To the patrons of the BRAINERD TRIBUNE at the commencement of the New Year we feel like speaking many words of encouragement. The hopefulness of the coming time is cheering indeed. Many have been the indications of a renewed prosperity all over the land; a confidence in business enterprises everywhere; a prosperous commercial movement in all the avenues of trade; a healthier social condition among the masses, and a brighter political faith in the near future.—These are the beacon-lights, dispelling darkness and imparting light to many a weary and worn soul that has been plodding through the discouragements of the last few years. The labor question has solved itself in a satisfactory way with the incoming tide of active business in all directions. Even the tramp looks forward to better feeding and bedding, and a prosperous community will soon relieve society from this nefarious infliction.

The political question will solve itself—or rather a few Garcelons to oil the slide and the Ship of State will pass smoothly and noiselessly into deep soundings, and ride safely at anchor in patriotic seas. It is a time for congratulation. The little complexities of a great and patriotic people are easily removed. Even the ruinous influences and excitements of a Presidential campaign will soon pass away, and our crippled industries restored to full flourishing condition.

The thought of the day is for greater unity and harmony in National affairs, and progress in every direction is taking a great leap forward. The sciences are discovering the mysteries of all worlds as they were never exposed before; and art, simplifying methods, is bringing to every household embellishments that could only be the adornments of palaces in former years. Universal education, accessability of culture, the unreserved contact of the masses, the perfect distribution of thought everywhere, makes one community of the world, and that world full of activity in the direction of better methods, and all for the elevation of man, advances this age into the front rank of human endeavor and happiness. The last sixty years have indeed been a wonderful time of invention and progress. And, judging from the past, what will the next half century disclose? The human mind sharpened, thought intensified, mines ideas prospected for and followed with the tenacity of a miner in a Comstock lode, notions protruding from every direction, grasped and analyzed, and all refuse obliterated—and this through the ages, always gaining momentum, until the velocity and power of electricity can be accurately measured and guaged, sound can be transmitted unknown distances through "elemental air," and the value of a thought appreciated as readily as a grain of silver, dross or gold.

This is indeed a wonderful age!—Let us remember that we are a factor of and in it, and strive to advance it to still greater wonders in the next, until mind shall have unwrapped the secrets of all material and spiritual forces, and unveiled the Universe of God. This is its mission! This our legitimate aspiration!

A Happy New Year to all.

The Northern Pacific Railway.

Had we the time and space we would be glad to spread before our readers what this enterprise has become, and what it promises. We can in a short article, however, only hint at its magnitude.

This trans-continental highway has already built and equipped over seven hundred miles of road. A year ago the population along and tributary to it was about 45,000; now it is nearly 70,000. Upwards of 5,000,000 bushels of wheat were harvested along this line in 1879, and the estimate for the present year, with an average crop, is 8,000,000. This, where only seven years ago there was not, along this entire line of 700 miles, a single acre under cultivation, or a habitation west of Fondulac on the St. Louis river.

Now thriving towns of from 500 to 3,000 inhabitants are numerous between Duluth and Bismarck, and the largest wheat farms east of California have been opened up along this highway, paying enormous profits to their owners. The lands for twenty miles on either side of the line are mostly taken up, and inside of five years will be yielding 20,000,000 bushels of wheat. This is what this railway has done and is doing for this country.

This thoroughfare transported to the port of Duluth in 11 months in 1879, 120,000,000 lbs. of freight, with which is included nearly 4,000,000 bushels of wheat. This, with its other extensive freight and passenger traffic, has tested the capacity of its carrying facilities to its utmost; and to provide for its increasing traffic the Board of Directors, at a late meeting in New York, authorized General Manager Sargent to provide for 200 box cars, 100 flat cars, 50 stock cars, 4 passenger cars, 2 parlor cars, 1 sleeper and 3 baggage cars, in addition to its present extensive outfit of rolling stock, which we are informed will be built at their own shops in Brainerd the present winter. The company is now employing about 150 men at these shops, and the force will have to be doubled, or nearly so, to turn out this work ready for the rush of the spring trade. Skilled artisans and mechanics are consequently in demand, and the company is finding considerable difficulty in procuring them.

The Missouri Division will be completed to the Yellowstone next summer, and also the Pend D'Oreille Division on the Pacific coast. The company has plenty of means to accomplish this work, and with its own earnings inside of five years and the sale of its lands will stretch its iron band across the continent, opening up a new empire to astonish the world. Wheat, silver, coal, gold, all along its route, promises to add to the wealth of the country beyond the most sanguine predictions of enthusiasts and all the glowing tributes of a Jay Cooke and his far-seeing coadjutors.

Mr. H. E. Sargent, the able Manager of this vast enterprise, with his able assistants, H. A. Towne, A. P. Farrar and A. E. Taylor, in their respective departments, are working with the energy and skill of masters to complete it and make it a success; and the corporation ought to, as it undoubtedly does, congratulate itself upon having the aid of these gentlemen to insure it.

Narrow Escape.

