"AGAINST THE TEXT BOOK ACTS."

CROW WING COUNTY AHEAD.

The best samples of vegetables and grain contributed to the collection of the "Products of the Golden Northwest," on exhibition in the great Northern Pacific agricultural car, now making a tour of the east, were raised on Crow Wing county farms. JAMES B. POWER,
Land Commissioner N. P. R. R.

Announcement.

THE BRAINERD TRIBUNE, an excellent business investment, is this week offered for sale, to the right kind of a purchaser, at a bargain. Brainerd constitutes one of the best newspaper fields and THE TRIBUNE the best investment, for a newspaper man, in the "Golden Northwest." Owing to other business engagements I shall be unable, from want of time, to give the town such a paper as it requires, in all its details, and I prefer putting it into the hands of some one who can devote the time required to do the business justice, to holding on to it. None but the right kind of a man for the place, and a cash customer, need apply.

For further information, address,
W. W. HARTLEY,
Brainerd, Minn.

Vote "Against the Text-book Acts."

Washburn's majority 7,000! We told you so.

See that your ballots read "Against the Text-book Acts."

People vote in the direction of their business interests, and it wins.

It is a poor time to swap a certainty for uncertainty. Look well to your votes.

Don't forget to vote against the further continuance of the infamous Text-book law.

Republicans, remember that the representation of Crow Wing county in future conventions depends upon our vote this year.

Nasby says in his late "Wale of Anguish" over Democratic defeat in Indiana and Ohio, that the only way to purify the Republican party and get "offa" is for the Democrats to "become Republicans." From a Democratic standpoint, this is wisdom.

Capt. Mahlon Black, our candidate for State Auditor two years ago, was in town this week outside in Aitken on business. The Captain feels grateful to the people of Brainerd for a good rousing vote here and if the rest of the State had stood up for him in like manner, he would have been elected by a tremendous majority.

A shooting scrape is reported to have occurred in the Fargo Times office this morning. It appears a printer in the employ of that establishment, entered and asked the proprietor, Mr. Barker for his pay. Barker refused and undertook to eject him, he resisted when Barker drew a revolver and fired several shots at his importunate subordinate who retired un hurt but unpaid.

A new time schedule goes into effect on the Northern Pacific to-morrow, by which regular daily trains are put on the Missouri division from Mandan to the Little Missouri, a distance of 156 1-4 miles, and on the Casselton branch, from casselton north to Blanchard, a distance of 31 miles. The running time, for a mixed train on the Missouri division from Mandan to Little Missouri is 11 hours.

The Board of Registration will be in session at the Register of Deeds office, on Front street as follows: On Wednesday and Friday, Oct. 27th and 29th from 9 o'clock A. M. to 4 o'clock P. M. on Monday, November 1st, the day before election, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 9 o'clock P. M. and on the morning of election from 7 to 9 A. M. If you are not registered before the polls are opened you will have difficulty in voting, so do not fail to attend to it.

BRAINERD TRIBUNE.

VOL. IX.—NO. 37. BRAINERD, MINNESOTA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880. WHOLE NO. 453.

The idiotic Hampton is being scored and scorned without mercy by all classes and conditions of men, democrats and republicans. The dispatch was sent to him yesterday from Cleveland:

"Wade Hampton, Columbia, S. C.—Twelve hundred Union veteran members of the Garfield and Arthur veteran corps of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, who have just returned from a visit to Gen. J. A. Garfield at his home at Mentor, hereby send you their compliments, and say to you that they will, on the second of November, 1880, vote as they shot, and that their address will be Cleveland, Ohio."

The Text-Book Law.

The voters of this State should not lose sight of the fact that the question of the continuance of that infamous text-book law for another five years is to be submitted to the popular vote at the coming election on November 2d, and that they should vote a big NO. It has already become a dead letter upon our statute books as well as a miserable farce. Very few school officers in the State, even under the threats of prosecution from Mr. Merrill, have consented to burden their districts with the heavy tax necessary to carry out the requirements of the law, and with the law aside they will be relieved from these threats, and the power of Mr. Merrill's ire while on the other hand, should the people be so unwise or negligent as to let this gag law and farce be wrought upon us for another five years, the disobedient officers can be sure They will be made to dance to music as lively as the Merrill monopoly can play.

That the law is a farce and an insult to the spirit of freedom and broad guage of intelligence of the American people is beyond argument. None but a greedy monopoly could concoct, or a Minnesota legislature enact, so gigantic and brazen a swindle and oppression. If the law even left each district at liberty to adopt or reject its provisions there would be some color of equity and justice in it, but the very fact of its compulsory clause is evidence that it does not possess sufficient merit to commend itself, and must needs be forced down the throats of the people with the fraudulent plea of cheap books. Why! a thing we do not want and will not have—would throw in the stove if we were compelled to take it—is dear at any price, but at the expense of a heavy tax upon every district in the State it simply becomes an outrage paling the "cheap" plea into a thousand shades. Down such a law! Voters, stand upon the dignity of your freedom and spurn the monopoly which endeavors to fasten its clutches upon your pocket books and the insolence which denies your intelligence by saying it is in your behalf it is done.

The law submitting the question at this election provides that all electors voting against the continuance in force of said act shall have written or printed or partly written and partly printed upon their ballots the words "Against the text-book acts" and those in favor the words "In favor of the text-book acts." See that your ballot reads "AGAINST THE TEXT BOOK ACTS."

The Prospects of our Government.

The present U. S. Senate stands:

Democrats	42
Republicans	33
David Davis	1
Opposition majority	10

Of these twenty-five go out in 1881—eleven Republicans and fourteen Democrats, as follows:

REPUBLICANS. Senator.	State.	DEMOCRATS. Senator.	State.
Newton Booth, Col.	Cal.	W. W. Eaton,	Conn.
Hannibal Hamlin,	Maine	Joseph E. Brown,	Ga.
Hen. L. Dawes,	Mass	C. W. Jones,	Fla.
H. P. Baldwin,	Mich.	J. T. McDonald,	Md.
S. J. R. McMillan,	Minn.	W. P. Whyte,	Md.
		F. M. Cockrell,	Mo.
B. K. Bruce,	Miss.	T. F. Randolph,	N. J.
A. S. Paddock,	Neb.	F. Kernan,	N. Y.
Wm. Stanley,	Ind.	Allen G. Thurman,	Ohio
A. S. Burnside,	R. I.	W. A. Wallace,	Pa.
G. F. Edmunds,	Vt.	R. E. Bailey,	Tenn.
Angus Cameron,	Wis.	S. B. Maxey,	Texas
		S. E. Wilkins,	Va.
		F. Beresford,	W. Va.

