foward to prevent her determined action; but they were too late. Over the cliff she sprang, and down that giddy height she whirled. Striking upon the ragged rocks below, there remained only the mangled flesh of what a few moments before had been the beautiful Comanche bride.

John Robinson as a Lion-Tamer.

Baltimore New

Did you ever hear Uncle John Robinson tell how he once played the part of Daniel and entered the lion's den? You ought to hear him relate it. His lion performer had left him, and he had sent for a young woman who was famous for her skill in subduing the mighty king of beasts. When she reached the show, however, and was introduced to the lions, he hesitated about entering the cage, Uncle John laughed at her timidity, and with his characteristic impetuosity cried: "What! afraid of a lion! Here, give me your whip, and I'll go in. Never did before, but I ain't afraid of the oldest lion that lives."

So John seized the whip on the impuls of the moment—if he had stopped to think he never would have done it—and, swinging open the door, sprang into the cage. The boss lion was lying down, with its head upon its paws, in the further corner. A couple of smaller lions were lying by his side. Slowly the lion raised his head and opened his great, sleepy eyes to glance at intruder then, with majestic deliberation, got upon his feet and began to advance toward the man who had dared to bread him in his den—the Douglas in his hall. John says he never realized until that moment how big an animal a lion was. He had no idea until then what great eyes he had got, what a great mouth he had got, and what long and sharp teeth he had. "Get back!" yelled John, in the sternest and most authoritative of tones he could command flourishing his whip in the air.

But the lion did not get back; instead of that, he raised upon his hind-feet, reaching out with his fore-paws until he seemed ot fill the entire width of the cage. John says the lion looked at that moment as though he was at least sixteen feet high, and he wonders how Daniel simply protected by greed cotton umbrella, ever held his own against a den of them. Seeing that the lion had no idea of getting back for he continued to advance, Uncle John concluded to dack out himself, which he did with such precipitation as to fall into to the arms of a couple of canvas-men who were fortunately standing by, and who closed the door in time to prevent the exit of his leonine majusty. John has had no desire to preform the part of Daniel since that exciting experience.

Choking,

Choking is by no means uncommon to the horse. It may arise from various causes, from the existence of tumors, or the result of strangles. But choking proper is caused by the impaction of food in the pharynx, or in the gullut just below it, when the "high choke" can be recognized. When choking results from stoppage in the position above named, the animal gives evidence of great suffering, a discharge flows from the nostrils, and froth appears over the mouth and lips; the eyes assume a conjested and anxious expression, the breathing becomes laborious, tetanic symtoms of the neck are associated with efforts to vomit, and give evidence that the attempts of the horse to remove the offending impaction are futile. But relief must be afforded, and that quickly, if life is to be preserved, which can be attempted by placing a balling iron in the mouth, and then by passing the hand to the pharynx, when sometimes the obstruction can be reached and brought away with the fingers; at other times it cannot.

When such is the case thick piece of wire terminating with a hook, adapted both as regards length and curvature of hook, must be carefuly worked behind the impediment, of whatever nature it maybe, and then in one mass, or bit by e bit, it must be taken away from th gullet. Sometimes the obstrucktion consists of some hard substance such as an egg, which may wholly accupy the pharyngeal opening. When such is the case it will be useless to attempt its removal with a hook; a large darning needle, or better still a fine trocar, can be driven into the substence when the contents of the egg can be evacuated the shell broken down, and symptoms of the "high chocke" will subside and olmost immediately disapear.

When an obstruction occurs at the thoracic end of the gullet—i. e., just before its entrance into the stomach—it is called the "low choke," the symtoms of which are not so violent as those occasioned when food is impacted near the pharynx. The horse the subject of it evinces signs of distress—he breathes laboriously, and arches his back; as he attempts to swallow water it is returned by the nostrils; when an attempt is made to eat an effort to vomit follows, associated with tetanic spasams of the ctrevical muscles. Immediately on the appearance of these symtoms administer to the horse a quarter of a pint of linseed oil and afterwards pass the probang down to the œsophagus, and when the offending substance has been reached maintain steady pressure until it has been driven bodily into or dispersed bit by bit into the stomach. About an hour after the probang has been withdrawn, place a bran mash before your patient. If he eats without exhibiting any inclination to vomit, you may rest assured that the horse has been successfully unchoked.