The night passenger train from the west, five hours late, at about half-past 5 o'clock Sunday morning last, when five miles west of Motley, miraculously escaped a terrible wreck. It was being hauled by two engines, and just at the foot of Hayden hill the rear engine jumped the track, breaking loose from the front engine, and plunged into the marsh from a four foot grade. The engine turned nearly upside down, burying the engineer, Geo. Ames, and the fireman, Terence Vane, in four feet of water, ice and mud. The tank of the engine careened over, with the trucks uppermost, and tore the cab of the engine to pieces. The plucky fireman managed to get his head through the debris of the wrecked engine out of the water, and feeling Ames the engineer under him, reached down and assisted the drowsig engineer out of his perilous predicament. They were both, assisted by the conductor and brakeman who were immediately on the wrecked engine, taken into the sleeping car and properly cared for, and got off with a few unimportant bruises. From various parties who were present, we are inclined to believe that their escape from instant death was as miraculous a one as we have ever been called to record. The baggage car was turned nearly half round, one end out in the marsh and the other resting on the grade; the two passenger coaches and sleeper off the track and very near upsetting. There were quite a number of passengers aboard, and many of them owe their lives to the coolness and thought-fulness of the engineer who, the moment the engine left the track sounded the whistle and put on the air-brakes. The train was going at a speed of 25 miles an hour, and stopped within the space of 250 feet. Had the couplings of the coaches or any of them broken, the whole train would have tumbled over into the ditch. Mr. A. P. Farrar, Major Brackett, C. B. Sleeper, engineer Gardner and other prominent citizens were aboard, and testified their gratitude to the engineer, fireman, conductor and brakeman for their thoughtfulness and careful attentions to all.

The Pioneer Press.

The enterprise of the managers of this journal is only limited by time. The "Old Father" wont wait, even for it, though perhaps it ought to suspend its wheels that we of the west might sufficiently comprehend the immense mental and material resources involved in this great newspaper—excelled by few in this or any other country. The New Year's edition contains 24 pages of reading matter—historical, descriptive, etc.—and constitutes a valuable compendium or rather an unabridged history of the journal, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other prosperous cities of the State, with their manufactures, commercial development, etc. Messrs. Wheelock and Driscoll, its body and spirit, come to the front rank of prosperous managers, and are every way worthy to wear the mantel of nobility. The TRIBUNE extends its humble hands, but none the less shakes the Pioneer Press hand cordially and thankfully for its great efforts.

On Tuesday Mr. E. P. Barnum took the oath of office as Lieutenant-Governor of Minnesota, to which he claims to have been "duly and lawfully elected." This, of course, means a contest. We believe Mr. Gilman has not yet taken the oath of office, but when he does we will have two Lieutenant-governors, so to speak, until the Supreme Court passes on the question of Mr. Gilman's eligibility.—St. Cloud Journal.

Over fifty new buildings have been erected in this city the past season, at a cost of $30,000. Next year we will double it, and yet, with a population of 3,500, the Pioneer Press "New Year's" edition did not mention it. Strange, isn't it? Fletcher, take her back—Crookston isn't half as large as Brainerd—and both north of Minneapolis. Do you mind that) now?

Have you anything late from the State of Bangor? It is rumored that something has happened down there. The Governor of that State "remarked to the Governor of Louisiana," or words to that effect.—[Jim Jam Junior.

"Nine shots exchanged, and nobody hurt." That is the latest news from Virginia. Blood will tell. "Let 'er run," Shoot some more, Mosby. Clatter away, Lee. What's the harm, any way?

Parnell, the agitator of the rights of Irish tenantry and famine-afflicted Ireland, is in New York city. Will the American people generously respond to this appeal? You bet your bottom dollar they will.

The TRIBUNE gives its readers this week a chronological record of the happenings of the old year that will be found valuable for future reference if properly preserved.

"Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore
And coming events cast their shadows before.'

He evidently refers to his political life, and fraud as the "shadow."

Edison is not yet "out of the woods," so to speak. He is still in the gloaming—or his "light of the world" is! That's the news from Menlo Park.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 29th, 1879.

The splendid leadership of Senator Blaine is once more illustrated in the political war in Maine. Had it not been for his resolute purpose to have fair play even from the rascals who had made their plan in advance to steal political power which they could not obtain at the polls, the saving of that great State would have been hopeless. Now, to his genius and courage, there is a prospect of justice being done, and the Republicans holding the State. His friends take justifiable pride in pointing to this example as proof that Senator Blaine would make a noble chief magistrate of the Nation.

The democrats here are very sick of the Maine business, and Senators Eaton and Cockrell among others have advised Garcelon to back out of his illegal and unjust position. With the singular fatality of democrats with a little brief authority, however, it is likely that he will persist until forced to surrender to an outraged public opinion. Democrats will go all lengths anywhere to capture the next Presidency. But they will be foiled.