The Republicans, with the single exception of Senator Bruce of Mississippi, will be returned or replaced by Republicans, while on the other hand, the States of Connect cut, Florida, Indiana, New Jersy, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania are certain to elect Republican instead of Democratic Senators, and possibly Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. The Republicans only need a gain of four to control the Senate, with the vote of the Vice President, two of which are already secured, in Indiana and Ohio, leaving the States of Connecticut, Florida, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania with chances in Delaware Maryland and the Virginias from which to gain the other two.

In the other House the different parties are represented as follows:

Democrats	147
Republicans	130
Greenbacks, &c.	16
Total	293

Of the sixteen Greenback members, nine are classed as Republicans and seven as Democrats. This shows a Republican minority of only fifteen.

In this body, however, the anticipated change is not so limited. A Republican majority has already been assured by the elections held, and in November the revolution will be sweeping and decisive, giving the Republicans a large majority, which with the election of Garfield and Arthur, and even a moderate portion of the anticipated gains in the Senate, will give the party full control of the government in all its branches once more, enabling that party to perfect its resumption, emancipation, and other important national projects, and to establish the Union upon a foundation of liberty and financial solidity, against which the gates of hell cannot prevail.

Letter from Hon. C. B. Buckman.

Mr. W. W. HARTLEY, Dear Sir:—Fearing I may not be able to visit your town or vicinity during this campaign, I would like to say a few words to your people through the columns of your paper.

Accepting the nomination to the representative of the Republican party in this district, and realizing that one of the worst features our legislative candidates have had to contend against in the past has been that of sectional interests, I desire to say to your people this district is a resident of Morrison county, if elected, the height of my ambition shall be to represent this district as a constituency, regardless of location. I believe not only in majority but in minority representation; not in party but in principle. I would ask your people for fair investigation of my past and present standing, and will promise them that the interests of all in my hands they shall not be neglected. My profession is that of a farmer, and I glory in it. I am a Republican, as I always have been, and to-day am proud as ever of the party. The prosperity we now enjoy is certainly the result of Republican legislation. The Stars and stripes, the pride of our country, floats over and is acknowledged by the people of every nation to be the emblem of the free and prosperous. From the time of our honored Washington to the days of the martyred Lincoln, our people have been true to the sacred trust. Though the stars and bars were run up and backed by the bayonet of secession, yet from out of that chaos our victorious army marches, and to-day we stand a Nation, a Republic not only in name but in reality.

Hoping I can visit your town before the election, I remain your obedient servant,

C. B. BUCKMAN.

The State Text Books.

Pub. Tribune.

A very able article appeared under the above heading in the Red Wing Advance of the 20th inst., written by our County Superintendent. Mr. Hancock clearly shows that the provisions of this act entitled, "An act to provide uniform and cheap text books for the public schools of Minnesota," belie its title. It does not provide uniform books, nor does it furnish books cheaper than they could be bought elsewhere. The books are not cheap but worthless. A good text book is worth a fair price; a poor one is of no value, but is a nuisance if you are compelled to use it to the exclusion of all others. Take the grammar. No one can deny that it is a mass of ambiguities and inconsistencies. This book contains some things that are true and some that are new, but the trouble is, what is true is not new, and what is new is not true. Let me give a few examples; on page 100 and 101 we find "A verb in the infinitive may also be used to limit the meaning of some other word."

1 Or a noun; as, It is my DUTY to go, 2 of a pronoun; as, For me to go would be wrong. 3 of an adjective; as, It is HARD to go. How many teachers in this state agree with Quackenbos in saying that "to go" in these sentences modifies respectively duty, me and hard? On page 105 we find "Do not confound the participle in ing with a participial noun of the same form.' This is precisely what he himself does. These are but instances of defects in the book. If Mr. Merrill offered to furnish Quackenbos Grammar gratis to all schools for 15 years on condition that these books were to be used to the exlusion of all others, the people could not afford to accept the offer.

Similar objections could be presented against the other books of the series with the exception of the Readers; these are in many respects very good. (See State Supt. Bust's Report for 1877). A. E. ENGSTROM,

Another Discovery.

Prof. Swift, Astronomer of the Warner Observatory, at Rochester, N. Y., discovered another large comet on the evening of October 10th. The fact was noted in the associated press dispatches, but some important and interesting details which could not be telegraphed are herewith given. The new celestial visitor is in the Constellation of Pegasus, right ascension 21 hours, 30 minutes, declination North 17 degrees, 30 minutes. Its rate of motion is quite slow, being in a Northwesterly direction, so that it is approaching the sun. It has a very strong condensation on one side of the centre, in addition to a star-like nucleus, which indicates that it is throwing off an extended tail. From the fact of its extraordinary size, we are warranted in presuming that it will be very brilliant, and the additional fact that it is coming directly toward the earth, gives good promise that it will be one of the most remarkable comets of the present century. This is the fifth comet which Prof. Swift has discovered, and the increased facilities which Mr. H. Warner, the popular and wealthy medicine man, has given him, by erecting a magnificent Observatory for his benefit, promise much more for the future. There is a possibility that further developments may prove this to be the great comet of 1812, which is being constantly expected, in which event astronomers will have an unusual opportunity to test the spectroscope for the first time upon those eccentric bodies, and ascertain certainly what they are.

A FIRE.

The House of Chris Sorenson Destroyed. Another to be Built for him by our Liberal Hearted Citizens.

A fire took place on the corner of Third and Laurel streets on Friday afternoon which resulted in the total destruction of the residence of Chris Sorenson, a laborer at the saw mills of Davis & Co., together with his winter supply of vegetables in the cellar and a lot of clothing, bedding and some furniture in the upper story, where the fire originated, that could not be reached. Total loss about $600. The citizens present worked nobly in saving the furniture, etc., that could be reached and not only cleaned everything even to the hot stove, out of the first story but removed many of the doors and windows and totually tore down and removed entire, a wing on the south side, the roof of which had taken fire before they got it down and dragged it away.

