BRAINERD TRIBUNE.

VOL. IX.—NO. 41. BRAINERD, MINNESOTA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1880. WHOLE NO. 457.

CROW WING COUNTY AHEAD.

The best samples of vegetables and grain contributed to the collection of the "Products of the Golden Northwest," on exhibition in the great Northern Pacific agricultural car, now making a tour of the east, were raised on Crow Wing county farms. JAMES B. POWER,
Land Commissioner N. P. R. R.

Capt. Coleman Macy, for a long time Governor's clerk in St. Paul, died in Hudson, N. Y., last Sunday morning, at thirty-six years of age.

Gov. Williams of Indiana, better known as "Blue Jeans Williams," died at his residence this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock.

A shrewd Yankee has conceived the plan of negotiating with the devil for hell with a view to splitting it up and selling to the inhabitants of the Northwest for winter use. We wish him success.

There were issued at the Brainerd postoffice this week 81 domestic money orders, amounting to $1,292.27 and fees $10.50. and 5 Canadian orders amounting to $125 00 and fees $1.95. Total receipts, $1,429.72.

If "The Gentleman's Wife" will give her name, not for publication, but in confidence, as guarantee of good faith, her letter will be published, otherwise it must go the way of all anonymous communications, to the waste basket, much as we may sympathise with the errand of her note.

The majority in favor of the Text Book Acts, at latest reports is 84 with several counties yet to hear from. The vote being so very close errors and irregularities in the vote and returns will become important and will be closely investigated. For instance, in Brainerd eight votes were returned in favor of the acts which were not so cast, the wording of the ballots not being in compliance with the law.

A change of time goes into effect on the Northern Pacific road to-morrow. Under the new schedule the day mail train will arrive from the south at 12:50 P. M., meeting the train from the east, which arrives seven minutes later. T is change is made to meet the time of the St. P., M. & M. which has recently completed its line into Moorhead and opened competition with the N. P. for the Moorhead and Fargo business. The N. P. trains will hereafter reach Moorhead an hour and a half earlier in the evening than heretofore and depart in the morning one hour later, the time at St. Paul remaining as before, thus shortening the time between St. Paul and Fargo an hour and a half. The change is a very agreeable one to the postoffice officials at this place as it brings both the southern and western mails in together thus very materially reducing the labor of delivering.

The Greatest in America!

The Brainerd Tribune announces that the Lake Superior & Puget Sound Land Company have sold a tract of land known as the Rice Lake mill-site, to Chase, Pillsbury & Co., proprietors of the large saw mill at Gull River. This firm have contracted to complete within a year a saw-mill with a capacity of 100,000 feet a day. The mill will be located not a great distance from the Northern Pacific shops, and the Brainerd Tribune proudly remarks: "This is another step toward the certain future of Brainerd as the greatest lumber manufacturing center in America, and as such will be gladly welcomed by our citizens, the value of whose property in this town is largely enhanced by that transaction. Next." Brainerd will be an important point for the manufacture of lumber, we have no doubt, but as to its being "the greatest lumber manufacturing center in America," if Mr. Hartley will excuse the slang, we will venture the remark that that is "all in his eye."—[Duluth News.

This indicates how much, or rather how little, the News editor knows about Brainerd and its prospects and advantages. Instead of a mill with a capacity of 100,000 feet per day, we are informed, since the publication of the article referred to by the News, that Messrs. Chase, Pillsbury & Co. propose ere ting a mill of 200,000 feet capacity per diem. In addition to this and the two extensive steam saw mills, two planing and shingle mills and sash, door and blind factories, etc., we already have running, night and day, to their utmost capacity, there are several other firms looking over the ground with a view of putting in mills here, and the ground has already been secured near the ferry landing for a mill and lumber yard to be erected the coming summer. The News forgets the immeasurably unimbered territory from the Mississippi to the Yellowstone opened up by the great Northern, Pacific thoroughfare, and being rapidly settled by the immense rush of immigration that must be supplied with lumber from the vast and inexhaustable supply of timber on the upper Mississippi which floats directly to our doors. The other lumber point in the world is supplied with so extensive and promising a market and so great a supply of the raw material. And we repeat, without fear of successful contradiction, that a very few years will see Brainerd the greatest lumber manufacturing center in America. Do you hear, Bro. Woodbridge!