General Grant had no reception on his arrival here. It is said some of his best friends advised him not to have any more public receptions, because they have been overdone, and give a chance for cheap men to make themselves prominent. The Washington Chronicle says plainly that they have hurt Gen. Grant in the public view, and because the managers have been allowed to announce that they are in the interest of the Grant boom.

Captain James B. Eads has returned home to plague the speculators who are trying to raise money to construct important canals across the Isthmus of Panama. His plan is to construct a marine railway across the Isthmus, and he says it ought to be an American institution strictly. On all engineering subjects Captain Eads is relied upon largely, and his plan is likely to prevail in the end because of its economy and the speed with which it can be put in operation.

There bids fair to be considerable discussion in Congress as to the rate of interest to be paid on the new bonds to be issued in place of those called in during the next fiscal year. Hon. Fernando Wood thinks they can be placed at a rate of interest as low as 3 1-2 per cent., and says he can convince Secretary Sherman, who believes in a four per cent. bond, that it can be done.

Secretary Sherman has had a large experience as a financial manager, and his judgment and opinion should be fully considered by Congress before acting upon a matter so closely identified with our credit and interests abroad.

Worderful Cures.

Rev. F. W. Bucholds, Wasecs, Minn., used the St. Jacobs Oil in the case of a lady of his congregation who had been bed-ridden with Rheumatism for seventeen years. She used the St. Jacobs Oil for three days and was able to leave her bed.

Mr. R. Schaefer, No. 31 Brown street, Allegheny City, Pa., had the Rheumatism for eight years, and had used every known medicine without relief. A single bottle of St. Jacobs Oil cured him.

Gustav A. Hemmas, Esq., Editor of Pittsburgh Daily Republican, suffered with Rheumatism for two years, and lay many a night unable to sleep on account of terrible pains. Two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil cured him.

Mr. F. Wilke, Lafayette, Ind., reports a case where a man suffered so badly with Rheumatism that he could not move. His legs were swollen, and he had the most terrible pains. Twelve hours after the first application of the St. Jacobs Oil the pains were gone and the swelling had disappeared.

Mr. Henry Schaefer, Millersburg, Ohio, was cured of Rheumatism in the hips.

Mr. F. R. Witt, Cleveland, Ohio, had such pain in his shoulder that he could not move. St. Jacobs Oil cured him after a few applications.

Mrs. Verna Guglemann, aged 59 years, living in Rothester, N. Y., Rheumatism in legs, could not walk. Used bottle of St. Jacob's Oil, and felt, as she asserts, like new-born.

Christian Hann, Esq., Youngstown, Ohio, is full of joy over the wonderful cure of his wife by St. Jacobs Oil. For twelve long years she had suffered with Neuralgia in the head, and often had the most terrible pains. Half a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil cured her entirely.

Mr. Wm. Reinhard, Elmore, Wis., reports as follows: St. Jacobs Oil is really a wonderful remedy, for I could mention dozens of cases where it has proved its magical influence. One case in particular I will state: I know a man who has suffered with Rheumatism for the last twenty-four years, and of late he could scarcely move around. After using a few bottles of St. Jacobs Oil he was entirely cured.

B. Seik, Esq., South Adams, Massachusetts, writes: Allow me to inform you how much good St. Jacobs Oil has done in this neighborhood. A woman had the Rheumatism so badly that she could not even attend to her wash.—Three applications of St. Jacobs Oil cured her. Her joy seemed to have no bounds.

Don't be Deceived.

Many persons say "I haven't got the Consumption" when asked to cure their Cough with Shiloh's Consumption Cure. Do they know that Coughs lead to Consumption and a remedy that will cure consumption will certainly and surely cure a cough or any lung or throat trouble. We know it will cure when all others fail and our faith in it is so positive that we will refund the price paid if you receive no benefit. Is not this a fair proposition. Price 10 cts. 50 cts. and $1.00 per bottle. For lame Chest, Back or side, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. For sale by

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS

N. D. Sädler late Representative in the Legislature from Franklin county, Ill., was assassinated at his home Dec. 29, by parties unknown.

Four negroes charged with murder were taken from the jail in Amite, La., on the night of Dec. 30th by a mob of fifty men, and shot to death.

At 10 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 26th, 180 masked men took two prisoners, one a half-breed Indian, charged, with murder, from the jail at Golden, Colorado, and lynched them.

During divine services in the House of Hope, at St. Paul, Minn., on Sunday evening, Dec. 26, a thief made his way into the pastor's study in the rear of the church, and stole $60 worth of clothing, including a fine overcoat belonging to Henry J. Horn. &c., together with a pair of gloves, and a costly seal skin cap valued at $18, belonging to Prof. Leib, who conducts the House of Hope choir.

A man at Niagra Falls who had given his name at the postoffice as Dr. D. A. Sikes, on the 24th of December bought two limited tickets by throwing himself off the new suspension bridge. The distance of the bridge to the water belows is 190 feet. He appeared to be about 60 years of age. He was a fine appearing old gentleman and displayed remarkable strength of conduct. He was an entire stranger and may not have given his true name.