Mr. Sorenson, being a poor man with a large family, was left entirely destitute and would have been obliged with his wife and little ones to meet the chilling blasts of the coming winter houseless and penniless, had not the customary liberality of our citizens manifested itself once more, which it did in good earnest. A subscription paper was immediately drawn up and hastily circulated about the town to which every one that could be seen, subscribed liberally and almost before the last timbers had fallen and while the dying embers of his once cosy home were still smouldering and blazing in the cellar, the committee had succeeded in raising $454.20, a sum sufficient to build him another house and make him quite comfortable again. It is the purpose of the committee, we believe, as soon as the collections are completed upon the list to call a meeting of the donors and have a committee appointed who shall contract the erection of a house, after a plan to be submitted to Mr. Sorenson and when completed, make and report a detailed statement of the entire expense with the name and amount given by each subscriber and have the report published in order that each and every one may know who gave what was given, and what became of it.

Resolutions of Respect and Condolence.

WHEREAS: The dispensation of a higher power, and over-ruling providence has called from Aurora Lodge one of its most worthy members, to rest from his labors in this world, and to share in the glories of the future: Therefore be it

Resolved: That in the decease of our beloved Past Master and worthy brother, Mr. Henry Dressen, we have lost a sympathizing friend, and the lodge a useful and active member:

Resolved: That this Lodge tender to the afflicted family of our late friend and brother the consolation of its profound sympathy for their great loss and affliction, and that they alone are not the losers by his sudden taking off:

Resolved: That we, as brothers, recognizing the faithfulness of death, and the hopefulness of life beyond the grave, would direct the vision of those who weep and mourn over a not definite separation, to that temple not made with hands, planned and drawn on nature's tressle board by the Great Architect of the Universe, were all sorrow is submerged in the joys of a perfect reunion.

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Mrs. Dressen, wife of our late brother, and that the said resolutions be published in the Brainerd TRIBUNE.

Dated September, A. D. 1880.

Who now boasts that he voted for Breckenridge in 1860?
Who now boasts that he voted for Valandigham in 1863?
Who now boasts that he voted against Abraham Lincoln in 1864?
Who now boasts that he never voted a Union ticket during the war?
Who now boasts that he never voted a dollar or a man to sustain the government during the war?
Who now boasts that he never was a Unionadder?
Who now boasts that he gave no aid to the government in subduing the South?
Who now boasts that he was a prisoner in "Lincoln's bastiles"?
Who now boasts that he opposed emancipation?
Who now boasts that he opposed all the constitutional amendments?
Who now boasts that he sustained Andrew Johnson's policy?

H. Dana, as his great-grandfather. Mr. Longfellow, who is a present enjoying good health, has since returned to his charming old Colonial mansion at Cambridge.

THE sky at night during this month is very beautiful. The planets appear very large. Jupiter is near to the earth, and will not appear so large again during one decade. He is almost at his nearest point to our world. The sable astronomers of the Providence Journal mentions Western shows, malaria and large meteors as incidents that may have something to do with the nearness of Jupiter to the earth and the sun. Saturn, too, is comparatively near the earth, but his brightness is not so conspicuous as it would be if Jupiter were not his great rival. Both planets are moving south. Meteors and Northern Lights may now be looked for.

St. Paul was the scene of a sad domestic tradgedy between 12 and 1 o'clock Sunday morning the 7th. The principal actor in the tragedy was James Lowrie, a married man and the father of three children, aged 9 and 5 years, and an infant 9 months old. The family lived in a small house in the North western portion of the city. Lowrie was a carpenter, but was unemployed owing to his affection of the head rendering him at times temporarily insane. Saturday night, after retiring at about 10 o'clock, he complained of pain in the head, and at about 12 o'clock jumped from his bed, and notwithstanding the efforts of Mrs. Lowrie, took a seven shooting revolver from his coat pocket, and placed it to his temple. Mrs. Lowrie, upon discovering what which the pistol was discharged, the ball entering Mrs. Lowrie's head just above the right eye. Lowrie then tore himself away from his wife and entering an adjoining room placed the muzzle of the pistol against the back of his head and discharged it, sending the ball crashing through his brain, and causing almost instant death. Mrs. Lowrie's wound though serious is not thought to be fatal. The coroner's verdict in the case of Lowrie resulted in a finding of death by his own hands while laboring under temporary mental aberration.

Lost in Lake Michigan.

Telegrams of Monday and Tuesday confirm the fears expressed in the Sunday reports that the Lake Michigan steamer Alpena was lost with Goodrich line, Chicago, last Saturday, and all on board lost. The Alpena left Grand Haven Friday night, and was wrecked about ten miles off Kenosha Saturday. During monday portions of a wreck drifted ashore at Stoney Creek, which consisted principally of a part of the deck of the Alpena. The Alpena measured 664 tons and rated a 2. She was commanded by Capt. Nielsen. Wagner, first officer J. H. Kelly, engineer, Robert Patton, clerk, Arthur E. Haynes, steward, William Shepherd. She carried a crew of about thirty, all told, and had on trip from thirty to forty passengers, among whom, so far as known, were W. S. Benham, Ed. Herald and wife, H. Crossley and wife, F. Curtis and Capt. H. V. Bailey, of Grand Haven; Mrs. Bradley and two daughters, Santa Fe, N. M.; Mrs. S. B. Cole, of Hillside, sister of F. H. Holbrook, Minneapolis agent of the Goodrich line; H. T. Locker, agent of Hill Bros., New York; Rev. Harrell Hart and wife, White Pigeon, Mich.; Mr. Richmond, agent of glass works, Syracuse N. Y., John J. Bowers, ex-steward of the Alpena; Jacob Overson, wife and three children, Chicago; Maggie Hook, stewardess of the Alpena; Mrs. H. A. McGregory, St. Joseph, Mich.; a man with three children, name not known; E. C. Eustorer, Fred Sparth and G. Hollinger, of Grand Rapids, and C. Landrith of Muskegon; L. D. Peyton, New York, L. St. Clair, Chicago; W. Fetilbone, Chicago; and a few by the name of Mackay, a scrap iron buyer, of Chicago. The Mrs. Bradley and two daughters mentioned above were the wife and daughters of Newton Bradley, an old and well-known and highly respected citizen of St. Paul, who removed to New Mexico some three years ago. A Chicago telegram of Tuesday, the 19, says of the wreck: The excitement and suspense which has been hourly increasing for three days, respecting the fate of the Alpena, changed to profound sorrow and anguish. A part of those whose friends were known or believed to be on board, when the news of to-day not only failed to bring word of her safety but announced the certainty of her destruction. The officers of the Goodrich company have been filled with mournful and inquiring faces, but no cheering word could be given out, and as the last hope faded there was a look of despair and despondency depicted upon each countenance. It is not deemed possible that any person could have been saved from the wreck. If a raft had been built it could not have held together five minutes amid the fierce beating of the waves and it is probable nobody will ever tell the story of the wreck of the Alpena.