The Clothes-Line.

Danbury News.

Come, now, what infernal barbarity is this – leaving a clothes-line out after dark! A great deal of funny comment has been made upon the custom by thoughtless people, but it is a most serious matter, and it's high time the tomfoolery was abolished. We are just as ready as anybody to see the funny side of a thing, but we have ceased to observe anything amusing in being unexpectedly sawed across the neck, or rasped across the face by a clothes-line. It is time that there was a legislative enactment either to hang clothes-lines sixty feet above the earth, or make leaving them out after nightfall a State prison offense. It is a most incomprehensible fact that a clothes-line is always hung across the garden path.

If the yard was ten miles square and a path two feet wide crept along close to the fence, and the woman had but eight feet of line, she would manange to cover the path. Whether this is because she is perverse, or cannot help it, we do not know. We only know that it is so, and that it is an appalling evil. No home circle is safe where this custom prevails. It matters not how good natured a man is, it matters not how carefully he has been educated, it matters not how lofty and noble are his aspirations—the moment a clothes-line catches him under the chin, especially if he has a pan of ashes in his arms, that moment he sinks with awful velocity to the level of the brute. and proceeds to act out the conditions thereof at once. In its proper place a clothes-line is a valuable companion, but across a path after dark it is simply a brutalizing force.

An Actor's Narrow Escape.

Somebody having written a bloodthirsty drama, entitled the "Wainwright Tragedy" (founded upon a very horrible murder that took place a short while since, where a man was discovered carrying in a cap a lot of parcels containing fragments of the body of the poor woman he had wearied of, and then put out of the world), it was being acted by a traveling troupe at a country town in Liecestershire. The play had proceeded all right, the audience of course, enjoying the horrors immensely, when, in the final scene, the hero was brought up, duly pinioned, to be hanged. The rope was adjusted about his neck, and the curtain was about to fall upon the last dying agonies, when somehow the stool on which the actor's feet should really have rested got pushed aside, and the man was all but hanged in earnest. He was promptly cut down, of course, when his struggling and gasping for breath were perceived, but he was quite black in the face, poor fellow! Doubtless after the pleasing incident the play, unless suppressed by the police, will draw better than ever.—London Letter.

A mouse placed in a box with three rattlesnakes at Anna, Ill, killed one of the snakes, while the two remaining ones showed the greatest fear of the little beast, watching every move it made.

Buried Alive.

The wildest, most weird, most awe-creating scenery in the world is to be found in Norway. Its immense fiords stretching far away into the land, surrounded sometimes by precipices that rise sheer a thousand feet from the water's edge, at others bordered by a lovely, sunwith green, shelving beach, while the cliffs rising up behind, are full of mysterious excitement to all who know them, stranger or native. He who has lived among them would live there always; he who has only seen them would gladly return to them again.

On the shore of one of the loveliest of these fiords far away toward the North Cape, dwelt a hardy farmer, Herald Ericsson, with his son and daughter, sturdy Carl and fair Eline. The fiord which may be called theirs was bounded by almost wall-like cliffs at every spot, except where at the bottom of a great rift in the cliffs, lay the little plot of land that formed their farm. This was of triangular shape, its base forming the beach, the two sides being shut in by rocks no man could climb. The sheer people was this cut off from the rest of the world which they could only reach when necessary by means of a stout boat, which lay, except when in use, on the beach before their home.

Once a year this boat was fitted out with meat and salt as well as oars, and Herald Ericsson journeyed in her to the nearest town for the purpose of selling what they had to sell and purchasing their winter stores. At the same time he brought back with him a goodly stock of seas to be had, and dressed during the long, winter nights, but seldom to be delivered in a hurry.

On one occasion, however, he had scarcely stepped ashore and been greeted by Carl and Eline, when he burst out:

"What do you think, children? There are smugglers among the coast, and, be sure as I'm alive, I saw their craft in the offing before I entered the fiord."

"Smugglers?" cried Eline, in alarm—"oh, what if they should make a Carl. They won't interfere with us, for there's nobody to trade with them in our fiord."