Eight roughs boarded the Baltimore & Ohio train at Camden station, N. J., at 11:15 Wednesday night, Dec. 24, just as the train started. They drove a colored man from the cars and soon afterwards made an attack upon another colored man. They beat the "colored gentlemen" for safety, but was pursued their by the roughs, who made an indiscriminate assault with pistols and sticks upon the passengers. A colored woman was struck in the head and a man was badly cut, and other passengers were badly bruised. It was with difficulty that passengers were prevented from leaping from the car while it was in rapid motion.

Ouray and the chiefs selected to go to Washington came to the Los Pinos Agency Colorado, Dec. 23, bringing with them only a part of the prisoners. General Hatch refused to go unless all the prisoners demanded by the commissioners were surrendered. Ouray asked for further time and a few days were granted to deliver them, as Cline Ranch is thirty miles from the agency on the road to Alamosa, at which place General Hatch will wait their coming. Ouray is either playing a double game or is unable to control what he attempted. The snow is from 5 to 15 feet deep on the range, and the General is compelled to build sleighs in order to make the trip. The success of the commissioners is somewhat doubtful and the army may yet be called upon to settle the Ute question.

A special from the Denver Tribune from Los Pinos, dated the 26th, represents that the situation is very serious there. Hatch was to have started from Los Pinos yesterday and spend to night at Cline's ranch on the Cimmaron. On the 20th he started from there to Alamosa, which is the first railroad station. Hatch has given up all hope of securing the Indians, and as his departure is tantamount to a declaration of war, much anxiety was felt as to his fate. Only seventy-five hundred bravis near Los Pinos, and the whole all told will not number twenty-five The roads are blocked with snow and only passable for light buck-boards, and the Indians have the whites completely hogged. If Hatch has left without the Indians it is considered certain that the war will open at once. The Indians will strike the first blow as they have everything their own way, and everything to the removal of the troops to distant points.

The German Emperor William, stumbled up stairs the other day and hurt one of his knees, so says a cablegram.

RECORD OF THE YEAR.

A History of the Accidents and Incidents of 1879.

Together with the Death Roll of the Passing Year.

THE VANISHED YEAR.

Another year from earth hath fled,
And reached the land unknown,
Where we'll rejoin "sometime" our dead
And be no more alone.

Another year, which wrote each deed
Upon the heavenly scroll;
Again we vow the best to heed,
And more for good engage.

Ah! fleeter dear, another year,
Thy patient spirit we
Implore, and grant it to us more near
In purest love to Thee.

RELIEF FUNDS.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—At a meeting, in Galway, of the committee of the Irish land league a report was read from the relief commissioner on the distress in the west of Ireland, and it was resolved that the league should undertake to receive and distribute any assistance entrusted to them. Resolutions were also adopted recommending the formation of branches of the league in different counties.

The fund instituted by the duchess of Marlborough for the relief of the distress in Ireland has reached £6,000.

MASTERED BY PASSION.

Aunt Annie's Story.

"I admit that Ruth is quick-tempered and that she often says things that she does not mean."

It was Hannah Cleaves who spoke, and she was defending her young and pretty cousin, who had been not quite two years the wife of Charles Gray.

"Still," said Susan Adams, another cousin, "I must say that she is much to blame. Her husband is one of the kindest and best of men, and I know that she often makes him unhappy. She might act differently if she would."

"I am not sure of that," returned Hannah. "She is not to blame for the evil disposition which was born in her. She cannot help her own nature. No two of us are alike in all our feelings, and we are all apt to act about as we feel. It is unfortunate that some people are diseased; but I cannot say that those are to blame who have inherited their disease from their ancestors. And so it is with our disposition."

"But," suggested Susan, "that person who has inherited a disease which works mischief not only to herself, but all around her, is certainly to blame if she does not make any exertion to get rid of it."

"Ay," cried Hannah, "but there are diseases which cannot be got rid of; and I say that Cousin Ruth cannot be blamed for her feelings, because they come in spite of her, and when they have come she cannot hide them."

Aunt Annie Dismore laid her knitting-work aside and gravely shook her head.

"Hannah," she said, with deep solemnity, "you may at some time be a mother; and when that time comes, let me urge you not to teach your children the doctrine you have been upholding here."

Aunt Annie was such a good, kind woman, and she loved us all so well, and did so much for our happiness, that even Hannah Cleaves was respectfully silent beneath the gentle reproof.

"A little while ago," our aunt went on, "you were speaking of willful people. Now, I admire strong self-will when it is bent in the right direction. The noblest of God's children are those who have strong wills. The Christian martyrs were extremely self-willed. Self-will is a beneficial force when it is made to uphold virtue and goodness. And cultivate self-will as much as you please, and make it subservient to right. I fear the trouble with Ruth Gray is, that she has no self-will. What you call self-will in her is only perverseness and inconsistency. She exercises no will at all, but is the creature of circumstance, suffering herself to be swayed to and fro by every gust of passion that sweeps across her path."