Loss of the Alpina.

Telegrams of the 20th from Lake Michigan ports brought further confirmation of the loss of the steamer Alpena. Additional wreck data from Holland, Michigan, says a messenger just returned from the harbor, having left the scene at 10 o'clock this morning, that small portions of the wreck keep coming in, but as yet no more bodies have come ashore. The steamer Alpena left Grand Haven Friday night, which would drive the bodies further north, if the wreck occurred near here, as supposed. A boat of the Alpena has been found near Saugatuck, which is part of the wreck as well as a boy's body. The coroner's jury found that a boy has been washed on shore but not identified. The body of a female found dead in her chair one day last week. She had been in her usual health up to the time of her death.

He complained of pain in the region of his head and took morphine for relief, but whether the pain in his head or the overdose of morphine caused his death is not definitely known. He had practiced medicine in Caledonia for thirteen years, and had built up a lucrative practice. He leaves a wife and nine children to mourn his sudden death.

Lamberton (Redwood county) Commercial, October 7: A horse belonging to Mr. Berry was attacked by two unknown men near Troy on Monday afternoon. He says that Monday night he was awakened by what coming this way, and when near some treatis work the man jumped out from behind a tree and struck him with a club, saying a word, fired at him with a revolver. The ball, which was of large caliber, took effect in his left hand, passing completely through the fourth finger.

Patrick Riley and a younger brother got into a fight in Shakopee the other day and quarrelled. Afterwards they went to the railroad shops and demanded admittance. Patrick's brother refused them entrance at the roof, fell off and was killed. The younger brother, beaten to pulp, apparently, in a fight which he had provoked, died on account of the affair, and it is doubtful if he will ever be able. Patrick leaves a wife and family. The younger brother has been married about six weeks.

Last week John Swanson, of Wonxington, was driving a team of horses attached to a machine at his place threshing; the day was very windy and fire escaped from the engine and in a short time everything that could be; washed by the fire was consumed. Mr. Swanson lost between five and six hundred bushels of wheat; five hundred bushels of oats; fifty-five bushels of barley; twenty tons of hay; three tons of hay; lots of harness; and about a big stable fifty-feet long. Besides some ground feed. The loss is estimated at $1,400.

A Caledonia Journal, Oct. 13: Mr. Otis Ellis, of Mabel, came down to Caledonia last Saturday to see the convention. About 10 o'clock he met Mr. Hamilton Mack, stating that his three year old daughter, Hattie Grace, had been run over by a runaway team, and was fearfully hurt. At fifteen minutes to six Mr. Ellis in company with Dr. Wright arrived at Mr. Mack's residence at twenty-five minutes after seven—driving twenty miles in just 100 minutes. On their arrival they found Hattie dead. The poor little Cora had taken her flight to a better world.

Rochester Record and Union, Oct. 8: The coroner's inquest which was held last Friday morning to inquire into the circumstances of the death of Mrs. Wright, developed the facts as stated in our columns last week. Wright was a young man, aged 23 years, and married Miss Mary Ann Hunt, a resident, and was subject to fits. He had gone from the house a distance of forty rods or more, and was found dead, lying face down in the grass and brush, in which condition his body was discovered some two weeks after the death. There was no evidence of violence being used. The coroner's jury found a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

At the sale of a herd of a noble stock owner in England, two young bull calves of the purest-bred short-horn blood in the kingdom, Bates, and which a pedigree back to the fifteenth generation, were sold to the owner of a California ranch for 800 guineas apiece. The owner had his early purchases conveyed to town in a special wagon, and then shipped them on board a high priced premium before starting them on their long westward journey.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Fire and Loss of Life in a Shoddy Factory in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 20.—A shocking calamity in connection with a fire occurred shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. The fire broke out in the basement of Bee, Hall & Co.'s shoddy factory, Second street and Broadway, so as to cut off escape from the third story, on which a number of women were

YANKEE CHARON.

BY PAUT. M. RUSSELL.

In days of old, as we are told,
Beside the Stygian tide
Old Charon dwelt, with whom all dealt
Who sought the other side.

And for his task, he each would ask
A obole in return.
Every spot who lacked a cent
He left the cent to burn.

And motley crowds, in funeral shrouds,
Awaited on the shore,
And there would stay, who could not pay
A hundred years or more.

Among the throng that came along,
New England sent a mate,
'Twas Eli Brown, of Boston town,
Who had overstepped life's span.

His kicked the tin he let him in
To the Elysian grove;
An oath he swore that he no more
By Styx's tide would rove.

He picked up sticks and 'gan to fix
A raft on which to float;
An Irishman who'd near at hand
He hired to build the boat.

Says Pat, "To gob, a payin' job
Would be for you and me
With fine deeds that'll to clouds, and rise
And row there over free."

Then Eli said, "'Twas in my head
That very thing to do.
Now, launch her in, and we'll begin
To run our vessel, too.

"By darn," said he, "just wait and see
How we will run this ark.
Pat, holler loud and get a crowd,
Get every soul there is."

Pat "hollered" loud and got a crowd
Upon the new-made boat,
Then Eli said "For every head
I'll take a cent note."

When Charon saw the nat'ral law
Transgressed by Eli Brown,
His scratched his head and sadly said,
"My price of fare goes down."

They traveled o'er from shore to shore—
Three rival boats—all day.
Brown hired a last each time he rowed
Because he asked no pay.

When not one more was on the shore
The crew their cars laid down,
Then Charon spoke and silence broke
Unto rich Eli Brown:

"What god art thou who guid'st that prow
What god, by Jove sent down?"
Then Eli Brown, with temper frown,
"By Jove, I'm Eli Brown."

They row the Styx; the price they fix
As they for each was rowed.
Pat's at the cars, while Charon snores,
And Brown takes in the pay.

MY JEALOUS NEIGHBOR.

BY UNCLE LUTE.

"Lay by your pen; kind friend, and speak to me. Counsel me; condemn me; pity me. Anything, anything to divert my mind, for my heart is breaking."

Those words, half a wail and half a whisper, fell suddenly upon my ear with such a pathetic appeal for sympathy that, had a knife pierced my heart, its keenness of pain could not have been greater. My pen dropped from my fingers, and I felt, in that moment of sudden transition from mystic realms of dream land, that the sorrow of some soul had been wrapped around my heart like a mantle thrown around my person.