"And nobody to be a witness to it," replied the old man. "Therefore I fear they will visit us, or, at any rate, the cave where I shall go the same sort to exchange sweaty goods."

The graywood cave," cried Carl, now really alarmed. "Why, if they make their way into that will burn every stick of our winter's fitting stored in it."

"Not they with; and what we are to do I can scarce tell."

"Oh, if there is the slightest chance of their coming, we must set to work and bring the wood here," replied Carl. "Let us get the boat unloaded, and while you and Eline are carrying the things up to the house I will get off to the cave and fetch a load of wood."

"The best plan," replied the father, as the three began hastily to unload the boat.

This was soon done; then Carl, pushing off, headed for the cave, which lay about half a mile further out at sea, but which had owing to the currents, to be approached by a course like the letter V.

In spite of Eline's fears, Carl carried this light across the fiord to a cluster of rocky islands. His next would bring him directly to the mouth of the cave.

"Father," he'll Eline, as she saw Carl disappear among the islands, "what did the old smuggler do with those he caught? they lodged in the cave?" There is no safe place for it about there."

"Oh, they use those caves, those smugglers," replied the old man. "They unshipped the bowsprit and mast, and run their schooner right into the cave if they like. You know it is like a dock there for nearly a hundred feet from the entrance."

"Yes, yes," replied Eline; "and perhaps these men you heard of may be as clever and—But look, father! look!" raising her voice almost to a scream—"there is a schooner at the mouth of the cave this very moment."

"You're right, child," replied the father, after a moment's look. "It is the smuggling schooner. And see! see! they are letting down their masts as if they were on hinges. Ah! the clever dogs—ah!"

But father, see! there comes Carl, clear of the islands, and rowing like mad. Oh, the cave. He does not seem to see them, and—oh, father, he will run right into their hands!"

"I—I fear he will, child," replied the old man, nervously. "And look—now there is nothing of Carl to be seen, till at last it is hatted on the ledge just over the cave."

Then without a moment's delay, she began a series of gestures, by which she hoped to attract Carl's attention; but he was far too busy with his boat to think of looking up where she was.

"Oh, he will not see me!—he is lost!" she cried, in despair, as she better hands fell to her side.

Even as she spoke he stooped and took from the bottom of the boat a horn that sloped like a bugle, and was about to put it to his mouth.

With it his father and he also had been used to blow a great blast when nearing the cave, so to frighten away any of the things that made it their home.

"Mercy on us! he is about to sound the horn!" she cried. "And I cannot make him hear me! All is lost!"

The voice of the horn, strong and sweet and full, answered her, and was echoed back and echoed again and again from cliff to cliff.

"Carl! Carl! for God's sake do not go near the cave!" she screamed.

Her voice was heard by him, but he fancied it the scream of some bird. Then he put the horn to his mouth and blew another sonorous blast, even stronger than at first.

"Carl! Carl!" she cried, hoarsely. "Why will you not hear me, or look at me? Oh, Carl, brother Carl, look up."

But he took no notice of her, and was about to sound a third time, when with a roaring, groaning noise, the whole ledge where she stood slipped away from under her, and slid rather than dashed down into the sea.

Falling with it, she received no hurt, but when it suddenly ceased to move she was flung as if from a catapult right out upon the surface of the fiord.

Of course she sank senseless and like a stone; but as she rose again Carl and his boat shot near, and just as she was about to sink, his hand grasped a hand of her floating hair, and drew her towards him. Next moment his strong arms had lifted her into the boat, while from his lips escaped the cry—

"Good heavens! it is Eline!"

At his words she opened her eyes and half rose up.

"Oh, is it you, Carl! Fly fly!" she cried. "The cave is full of smugglers, and they will kill you if they think you have found out their hiding-place! Fly fly!"

"Smugglers in the cave!" cried Carl. "Then may God have mercy on their souls! See, the fallen cliff has shut them in forever, and they are buried alive!"

Eline started up yet more, and looking towards the cave saw that where its mouth had been was now a round-topped hill formed of rocks and earth, and so large that no human hands might remove it for years.