When Aunt Annie laid her knitting-work upon the table, and folded her hands in her lap, we knew she had something of interest to say to us, for she was not a woman who talked for the sake of talking.

"I tell you, girls," she said, "we can if we will! If we will do right, we can do right. She who practically denies this casts aside the very foundation of virtuous character, and erects her structure of life upon a basis of sand. I am going to tell you a story of my own life. You call me good; and I think I am good to you. At all events I try to be so. But my goodness of temper came to me through a mighty effort of will, as you shall see. When I was young I was more perverse than your Cousin Ruth ever was. My temper was quick and high; I was subject to fits of despondency that made all around me miserable; and I excused myself upon the plea that such was my nature—I could not help it. When I became the wife of Jacob Dismore I was very happy, and I thought myself very fortunate, for I knew that I had won for a husband one of the best young men in the town. Your Uncle Jacob was then just what he is now—kind, generous, loving, forbearing and faithful to a fault. For the first six months of our married life I did not allow my bad temper to show itself much; but at length my honeymoon waned, and my old feelings began to manifest themselves. I became, in short, just what I was before I was married. People called me self-willed; but I had no self-will. I did not will to be cross and petulant. I was cross and petulant because I had no will to be otherwise. Sometimes I had bad feelings, and I had no will to overcome them. The slightest thing that crossed me found me so entirely devoid of will that it swayed me at its pleasure. At the end of two years there was more of misery than of happiness in my home, and I could not hide from myself the fact that I was the cause of it all; and yet I tried to convince myself that I was not to blame. When my mother talked with me, I declared that I could not help it; and when my husband ventured to allude to the subject, I flew into a passion. I could not bear a chiding from him. In fact, his very kindness and goodness sometimes fretted me; and when he offered to point out to me my errors it seemed as though he were preaching to me, and I would not listen.

"Girls, I tell you truly when I tell that I believe no one was ever more firmly fixed in the habit of ill-feeling than I was at that time, and I did certainly then believe that I could not help it.

"Some time before we were married there had been a volunteer artillery company in our town, and, as Jacob was the only commissioned officer living in the town itself, he took charge of the property which belonged to the corps, thus retaining control of the two handsome cannon. One royal birthday the townspeople raised money for a celebration of the occasion, and, among other things, a royal salute to be fired in the morning, at noon, and at sundown, of which my husband was to have charge.

"During the day I received an invitation to join some friends in a sail up on the river, and, as I could not very well go to the landing alone, I asked Jacob to go with me. He said it would interfere with other duties, and he could not go. I asked him if he thought the firing of the salutes was of more importance than the making of happiness for his wife, and, when he had foiled me at the argument, I asked him why he could not let some one else take charge of the cannon. He answered me calmly and candidly that he dared not trust the gun in other hands. He was the only one who understood how to properly handle it, and he felt obliged to attend to it. He told me how many accidents had happened through the mistakes of inexperienced and careless persons, and he could not feel right to neglect the duty he had promised to perform.

"That was in the afternoon. At 6 o'clock it was time for me to start for the landing place, if I meant to go; but I would not go unless my husband went. He had sent for a carriage to take me down, but I would not use it. I shrank away into a fit of the sulks, and so remained until it came time for Jacob to go away with his gun. As he was putting on his hat my temper burst forth into a wild flame, and his calm answer only maddened me. At length I pushed him beyond the bounds of human endurance, and he turned upon me more sternly than he had ever before done. He did not speak angrily, but he spoke as an offended parent might have spoken to an offending child. This set my blood completely afire, and I cannot tell you all the wicked things I said.

"'Annie,' he said to me, as he stood near the door, 'it might have been better for both of us if we had never met.'

"I answered him hotly and passionately that I hoped we might never meet again. 'If you were dead,' said I, 'I should be happier than I am now!'

"'No, no, Annie, you do not mean that,' he replied to me.

"And I cried out that I did mean it, and I declared that I hoped I might never see him again alive. And he went away as I said those words.

"My dear girls, do you think such words could ever have come from my lips? Ah, you do not know to what wild and wicked results of language a course of unbridled license will lead. If, when Ruth Gray is angrily disputing with her husband, some shorthand writer could take down her words just as they fall from her lips, and should afterward show them to her, she would honestly declare that she never, never spoke such things. And so, when many mothers are fretfully disputing with their children, could they hear themselves as others hear them, they would be shocked beyond measure. When passion becomes our master we are blind as well as insane, and the sin is not in what is then said, but rather in allowing the adversary the first foothold.

"My husband went away and left me alone, and when he had gone I sat down and cried till I was tired. By-and-by I heard the report of the cannon, and I thought, suppose some accident should happen to Jacob! Suppose they should bring him home dead! As these thoughts came to me, I remembered what a good, kind husband he had been, and I also remembered how cruel and unjust I had been. Again and again came the booming report of the cannon, and at each report the dread grew stronger and stronger upon me. Oh, what would I have then given could I have recalled the wicked words I had spoken! But they had gone forth, and I must abide the result. Heavier and heavier grew the weight upon my heart, until at length I thought I should go crazy if Jacob did not soon return. My crime loomed up before me darkly and threateningly, and it seemed to me that my husband's death was to be my punishment. Oh, when would the firing cease, and when would my husband come home, that I might fall upon his neck and ask his pardon for all the wickedness I had done?