Turning around there stood, leaning yearningly toward me, the charming young wife of my esteemed friend and neighbor, Charley ——. She had run across their garden into my sanctum, unexpected and unannounced. We had long been intimate neighbors, so this liberty did not surprise; but her strange, heart-rending appeal startled me.

"Minnie," I said—she was always Minnie to me—calmly and kindly as my surprised state would admit, "what is it? Tell me your trouble, my child, and whatever I can do you know I am yours to command."

At the sound of my quiet, studied voice, her wild, flashing eyes filled with great yearning tears, and hiding her face in her hands she sank into a chair and sobbed like a child. And a child she seemed to me, though those youthful autumns had graced her with their maturing charms. In view of my years, which so greatly contrasted with hers and her husband's, they had looked upon me, or at least she had, more in the light of a fond father than a stranger with mortal desires and passions. But, as God is my witness, I never looked upon this bewilderingly beautiful child-girl-wife with other sensations than those experienced in beholding a beautiful flower or other attractive object, and I was ever a passionate admirer of all beauty in nature, and felt an awe and adoration for the same, whether in the plant or animal kingdom. True, I was not unmindful of those superior attractions peculiarly applicable to her by virtue of her sex, when contrasted with other objects worthy of admiration, else I would not have been a manly man. But to her sorrowful, my loyalty to her state was as chaste as my admiration for the flowers blooming in her garden. She was always free, joyous and happy; mingling her silvery voice with the songs of the early birds in the morning; and her musical laugh borne on the calm of the evening breeze to my tired mind was a cheering remembrance of frequent occurrence. She was a fresh bouquet and tempting dish found its way on my table, placed there by her own little hands, prompted, I knew, by the purest and kindest impulses of her womanly heart. Sometimes she and her husband would drop in for a neighborly chat, often begging their kind uncle, as they were wont to address me, to read to them from my sketchiness of lore; and oft the wife would draw me away from myself in a train of conversation which only her intelligent tact and appreciative attention could do. All this freedom of neighborly intercourse had broken down all conventional barriers, so much so that artless Minnie often ran in alone with some question to ask, a bit of news to tell, or as before stated some delicacy for the palate, or blossom for the eye to feast on. In turn, I lent her books, ran in with a fresh newspaper, or perhaps a new poem clipped from some publication, and conferred each with the other upon its merits and demerits—youth, beauty and freshness, and age and sage experience balancing the scales of our judgment; but never before had neighbor Charley's wife Minnie appealed to me for sympathy. Many, many a care, many a sadness had thought had her opportune presence and cheering smiles dispelled from my life's experience; and now the little atmosphere of sunlight of mirth and loveliness was transformed to a sorrow-stricken woman appealing to me for a solace in sooth, as though I brought to heal the pain of her newly-heart throb. But what was the cause of her trouble? I will tell you, reader, and how near I innocently and unconsciously came to wrecking my young neighbor's happiness for life. Listen, I said again, "pray do not cry. Tell me, my dear neighbor, word for word, if you wish me to know all your troubles." And I drew near her, and, unreservedly as a father might fold his infant child in his arms, gently drew my arms about her sinking, trembling form.

"Oh, sir!" she exclaimed, drawing back, "you—you must not do so, you—forgive me, kind friend, but—but you have no right to comfort me now. You can no longer be a father to me. You must go away from here immediately. I—I am ruined, lost, undone!" She hesitated, looking at me through her tears, her hands tightly clasped now beneath her turbulently-heaving breast in an attitude of uncertain despair.

"Why, Minnie—why, you greatly puzzle me," I stammered. "Tell me at once what has happened? Why must I go away?"

"Because, Charley—he's terribly angry—calls you awful names, and says he'll have you arrested, and charges me with—with being unfaithful. Oh, such a tirade of inconsistencies I never before heard uttered," she breathlessly answered.

"Where is Charley?" I asked.

"Gone to get a warrant for you. Oh, sir, please make haste. Only think of the scandal! He is so angry he will not reason. He—he—" She broke down then with hysterical cryings. I here made known to her with more sternness than I felt that she must calm herself and explain at once, as it was all a mystery to me, and I could not judge how to act. I gave her to understand, however, that I certainly should not run away—that if I was deserving of being arrested the officer would find me ready to do his bidding. This had the effect to calm her somewhat, and in the most anxious fear lest some uniformed servant of the law should really burst in upon us, and thus bring to the world a plain, clinging alternately to me, and running to the window, I finally obtained an intelligent understanding of the case. "You know, sir, the other morning when I ran in with the roses, the first an bloom, and then all that day evening before I saw they were opening, and so had arisen unusually early that morning because I knew they would be open and fresh; and—and other things besides I said which I do not now remember. But—but, sir, you know I meant no harm, do you not? Oh, say you know it, my dear friend—say you know it!" Here she lost her mental and child-wife continued her explanation.

I hastened to assure her that she said nothing censurable in the meaning of the question; that in all our friendly intercourse she had ever conducted herself with the grace and purity of a child, and that any one who thought differently was a consummate brute, any one who declared to the contrary was an infamous liar.

"O, don't say that," she pleaded, "for that means Charley."

"But I never take it back," I replied, "Charley or no Charley."

"He was just entering his carriage at our door, my neighbor continued, "and could easily hear all that was said, and, as he drove out of the yard, could see us."

I remembered that such was the fact, and nodded assent. "And, as I gave the rose to you, I said some complimentary words relative to the merits of your last-published article, you remember; spoke of the thrilling pleasure I perusal of it gave me, and how plain and easy it seemed to make life's duties; that I could almost see angels hovering in my pathway now that your splendid words had removed all fears of your frail friend, and he happened to hear it. He moved all the thorns from the roses which I brought you, and—and one had pierced my thumb, which you kindly removed."

"I think those were your very words; at least their import. And your rough physician praised your bravery in bearing the pain; eh, my child," I replied, my eyes fastening on the versicle, and expressionless of her fair, care-clouded face, bespeaking such beauty germs of character.

"Oh, and sir—just as Charley drove by, do—do you—do you know what you did to—to me?" she asked, with a seeming, anxious simplicity of an innocent child.

"I took the bouquet, Minnie, did I not, and the sanded you for it?"

"Oh, yes, but—but something else you did, sir. I thought nothing of it then, nor do I now, only since you have spoken of it only Charley saw it, and—and he is irrecoverably angry, I fear."

"Angry at me, Minnie, for some offense of mine when you gave me the rosebud?" I queried.

