

FRANKLIN, MINNESOTA

CURRENT TOPICS.

Of Representative Wood, of Wisconsin the Washington correspondent of the Minnesota Journal says that he was in the House a dark green coat with metallic buttons, thought to be of pure gold; he said to have won gold in the early days of California.

Henry, ex-Congressman is said to look like the ideal portrait of Brother James or Uncle Sam. His figure is spare even to meanness, and his features are sharp and aquiline. His eyes were mild and expressionless. His favorite wears are Bygones and Bulwers.

THORNTON did not intend that his Note Books should be published, and they probably would not have been printed had the fortunes of the family permitted the luxury of keeping them locked up. The books, however, were a disappointment, retaining but small influence.

JERRARD Davis at the age of thirty-five, and a number of officers, is interestingly described by Colonel Ferguson having a handsome face, graceful manners, an erect figure, a high forehead, a broad white collar rolled over his neck. He was one of the few Southern politicians who had scientific tastes.

Mrs. CHARLES J. BOWEN, of Baltimore, although not a well-to-do woman, is very wealthy by the inheritance of much of her grandfather's holdings, still works hard in his law practice and displays great ability therein. He is the only one of the Price-Ingram line, that is, the only one of that name who is not a member of the Price-Ingram dynasty never will be restored. Mrs. Bowen has apparently no aspirations in the direction of the French throne.

The sum of $27,000 has been raised by subscription as an additional endowment for the Harvard University. The sum of $100,000 is said to have been given by Mrs. Thomas Tipton, of New York City. Daniel Drew's gift of $250,000 and the endowment of Drew's Theological Seminary, which was lost through his failure, has been replaced by subscriptions amounting to $243,000, so that the total sum can be increased to $300,000.

An alarming increase in the number of divorces in Massachusetts is noted by the Boston Herald. The courts during the last fifteen years have granted more than two hundred and twenty-three absolute divorces, and more than half of this number were given within the last year. As the rate of divorces is much greater than the increase is merely guesswork.

While the Molly Maguire men held their courts in the coal region they were contented in their hats as they were crumpled in their methods of revenge. The few who have any fine feeling, and a few who of their crimes had the law equally merciless. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, a few days since, sustained the decision of the lower courts in the case of William McManus and John O'Neill, under sentence of death for a murder committed five years ago.

On John Hingham, of Honolulu, Mr. E. P. Whipple tells his story. He was once at a game, Mr. President, and one day in the Senate, that the noble bullheads of the administration should wipe their noses time to time. "How do you know that," he said. "I know it by the way they talk, and that is the best way to judge of them." Immediately the Senator was in an uproar, and he was clamorously called to order. The protesting officers, however, sustained him. He said, "I am a lawyer, and my clients are my opponents; Randolph screamed out, 'Rats, did I say, Mr. Moore, sir?'"

MRS. HAD a sign which talked about the broken body of the latter-day Adam. The general belief is that it has been recovered, but Mr. Henry Hilliard wants to give any definite information about it. "It is not true that Mr. Hilliard has the body in his possession. It is true that he knows where the body is, and that he has had it inspected, and is satisfied that it is Mr. Stewart's body. He has a few hours today that he pays $15,000 for it. That is the price demanded. When the ergot at a meeting is ready the negotiations will be closed. I think it will take that sum to get the body."

The czar and the Czarowitz are reported to be quarrelling. The latter refused to obey his father's wish that he should accompany him to the German government. Alexander then conveyed to the czar a message that he should attend the second anniversary of the czar's coronation. The order given through a general. This messenger finds his mission hopeless, and at last told the czar of the refusal of his persistent refusal "stick" throw that suffering czar into a sick-bed. In his excitement the Grand Duke is said to have exclaimed: "After all it would be better if the czar were so sick that that Russia should be so." With this the interview was of course, at an end.

Our habitues of the Actor House will remember Alexander McStetos, lately known as "Alcock," who was connected with the management of the theater for many years. Alcock had a house in the Eden Park Hotel in Colorado, and is evidently satisfied with the location to judge by what he writes to the press on the subject. He says: "This park is a paradise. It is healthy in pleasantly warm, and it is an ideal resort, such out and noise, the snow from the mountains in winter. And such delightful cool nights for sleep you never saw anything that could surpass them. There is a fine view of the best of New York city from here, and I will show you how to find perfect happiness."

A Famous Gambler's Career.

The weight of evidence, or rather of assertion, is that of Garcia, the famous gambler, is indeed false. He is a Spaniard who has been in the city for some time.