"Oh, it is horrible! horrible! Can they not be saved?" she cried.

"There is no salvation for them in this world," replied Carl, solemnly, as he took the oars and began to row towards the beach, where stood their father, straining his eyes to watch their approaching boat.

When they reached the beach, and he found they were both safe, though Eline a little shaken, he wept with joy over Carl and again. Then the three went up to their home, and there knelt down and gave thanks for their escape, at the same time praying for mercy for the poor wretches who had found a living grave.

Years after, when the sea had done its work, and washed away the hill of loose stones that closed the cave, Carl and Eline ventured to visit it. The sight they saw was enough to freeze the blood.

Here and there, about the habitable part of the cave lay the bodies of the men as they had died. They were in all imaginable attitudes of agony, despair, and rage, and in some of the groups it was evident they had fought and slain each other.

Over all their bodies was a white coating, like polished marble, formed by the dripping from the roof; and a fanciful observer might imagine them to be the magnificent but horrifying products of a sculptor's chisel rather than the figures of real men buried alive.

Raising a Church Debt.

Not long ago Brother Kimball found a small church in Central Iowa that was staggering along under a comfortable debt, and it looked to him as though it would just be recreation for him to lift a little country church out of the depths, after his experience and success with the big churches in the great cities, with their overwhelming indebtedness. So he tackled the quiet little church in Scenic, and shook it out of the debt he knew of, in about ten hours, and the building was clear of incumbrance.

Then the pastor's candidateion was pronounced, the senior deacon arose and stated that there had been only one payday subscription made, and that was the accrued interest on the deferred payments now amounted to about double the principal.

Well, they raised this amount and Brother Kimball was on the point of taking his departure when the scaring and remarked that the man was around last week and said it the furnace wasn't paid for some one ought to, and next time, he would take it out before next Sunday.

Mr. Kimball laid down his hat, took off his coat, and the furnace debt was lifted.

He got one arm into his coat sleeve and talked to the pastor to dismiss the congregation, when the President of the Woman's Aid Society said she wished to say a word, and it had been unable to fulfill their pledge to pay for the pew cushions, and the upholsterer had, several months during, given notice to remove them, and she believed suit would be commenced next week.

Brother Kimball groaned, slid his arm out of the coat sleeve, headed the subscription in his usually generous manner, and soon cleared the cushions, throwing the coat over his arm and starting for the door on the run as soon as this was accomplished.

But the chorister called out that he would like their dear Brother Kimball to remain and assist them in an effort to pay for the hymn-books, and also for having the organ moved from the "dear brother" groaned, stopped and assisted.

Once more he started for the door. But Deacon Ophthalmic said he was able to they were trying to clear off the church debt, it would be well for them to remember that he had not been paid anything since 1874, and that the interest was running up on his back pay all the time. So Mr. Kimball halted once more, and struggled along until the sexton was made happy.

Then he got to the door, but some one had locked it, and while he was hunting for the key a good sister arose and stated that the baptismal robes had never been paid for, and the women of the church wanted her money. Inquiry on this subject revealed the startling fact that the robes had all been loaned to neighboring churches and lost, long ago, but they had to be paid for all the same.

The money was raised, and Mr. Kimball was trying to climb out of a window when he was pulled back and informed that there was an old debt on the lot when they bought it, that had never been cleared off.

But Kimball got this little flaw cleared up with neatness and dispatch, and was running briskly down the aisle when he was collared by a Trustee, and informed that the man who put in the gas fixtures had kalsomined the ceiling, last winter, was there and wanted his money.

Then he got to the door

ATTORNEY G. W. Holland, of Brainerd, who has been on a visit to St. Paul on legislative matters for the past week, returned home this morning. George came near carrying his Crow Wing county woodchuck, and but for a light house would have done so. As it was he came within a few votes of the requisite number.—[Globe.

THE W. H. R. B. Minstrels made their first appearance on Tuesday evening in full uniforms. Their programme was successfully carried out, and the entertainment a very pleasant one, and closed with a dance, at which those who wished "tripped the light," etc., and sang "I won't go home till morning, and then I won't go home."