Thanksgiving.

—"To the beautiful order of Thy works seem to conform the order of our lives."

Next Thursday has been commended as a day of general thanksgiving by the President of the United States in accordance with usual custom.

This is one of the elevating adjuncts of an advanced civilization, and has grown into usage among christian people from cherishing a sentiment of gratitude for comforts and blessings bestowed during the year.

The man who can say, "let me ever, midst thy bounties, raise an humble note of thankfulness and praise," and satisfy his conscience by so doing, is a christian man and a good citizen.

There are "pure reflections, caught from heavenly love." If we direct our understandings and make up our judgments upon a plane of absolute abstract idea or notion, we cannot be actuated to any thankfulness for favors or gratitude for blessings showered upon us, our lips will be mute and our souls without song, our blood will flow through chilly veins and no warmth of love animate our frames. This is pure intellect, cold, freezing, icy sense.

Happy climes may favor us; a bounteous harvest welcome us from year to year: wealth may come upon us, and the smile of kind nature ever rest upon our pathway, yet if the heart be not tuned to sentiments of love; if affection be not active and sympathy abundant, man is educated into the insensibility of a brute, and no heavenly anthem reaches his untutored ear.

"A nameless spirit moves in the hearts of men to do Him homage. It is this almost universal consciousness that has given birth to the custom of setting apart one day in each year that a greatful people may give fitting expression to the sentiment of love for that benign Power that holds our destinies "as in the hollow of His hand."

The thankful soul, the sympathetic mind reaches out for proper expression and the imagination pictures various forms with which it can be most fittingly done.

Prayer, humble adoration, kindly acts, active benevolence, charities unselfishly extended, will steal-like balm into the hearts of those using them to celebrate this custom. May "the ethereal spirit that to soft music wakes the chords of feeling," prompt all to remember the poor and unfortunate on this day. To the poor in spirit give consolation; to the needy give food and raiment, and to the stricken and sorrowful breathe words of hope and cheer, that we may say with the poet, and feel what we say:

We thank Thee for limbs moving light to the task,
For heart beating high, though unwarned by the flesh;
Fit us Lord, with just sense of Thy bounty and care
Health to do, and to all in the land where we live."

Speech of Frederick Billings President of the N. P. R. R.

The following congratulatory address by Hon. Frederick Billings, President of the N. P. R. R., delivered at the close of a torch-light procession on November 3d at Woodstock, Vermont, is clipped from the Woodstock Standard of the 11th inst.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—If I had a thousand hearts, and I wish I had, they would all swell and beat with joy to-night! If I had a thousand all would be lifted up to-night in glad exultation!

When the sun rose this morning in its clear splendor on our great nation, stretching from ocean to ocean, it shone on a people saved from a gigantic peril! Saved this time, thank God, not by the conflict of arms, but by the victory of peace and prosperity and justice and liberty and righteousness, my first thought was that all the church bells should ring out their loudest peals, and we should all assemble in the churches, and sing a Te Deum, praising God from whom all blessings flow.

This nation has won the crown of liberty. The question yesterday was, is she worthy and able to wear it with honor? I know material interests were at stake. I know there was a question, whether the farmer in the field, the merchant in his store, the weaver at his loom, the carpenter in his shop, the laborer working for daily pay, the workman every where, was to be made glad in his work, or whether evil days of doubt and despondency were to come again. But there was far more than the stake. Far more, too, than questions of honest money and sound currency and an unvarniable national honor; far more than salvation from a sort of material and financial chaos.