"The firing ceased at length, but, instead of hopefulness, the dread became heavier. I was hunting for my bonnet, intending to go out and meet my husband, when I heard heavy feet in the garden. The cloud had settled down and the thunder crash had gone. Men came in and told me not to be frightened—my husband was hurt, but they hoped not seriously. Perhaps they thought I was calm; they did not know that my heart was frozen, and that the fount of emotion was shut up. Then other men brought my husband in on a wide board, and I saw that his limbs were limp and lifeless, that his face was like marble, and that there was blood upon the beard—blood trickling down upon the floor! And I heard them talk; they told me that he had been run over by the heavy gun-carriage—that, in coming down the hill from where the salute had been fired, men and boys, in wild confusion, had seized the trail-rope, and that my husband, in attempting to prevent the rush, had been knocked down and run over.

"Two doctors came. I heard them talk of a broken leg, of broken ribs, and of other injuries; and during all this time I was as one in a horrid dream, unable to move or to speak, and almost suffocating. By-and-by I heard one of the doctors say that he would live, and then I sank down senseless.

"When I came to my senses it was night, and one of the neighbors sat at my bedside. I told them I wished to see my husband, but I was informed that he was asleep, and that I must not disturb him then. In the morning I went to him, and he put up his well arm and drew me down upon the pillow and kissed me. And he told me not to worry myself; he was badly hurt, but if I would nurse him and love him he would soon get well.

"Love him! Oh, my soul, how strong I felt then—how strong in my love and in my determination to be a true and faithful wife!"

Aunt Annie took off her spectacles and wiped her eyes, and presently added:

"Girls, that was forty years ago, and from that day to this I have not spoken one cross word to my husband. My nature is not changed at all; but I have gained control of my will, and bent it in the right direction; and when once I found how much pure joy there was in doing right it came very easy to do it.

"Ah! here comes your Uncle Jacob now. See how good he looks! You can see his gray hairs, and note the wrinkles upon his brow; but to me he is as young as ever, and I know that our love was never more fresh than it is now."

Just then Uncle Jacob came in, and when an hour later we saw him and Aunt Annie in the garden together picking flowers like two young lovers we were forced to the conclusion that they were really and truly a happy couple; and Hannah Cleaves had no more reason to defend Cousin Ruth against the charge of folly and wickedness in allowing her own ill-temper to make herself and her husband miserable.

Eugenie, before she ever saw Louis Napoleon, had laid a romantic plan for releasing him from the prison of Ham, because her imagination told her she was to be the guardian angel of imperial France.

A Boston lady lost a pocketbook containing $700, and when an honest little fellow returned it to her she was so grateful that she gave him a great deal of good advice, and didn't charge him a cent for it.

Palestine Pottery.

The Biblical descriptions of pottery are singularly applicative to the present process of manufacture. Now, in this nineteenth century, the potter sits at his frame and turns the wheel with his foot. Or, as we read in the Apocrypha: "So doth the potter, sitting at his work and turning the wheel about with his feet: he fashioneth the clay with his arm." The potter had a heap of the prepared clay near him, and a pot of water by his side. Taking a lump in his hand, he placed it on the top of the wheel, which revolves horizontally, and smoothed it into a low cone, like the upper end of a sugar-loaf; then, thrusting his thumb into the top of it, he opened a hole down through the center, and this he constantly widened by pressing the edges of the revolving cone between his hands. As it enlarged and became thinner, he gave it whatever shape he pleased, with the utmost ease and expedition.

It is evident, from numerous expressions in the Bible, that the potter's vessel was the synonym of utter fragility; and to say, as David does, that Zion's King would dash his enemies in pieces like a potter's vessel was to threaten with ruinous and remediless destruction.

We, who are accustomed to strong stoneware of considerable value, can scarcely appreciate some of these Biblical references, but for Palestine they are still as appropriate and forcible as ever. Arab jars are so thin and frail that they are literally dashed to shivers by the slightest stroke. Water jars are often broken by merely putting them down upon the floor; and the servant frequently returns from the fountain empty-handed, having had all his jars smashed to atoms by some irregular behavior of the donkey.—Harper's Magazine.

The Fame of Thackeray.