"Angry at you for that, and angry at me for not resenting it, and for what he is pleased to term my seductive, siren eyes and language.' He says you are—'I'll not tell you what he said, but he—blames me the most. Oh, what will we do? I am sure we are innocent of any ill intent, sir."

I assured her I could remember nothing which should have given offense—that I was sure there had been no acts or words between us of a censurable nature; and mentally I mused that the contemptible jealousy that could so blindly misunderstand and wound the most exalted sentiments of wives.

"I see you do not remember," she said, "so I will tell you." And the first touch of manliness of modesty that gave a tinge of shame that I ever saw mantle that sweet young face o'erspread it then, as she took the book and opened some page of firm faith in my honor, and of a noble friendship—a friendship of the mind and soul—so far divorced from all disloyalty to legal ties of earthly relationships that I vowed then and there with all my heart a reverence for such beauty and purity of character, and bemoaned the fact that it was ever the fate of such to become bound to mortals whose affections are only prompted by desire, and who look upon every manifest emotion of the heart through glasses blurred by the smoke of lust.

"When I reached the roses up to you," she continued, "and made which Charley on his mantle, turned my little siren speech,' you, in taking them, some way clasped both of my hands together in yours with the roses in your own, exclaimed, 'Thanks, dear Minnie; Heaven blesses women of your kindly nature and purity of purpose.' You pressed my hands to your lips and had Charley seen the tears which fell from your eyes upon my hands, I—I know, sir, he could not have misjudged the emotion which prompted your action. So saying she threw her head down on the table and sobbed afresh, begging of me to see her husband and compel him to listen to an explanation, as he was so angry he would not heed a word she said.

"Then this is what is breaking your heart, is it, child?" I asked, placing my hand upon her quivering form, and thoughtfully stroking her luxuriant, wavy tresses, falling about her snowy, dimpled shoulders and restfully floating a bewildering veil o'er her turbulent bosom.

"Narrow minds and bigoted souls of licentious tendencies and pious spinsters of forced celibacy, and young husbands with false and fanciful ideas of manliness and polarity, and old maid croakers with no elements left save their shriveling forms publishing their lost manhood, may scoff at the idea of an exalted affection between the sexes, bound by no ties save their God-given right of existing in the same world, my friend," I said; "may scoff, if they will, at the idea of an unearthly affection of beauty, bearing the unmistakable imprint of divine fiat; but whatever interference such may have with the cares, wants and acts of mine I care not, and frankly confess to you that, in this supreme moment of great indignation and conflicting emotions, when grave questions throng and knock at the window of the mind and reverberate in the very tenement of the heart strings, I experience a new thrill of supreme admiration for my young friend, humbled before me in that she has the glory of her endowments, and know and feel that my life will be brighter and better for it; and above all I realize that she is the true wife of my respected neighbor, and that I experience no feelings of disloyalty to the sacred relations existing between you—husband and wife; my only regret being that he in so little realizes what a sterling prize he possesses; that he seems to know not, as I know, that, were she encompassed by dangerous associations, the impregnable shield of her virtue would be her in thought and deed." All this and very much more I said to her, with my hands clasping hers, and she, now, broken sobs, defending her husband if I chanced to cast a reflection upon him. For this I admired her, as I also sought to stimulate her to a realizing sense of her position in the matter, preparing her for a defensive stand against his accusations.

"Now, Minnie," I concluded, "go and bring your husband to me here with us, you the crushed flower, and I the useless tare in a once-blooming garden of love and beauty."

She arose as I ceased speaking, calm now, but very pale, and her eyes dim with weeping.

"Yes, kind sir," she said, "I will bring Charley if—if he will come, and all will be made right, you know."

"It's all right, my darling wife," exclaimed a manly voice, and her husband rushed in our presence, and, his arm around the yielding form of his now-joyous and radiant wife, and extending his other hand to me, he begged my pardon and hers, and reproached himself with all the significant epithets he could command. "I have heard all, dear all your interview," he continued. "I followed you, Minnie, when you first ran in here instead of going after a warrant, and have been here at the door. I was ashamed of it; but oh! I am twice glad now, for I have seen my folly, and have your pardon, my darling."

I assured him he had my forgiveness. "This," said I, "has been an eventful day to you, my neighbor—the grandest day of your life; for it has taught you the sterling worth and character of her who, though your own, you knew so little of. It has taught you, neighbor Charley, that you are fortunately possessor of the very best gift man can beseech to man—a beautiful, philanthropic, pure and tenderly faithful wife."

"I know it, much I know it," he exclaimed; "God bless you! You and she have taught it to me in the last half hour. And can you forgive me, darling?" she asked of Minnie.

"Yes, yes, Charley; it's all forgiven. I am, I'm happy again. Oh, my husband, you do not know!" Then, heaving a long sigh, as of a great relief, with her hand upon her heart, she added, "There is no more pain here now." And sweetly joyous beamed her eyes, through her tears, upon me as she beamed with a wife's love-light for him, and a pure woman's friendship-light for me.

After they left me, in each other's arms, with my blessing, Charley ran back from the door, and, coming back to again grasp my hand; and Minnie, too, half beside herself with childish happiness, laughingly ran back after him.

Thus this happy couple, with the warm, tender joy of a reunited affection, and the sunlight of their own home, leaving the loneliness of their absence with me.

This kind reader, was the trouble I and my neighbor's wife had innocently caused; and, while the affair taught me a greater discretion in the future, I think Charley never again became jealous of any one's appreciation of his splendid wife.—Chicago Ledger.

Curious Composition.

The following rather curious piece of composition was recently placed upon the blackboard at a teachers' institute in Vermont, and a prize of a "Webster's Dictionary" offered to any person who could read it and pronounce every word correctly. The book was the lowest number of mistakes in pronunciation made: "A sacrilegious man, full of remorse, fled from Iconoclite, having exhausted his finances, in order to make good the deficit, resolved to ally himself with some wealthy old chameleon, and securing a suit of rooms as a principal hotel, he engaged the head-waiter as his confidant. He then dispatched a letter of the most unexceptional caligraphy extant, inviting the young lady to a matinee. She received it at the door, examined and pronounced it genuine, and refused to consider herself sacrificable to his desires, and sent a polite note of refusal, on receiving which he purchased arsenic and a bowie-knife, said that he would not now forge fetters hymencal with the fair one, went to the nearest apothecary, severed his jugular vein, and discharged the contents of his carbine into his abdomen. The jury before were removed by the Coroner." The mistaken in pronunciation were made on the following words: Sacrilegious, fled, Iconoclite, exhausted, finances, deficit, comely, lenient, docile, Malay, calliope, chameleon, suit, cosdjutor, caligraphy, matinee, sacrificable, forge, hymencal, isolated, jugular and debris.