HAVE you sent your renewal for 1878. If you have please accept our thanks, The rest of this note is not for you. If you have not and many hundreds have not) be good enough to send it at once. The TRIBUNE is in real need of what is due by delinquent subscribers. The expenses of publication are heavy, and can not be met unless those indebted make prompt payments. Do us the favor of sending your payments as soon as you read this.

By some mischance we failed to notice at the proper time the presentation of a beautiful gold watch chain to Thos. Bason, of our new hardware firm, Brown and Bason, by the employes of the N. P. shops, where Mr. Bason has been a valuable and agreeable workman and foreman for years until he left the employ of the company to embark in his present business venture. Mr. Bason is one to can appreciate a token of regard from his friends, and we heartily rejoice to witness this generous recognition of true merit upon the part of his former fellow workmen.

THE Board of Education held a session on Monday evening last at the TRIBUNE office, at which the present able principal of our graded schools, Mr. S. Farnsworth, was retained for the next three terms—spring, fall and winter—and a similar engagement was tendered his valuable assistant, Miss E. L. Gross, though she has not yet decided to accept the offer. The Board very properly endeavor when they have a good thing to keep it, and we congratulate the patrons of the district upon this very fortunate renewal of Mr. Farnsworth's contract, and hope Miss Gross' decision will be favorable. The schools have never been more ably conducted or given better satisfaction than under the present teachers, and we feel that great praise is due them for the happy results.

HUBBAH for a boat launch. The hull of the new steamer being built by Messrs. Alsop & Mahlum at the docks below the railroad bridge has nearly reached completion, and will be launched upon the broad Mississippi on Wednesday. The machinery and boilers are being made at the North Star Iron Works, of Minneapolis, and will be here in a few days. The engine is a 50-horse power, the hull 70 feet long, 16 feet wide, and the hold 3 feet. The work is being pushed with all possible dispatch on account of the very early and unexpected opening of the river, which is now entirely free from ice, and the steamer is expected to commence regular trips to Pokegoma by April 1st. Success to the enterprise, and may no accident befall the White Swan of the Upper Mississippi.

PASSING the store of Smith & Campbell on Monday last, we were attracted by the cries of some one apparently either in great fear or danger and entering we found Messrs. Spencer and Wickham in custody of a young half breed lady whom they had caught endeavoring to pilfer the money drawer. Several days previous he had been left alone in the dry goods department for a few moments to the detriment of the till some $7 or $8 worth, and at this time had been hanging around the store for sometime wanting nothing, when the clerks sat a trap for him and soon caught the lad endeavoring to open the drawer again. They were from their hiding places, caught him and drew him to the elevator rope, opened the trap door to the cellar and threatened to hang him. The naughty charmed the young villian used his lungs to their very fullest extent, and when liberated made double quick time for home.

Refusing Fraternity with French Masons.

LONDON, March 7.—The grand lodge of Free Masons of England, Lord Carnarvon presiding, unanimously passed a resolution refusing to recognize the Free Mason any person initiated in a lodge whose belief in God is denied or ignored. This refers to the Grand Orient of France, which recently eliminated the article expressing a belief in God from its ritual.

To the Editor of the Globe.

Having read in your issue of March 1st of a lecture delivered by Major T. M. Newsom, in which he says if gold or silver exist in the Black Hills, why not in Minnesota, I wish to say that in my opinion it does exist in Detroit, Minn.

A short distance from Floyd Lake, near the road to Oak Lake, can be found quartz boulders, and easterly from there (from five to eight miles) on a homestead claimed by Phillips, can be found good quartz; if not the croppings. An Immigration Item.

A short item about the rapid growth and fine climate of Minnesota was literally working its way through Eastern papers, and met the eye of a man in Blair county, Pa. He at once made up his mind to remove to our State, and we saw him yesterday walk into Col. Hewitt's office with a letter of introduction to that gentleman. The family consists of father, mother, eight sons and two daughters, all the stalwart type and style of people we welcome to Minnesota. We left the father mailing facts about our State back to Pennsylvania and also quite an interest in spreading the information to others which he had fallen upon accidentally. That man and his family are worth more to Minnesota than the $5,000 that the State has just voted for immigration.