Thackeray is the only novelist of his time, it may safely be said, whose popularity is increasing. While his rivals are suffering from the reaction that always follows success, he has been steadily gaining ground. His mood is critical enough to suit the taste of the time, and not critical enough to injure his novels as works of art, for it is obvious that, with all his hatred of shams, Thackeray's scorn of conventions did not go deep. In spite of his professions, he was contented to accept a very conventional code of morality, and he turned away with indifference from many questions which a man thirty years his junior could not let pass so easily. At bottom he showed the optimism of the Waterloo warriors whose weaknesses he knew so well how to expose, and had he not done so he would have been a far less delightful writer than he is. It is this mixture of half-hearted pessimism and real optimism that makes Thackeray so popular at present. He was, too, the earliest prophet of the Queen Anne's men, and of that reaction in favor of the eighteenth century that is now so powerful, and secures for "Esmond" a preference to which we venture to think it is not entitled. Admitting that Thackeray bestowed more labor on "Esmond," and showed more artistic conscience in it than in any of his other books, we cannot allow that, admirable as it is as a piece of "restoration," it has the vitality of "Vanity Fair" and "The Newcomes." It is as a painter of his own times—a painter who had no rival in his own day—that Thackeray will be remembered, and time will make of these wonderful novels true historical romances. They will live as vivid pictures of English society in the first half of the nineteenth century.—The Athenæum.

The Scientific American gives no encouragement to the effort now in progress to raise an anti-vaccination feeling in this country. It admits that the statistics unfavorable to vaccination, collected either here or in Europe, may be true; but its confidence in vaccination remains unshaken. The figures teach rather a reform of the practice of vaccination than an abrogation of it. "Vaccine virus, not contaminated and stripped of its virtue by humanization—that is, by repeated transmission from man to man—is both free from risks and of certain efficacy. No better proof of this fact is required than the practical stamping out of small-pox in this great city. In view of the fact that by the general adoption of correct vaccination, small-pox, but lately one of the worst of human scourges, has been so thoroughly brought under subjection in New York that, with 1,100,000 inhabitants, there were last year but fourteen cases of the disease, it is as manifestly unwise as it is absurd for our newspapers to lend themselves to the propagation of anti-vaccination nonsense."

The Two Knew Everything.

Once, in traveling, the Rev. Dr. Bledsoe was exceedingly annoyed by a pedantic bore who forced himself upon him and made a great parade of his shallow learning. The doctor bore it as long as he could, and at length, looking at him gravely, said: "My friend, you and I know all there is to be known." "How is that?" said the man, pleased with what he considered a very complimentary association. "Why," said the doctor, "you know everything except that you are a fool, and I know that."

He Couldn't Help It.

The wife of a well-known literary gentleman, while reading one of his articles for the press, corrected it as she went along, and the errors were numerous and bad. "Why, husband," she exclaimed, "you don't know the first rules of grammar, else you are very negligent." "Well, well, my love," he exclaimed, looking up from his work; "what's the matter now?" "Why, in three cases you speak of our sex in the plural, and write it in the singular number." "I can't help it," was the retort, "woman is a singular being."

Something for the New Year.

The world renowned success of Hostetter's Bitters, and their continued popularity for a quarter of a century as a stomachic, is scarcely more wonderful than the welcome that greets the annual appearance of Hostetter's Almanac. This valuable medical treatise is published by Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburg Pa., under their own immediate supervision, employing 60 hands in that department. Ten cylinder printing presses, 8 folding machines, 5 job presses, &c., are running about eleven months in the year on this work, and the issue of same for 1880 will not be less than ten millions, printed in the English, German, French, Welsh, Norwegian, Swedish, Holland, Bohemian and Spanish languages. Refer to a copy of it for valuable and interesting reading concerning health, and numerous testimonials as to the efficacy of Hostetter's Bitters, amusement, varied information, astronomical calculations and chronological items, &c., which can be depended on for correctness. The Almanac for 1880 can be obtained free of cost, from druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the country.

Gentlemen: Out of the case of "95" Rubber Boots sent me last April,
I sold one pair April 4, to Alvin Bliss,
" " " 5, to Geo. Reusch,
" " " 7, to Gill W. Randall,
" " " 8, to Albert Mallory,
" " " 11, to Milo H. Brown.

These boots had constant wear through April and May, and since that time they have been worn every morning through the dew to get the cows and do their milking in, and I have seen four pair of them and they are apparently as good as when I sold them. Milk whey and dew on a rubber boot, or any other boot, for six months, are as good tests as can be had. The pair of "95" boots sent me March 17, I put on a farmer who is one of my hardest customers. They have not cracked at all, but the one marked S C on front of leg, has worn through the first layer of the sole. Yours in haste,

There is no time to be lost when a cough attacks one, in adopting means of prevention against consumption and bronchitis. A cough may, with perfect truth, be termed the incipient stage of those destructive maladies, and it is the height of folly to disregard it. Rev. C. H. Dixon has made arrangements to have services in the M. E. Church every Sabbath this month.—There will be services to-morrow (Sunday) morning and evening.

The Week of Prayer will be observed in this city by union services of the Congregational and Methodist societies, the service on Monday evening being held in the Methodist church, and alternating during the week.

Hon. N. Richardson, of Little Falls, county attorney of Morrison county, and postmaster, came up to the "Hub" on New Year's day and sampled Ed's New Year's lunch at the Le Bon Ton in the evening. He decided the thing was "immense for a fact."