The Dinner Hour.

Edward King says in one of his recent letters that theater-going is becoming less and less popular, and that the modern dinner hour, which has pushed its way along from hour to hour, coming now at 7 or 8 p. m., is the frequent attendance at the theater, except when a first night makes society sacrifice its dinners to see and be seen there. As he received dinner hour grows later with every generation, it would be interesting to know when this tendency would end. Perhaps it will take a pill of concentrated food instead of dinner in order to leave time for the theater, opera, cenung and a half ago in France the Grand Monarch himself dined at 2 p. m., and Queen Elizabeth dined the century before even earlier. Since then dinner has passed through each hour, crossing 4 and 5 p. m. in the last century. It has now reached 8 p. m. Probably the twentieth century will take its pill at midnight.

DRUNKENNESS is said to be greatly on the increase in London. For ten years ago the persons arrested for drunkenness or for being drunk and disorderly numbered 21,625, whereas last year they had increased to 32,202, or by nearly 57 per cent.

How Soon We Are Forgot.

How soon human glory becomes only a fleeting shadow! But so goes the world. It is a story verified by many generations. A Chinaman, a student of Confucius, came took it into his head to travel in Europe. He arrived at Amsterdam, and at a bookseller's shop he asked for the works of the immortal Hirsichon. The bookseller assured him that he had never heard of the author. "What!" said the Chinaman, "have you never heard of that immortal you, that light of the eyes, that favorite of Kings, that rose of perfection? I suppose that you know nothing of the immortal Fibihihi, second cousin to the moon?" "Nothing at all," said the bookseller. It is an obvious moral. The world is the bookseller. Alas, the vanity of human fame! "How few," says Jeremy Taylor, "have heard of the name of Vespasiatino Bigliani. He imagined that there was no man in the world that knew him not; how many men can now tell me that he was the King of Narsinga?"

It pays to follow good advice. Mr. C. W. Braun, in Eureka, Ark., sends the following item: I had been a sufferer with Dyspepsia for the past three years. Advised by a friend I used Hanburg Drops. At once, after the first dose, I experienced relief. I continued its use for one month and found myself completely cured. There are so many suffering with indigestion that my advice to such would be;—Do as I have done—take the Hamburg Drops and get cured.

The Bloom of Age.

A woman never grows old. Years may pass over her head, but, if benevolence and virtue dwell in her heart, she is as cheerful as when the spring of life first opened to her view. When we look upon a good woman we never think of her age; she looks as charming as when the rose of youth first bloomed on her cheek. That rose has not faded yet; it will never fade. In her neighborhood she is the friend and benefactor. She does not love and respect the woman who has passed her days in acts of kindness and mercy—who has been the friend of man and God—whose whole life has been a scene of kindness and love and a devotion to truth? Such a being, such a woman cannot grow old. She will always be fresh and buoyant in spirits, and active in humble deeds of charity and benevolence. If the young lady desires to retain the bloom and beauty of youth, let her not yield to the spirit of fashion and folly; let her love truth and virtue; and to the close of life she will retain those feelings which now make life appear a garden of sweets—ever fresh and ever new.

KIDNEY WORT

PERMANENTLY CURES KIDNEY DISEASES, LIVER COMPLAINTS, Constipation and Piles.

IT HAS WONDERFUL POWER. WHY?

BECAUSE IT ACTS ON THE BOWELS AND KIDNEYS AT THE SAME TIME.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develop in Kidney and Urinary diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Indigestion, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Female disorders.

KIDNEY-WORT is a dry vegetable compound and can be sent by mail prepaid.

One package will make six quarts of medicine.

TRY IT NOW!

It is a certain remedy for all the above named diseases, and has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Thousands testify to this. Why suffer pain, disease and death when you can obtain a remedy that will cure you? Why trifle with pills, syrups and other nostrums when KIDNEY-WORT will make you well? Why endure torture from Piles when KIDNEY-WORT will cure you? Why be discouraged with Backache, Kidney Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Headache, Loss of Appetite, when KIDNEY-WORT will restore you to perfect health? Why suffer from Rheumatism when KIDNEY-WORT has never failed to relieve? Why suffer from Malaria when KIDNEY-WORT will expel it from the system? Why suffer from Kidney Complaints in any form when KIDNEY-WORT will surely cure you? Why suffer from Bright's Disease when KIDNEY-WORT has cured hundreds of the worst cases? Why suffer from Diabetes when KIDNEY-WORT has never failed? Why suffer from Female Weakness when KIDNEY-WORT will cure you? Why suffer from Piles when KIDNEY-WORT will cure you? Major A. N. Seip and Hon. Thos. H. Presnell, of Duluth, paid Brainerd a flying visit this week. They report Duluth as having been afflicted (?) with a first-class business boom this season, and the town developing rapidly. Our sister city has our sincere congratulations.

Dr. N. H. Conger, our popular surgeon dentist, had a very narrow escape this week from being charged with the care of a pair of twins—as Maj. Holden would say—he came within one of it. Its a daughter, the first-born, and with its mother is doing finely, and the doctor can just pull a tooth and never feel it. Shake doctor.

The deeds were executed this week transferring the residence erected by David E. Slipp, near the Congregational church, and recently sold by him to W. H. Leland, from Mr. Leland to T. C. Bevins, who has returned and taken up his abode in Brainerd again and transferring the residence erected by B. F. Hartley to Mr. Leland, who has taken up his abode in his new domicile.

Having taken the agency for the celebrated Estey Cottage organ, I shall be pleased to take your order on either the all cash or installment plan. The fame of the Estey is world wide, and in paying your money for an instrument it is important that you know you are getting what you pay for One of these organs can be seen by calling at my residence. Two Northern Pacific time schedules in one week are about all the force of this office is capable of doing justice to, and the TRIBUNE is once more delayed. We regret being obliged to disappoint our readers in this way, but as we cannot either afford to refuse job printing when it comes nor employ a sufficient force to overcome the difficulty, keeping half of it idle in the interim, we see no way of avoiding it and so ask our readers to bear with us.