This has been a busy week indeed with the TRIBUNE force, affording little time for participating in the customary festivities and enjoyments of the season. We are not envious, however, of those more favored, and hope all enjoyed a happy New Year.

James Bardon, of Superior City, Wisconsin, desires to sell, lease or exchange for land or other good property, his circular saw-mill; also his shingle mill, both steam power, located at that place. Write to him for descriptions, prices, and full particulars.

Kingsley Burrell has accepted the position of engineer in Capt. Chase's new saw mill on Gull River, above Brainerd. King is one of the best engineers in the country, and a right good fellow, too. He has hired out by the year and will move his family up in the Spring.—[Elk River Star.

HAIR DRESSING.—Ladies, call on Mrs. Thompson and get your combings put up; rools all one way. Combings $1, and long cut hair, 75 cents per ounce. Making over old switches a specialty. Have a lot of curls, puffs and switches in a variety of shades, for sale. Residence, south end of 4th street.

The stock of groceries of Smith & Campbell was transferred to Hartley and Knox Bros. on the morning of New Years day, and they are now supplying the customers of that of that stand instead of the former proprietors. We wish them the success their present prospects indicate. Smith & Campbell still retain and will increase their stock of Dry Goods, Clothing, &c.

We were awful glad to hear that Bro. Hartley, of the Brainerd Tribune, had that worm snatched out of him. We have thought for years that it would be pleasant to have him—Hartley, we mean—dine with us some time, if we could only afford it.—Jim Jam Junior.

He—Hartley, we mean—accordingly anticipated an invitation to New Year's dinner, but alas! he—the worm, we mean—was snatched in vain.

Our former townsman, E. H. Bly, of Bismarck, is in town to-day, en route for home and "Baby mine." He has closed a contract with the N. P. R. R. Co. to get out of this mine the coming summer 10,000 tons of coal, and during the season to get out for other parties 10,000 tons. Bly hasstruck it nice this time—the Sheridan House, with a revenue of $1,000 a month, his Crookston town-site, rental in Brainerd and "Baby Mine" places Bly as the Bonanza King of the Northwest.

The skating rink, thanks to the public spirit of many of our citizens, is a success. The ice has been splendid all the week, and lovers of skating have been moving in graceful lines day and night over its glistering surface. For several evenings from 25 to 40 ladies, gentlemen and children have enjoyed the sport. Manager Wheaton is becoming very popular with the patrons of the rink, and keeps everything in first-class order.—Everything is conducted with propriety, and children are as safe as at home. Long may it wave.

The New Home Sewing Machines are fast taking the lead of all other makes. There were more New Home machines sold throughout the United States in 1879, than of any other make in existence. It is a first class machine in every respect, and will stand any competition on its own merits. We have sold fifty of these machines during the past year and have not heard a single complaint yet from one of them. All give universal satisfaction. Strong, simple and durable, light running, of large capacity, and cheap withal—they beat the world. "I would not swap my machine for any machine I ever saw," is the universal verdict of all. Buy your wife one for a New Year's present.

DR. CLARK'S
INDIAN BLOOD SYRUP
Laboratory, 77 W. 34 St., New York City,
LAKE OF PERSEY CITY.

[TRADE MARK.]

The Best Remedy Known to Man!

Dr. Clark Johnson having associated himself with Mr. Edwin Eastman, an escaped captive, long a slave to Wakamesikla, the medicine man of the Comanches, is now prepared to lend his aid in the introduction of the wonderful remedy of that tribe.

The experience of Mr. Eastman being similar to that of Mrs. Chas. Jones and son, of Washington Co., Iowa, an account of whose sufferings were brilliantly narrated in the New York Herald of Dec. 15th, 1878, the facts of which are so well known, and so similar to his own, that but little mention of Mr. Eastman's experience will be given here. They are, however, published in a neat volume of 300 pages, entitled "Seventeen Years Among the Comanches and Apaches," of which mention will be made hereafter. It is also given, that, for several years, Mr. Eastman, while a captive, was compelled to gather the roots, herbs, barks, berks and berries of which Wakamesikla's Panacea was made, and is still prepared to provide the same materials for the successful introduction of the medicine to the world; and assures the public that the remedy is the same now, as when Wakamesikla compelled him to make it.

Wakamesikla, the Medicine Man

Nothing has been added to the medicine, and nothing has been taken away. It is without doubt the Most Powerful Blood Purifier and Renewer of the System ever known to man.

This Syrup possesses varied properties.

It acts upon the Liver,
It acts upon the Kidneys,
It regulates the Bowels,
It purifies the Blood,
It quiets the Nervous System,
It promotes Digestion,
It nourishes the whole frame and Invigorates.
It carries off the old blood and makes New.
It opens the pores of the skin, and induces Healthy Perspiration.

It removes from the hereditary taint, or poison in the blood, which generates Scrofula, Erysipelas, and the many other diseases and internal humors.

There are no spirits used in its manufacture, and it can be taken by the most delicate babe, or by the aged feeble, are only being required in attention to directions.