We are in receipt of a sample of Amber cane syrup from the farm of Mr. H. F. Phelps, of Crow Wing. Mr. Phelps made 500 gallons this season, and would have made a great deal more had he not lost about ten acres of cane an account of delay in getting his mill in time to work it up before frost. He will be better prepared next season—will have a mill and house for working in on hand and proposes going in more extensively than ever next spring, and he will succeed.

W. W. Hartley, general sewing machine agent, has received the agency for the celebrated New Light Running Domestic Sewing Machine and now has a stock of the machines on hand. Call and see them whether you want to purchase or not. They are of the very best workmanship are highly ornamented and are not excelled in the world for beauty of finish or utility. Any one wanting an ornamental piece of furniture and a first-class sewing machine combined will find it at the Postoffice.

Maj. Holden still continues his work of temperance reform, and, though the weather has been quite unfavorable, has had good audiences at each meeting the past week. Yesterday, (Sunday) evening he effected the organization of a Holden Reform Club, with 172 members, with the following officers: W. W. Hartley, president; Mrs. Wm. Ferris, Mrs. Edward S. Farnsworth, vice presidents. John C. Congdon, secretary; Mrs. W. H. Leland, treasurer, and Rev. A. Beard, chaplin. A committee on ways and means consisting of five members was another on entertainment, consisting of nine, were appointed, the names upon which we have not at hand. A large number were added to the list at the close of the meeting, among whom were a large number of moderate drinkers. The major is doing a good work, and still declares his determination to remain until he has seen the 500.

From the inquiries frequently made at this office regarding the names of streets in Brainerd, it would appear that very few understand the names of even our most prominent streets, or the system by which they are named and numbered. Laurel, running east and west, excepting Front and Main streets, are named alphabetically, and each bears the name of some species of tree or vegetation, commencing with the alphabet at the north boundary of the town. The first street in this list appearing on the present plat is Grove, and the others thence south are Holly, Ivy, Juniper and Kingwood. Reading skipping Main street on the north side of the track and Front street on the south side the alphabetical list is resumed with Laurel, Maple, Norwood, Oak, Pine, Quince, Rose, Sumac, Tamarac, Vine and Willow, the latter constituting the south boundry of the town a short distance south of Boom Lake. The streets running north and south are numbered, beginning with number one at the river. Eighth street is called Broadway and is one hundred feet wide, all other streets are eighty feet wide. All full blocks are three hundred feet square and lots are twenty-five wide by one-hundred and fifty feet deep, excepting in blocks possessing alleys.

With this information any street in the city can be readily located—for instance, to find Quince street, you have only to commence at Laurel street, the first street south of Front and run the alphabet down to find it in five blocks south, and in the same way north to find Ivy, run back two blocks from Kingwood, the first street north of Main street. The other streets are easily numbered. Any letter to the postoffice, for instance is on Sixth street, being five blocks from the river.

A HAPPY SOCIETY NOTE
Peal the Marriage Bells.

A very happy occasion was that of the solmnization of the marriage of Mr. Terrence H. Vane, of Brainerd, and Miss Lizzie Means, daughter of Mr. Daniel Means, of Pittsburg, Pa., which came off at the residence of Newton McFadden, Esq., uncle of the bride, Wednesday evening, Oct. 20th, Mr. Charles Johnson groomsman and Miss Blanche Sleeper bridesmaid. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Hawley, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal church. The bride was given away by her father.

Quite a number of the relatives and immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The ceremony was performed at half past eight o'clock P. M., after which a reception was held, and a bountiful and elaborate supper served. The happy couple, the groom and bride were escorted to the evening train south, by numerous friends. Mr. and Mrs. Vane will spend several days south and east, and on their return their young friends will welcome them with a reception party at the residence of Capt. Sleeper.

The presents were rich and numerous, some of which we noticed. A cake basket of beautiful design by Mr. and Mrs. Sovereign, a valuable clock by Messrs. Dean and Kaley, silver sugar dish and tongs by Mr. and Mrs. Sleeper, butter dish by Miss Blanche Sleeper, pickle castor by Ida Havill, toilet set by Miss J. Davis, set of silver knives and forks by Mr. W. C. Robinson, beautiful silver castor by Messrs. Wadman, Pegg and Johnson, spoon holder by Milton McFadden uncle of the bride, silver butter dish by Mr. and Mrs. McFadden, and a splendid photo album by Miss Minie McFadden.

We, with the friends of Mr. and Mrs Vane, extend our congratulations, and wish them a happy journey through life.

Crow Wing County Ahead.

The best samples of vegetables and grain contributed to the collection of the "Products of the Golden Northwest," on exhibition in the great Northern Pacific agricultural car, now making a tour of the east, were raised on Crow Wing county farms. JAMES B. POWER,

Advertise Brainerd.

We still have on hand a large number of copies of the issue of the TRIBUNE of Sept. 21st, giving an extensive sketch of Brainerd, its past, present and future outlook, business advantages, resources and attractions, constituting a valuable advertisin ment of the town, and of citizens and of the district them liberally North, South, East and West. What Brainerd needs most at present is capital to develop her valuable resources, and this is brought by bringing before capitalists the advantages before the public, and especially to the attention of capital seeking investment. Sar ple copies will be mailed from this office, postage free to any address in the United States or Canada, for five cents each. Leave your addresses and we will mail them for you.

The Best Remedy Known to Man!

Dr. Clark Johnson having associated himself with Mr. Edwin Eastman, an escaped captive, long a resident of the Comanche, the position and ways of the Comanches, is now prepared to lend his aid in the manufacture of the wonderful remedy of that tribe.

The experience of Mr. Eastman being similar to that of Dr. Clark Johnson, the latter gentleman's Co., town, on account of whose sufferings were thrillingly narrated in the TRIBUNE of Sept. 21st, 1878, the facts of which are so widely known as to render a repetition here unnecessary, but the addition of Mr. Eastman's experiences will be given here. They are, however, published in full, in the form of 300 pages, entitled, "Seven and Nine Years among the Comanches and Apaches," to which attention will be made hereafter. Suffice it to say, that for nerves, pure, Mr. Eastman, while a captive, was compelled to gather roots, which were dried, pounded and prepared, by which process the medicine was made. Before leaving the tribe, the secret of the manufacture of the wonderful curative of the medicine in this section, and to inform the public that the remedy is the same now as upon Wakmastkia compelled him to make it.

A Lecture to Young Men

ON THE LOSS OF

MANHOOD

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical Cure of Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Nervousness, Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c. By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M.D., author of the "Green Book," &c.

The World renowned author, in this admirable Lecture clearly proves from his own experience that the humiliating results of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps.