There was the fundamental question whether honest ballots honestly counted should govern this nation, or issue bullets and Kuklux and the sword are to be sway. The question, too, whether this nation is capable of protecting and will protect its citizens, clear down to the humblest, in all their rights, and whether liberty only means license for the old rebel spirit to do just as it pleases. The question, whether this government is to be Republican or no.

The old rebel spirit had got a good start. It had captured the United States Senate. It had captured the House of Representatives. It had laid siege to the White House. Yesterday's battle drove them straight out of the Capital; routed them everywhere save down in the old confederate lines. Yesterday the rebellion was squelched the second time!

I pray God that we may never have to make that fight over again. But if that time ever comes, yesterday's great victory shows in the crisis the great moral ideas of the aroused and united North, will surely triumph. I never had more faith in the people, never more faith in the providence of God.

Never in my opinion will the South try to come up solid again. Never again in a Presidential contest, will her orators say they are fighting for the same principles for which Lee and Stonewall Jackson fought. Never again will it defy the great, magnificent, imperial North, Industrial forces, moral forces, the consciousness of the dead earnestness of the North, will break up the solid South in the four years to come, the four years of the administration of that man, whom Fred Douglass called the broad-chested, keg-hearted, three-story headed Andrew A. Garfield; of whom another has said, he has been over a score of years in public life and is poor in money, but is rich in honesty and character, and in brains a millionaire!

As the years go by, this election will be looked back to as one of the great epochs in our history. Its grand beneficient result will be a blessing to every body of every section and every party. And I believe the time will come when the South as well as the North and every fair-minded Democrat as well as Republican will say so.

So let the torches blaze, and the cannon speak, and the cheers go up, and everywhere in every place let the heart express its gladness and gratitude. The very stars shine down rejoicingly. Let the hills break forth into singing and all the fields clap their hands!

Mr. Thos. Reagn, senior member of the firm of Reagn Bros., dealers in hardware, on Fifth street, met a severe accident this week, which has confined him to his room for several days. He was engaged in some repairs in the interior of the Episcopal church and had climbed a high ladder near to the ceiling when the ladder gave way precipitating him to the floor, fracturing three of his ribs and otherwise bruising his body and limbs. At present writing he is reported much easier and hopes to be able to visit his store in a few days.

A very pleasant gathering was the oyster supper at Bly's Hall, Thursday evening, given by the ladies of the Episcopal church. The gross receipts were from suppers, $57.95; fortune teller, $1.20; fishpond, $5.34; fancy table, $8.55. Total, $73.04. The imitation of Madame Farley's waxworks was very admirably managed by Miss Marion Hawley, the various figures being represented by Fannie Wakelee, Rosa Grandlemeyer, Ashley Ford, Mamie Metcalf, Bertie Wakelee, Hattie French, Weedie Steele, Eddie Parker, Lottie Grandlemeyer, Maud Sleeper, Lillie Paine, and Vergie Fliut. and Thomas Blackburn manipulating the crank behind the scenes winding up the figures.

Mr. W. H. Leland, of this city, took his departure on Monday for the Pacific country, where he expects to spend the winter and perhaps the remainder of his days. He goes first to Auburn California where his sister, Mrs. Adams, resides, and will remain there a few weeks. He will then proceed to San Francisco and take in the sights in that city, after which he will take passage for the Sandwich Islands and spend the most of the winter season in their beautiful climate. Mr. Leland has by close attention to business and shrewd management accumulated a neat fortune here and he deserves it. Unfortunately his health will not permit him to remain in a cold climate during the winter months, and one errand of his trip is to find a genial spot where he can settle down with his good wife and enjoy the proceeds of his successful undertakings. We are sorry to lose him but hope he may find that spot which will give him joy and comfort during his remaining days and we may conclude to share it with him. Mrs. Leland accompanied him as far as Minneapolis where she will visit friends for a few days ere her return.

This is the month when those troubled with a cough should go for a twenty-five cent bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and be cured at once.

A Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Will be found in another column, we believe. It begins this way:

Throw physic to the dogs, the maxim goes,
Laugh and grow fat, wax healthy, wealthy, wise,
Welcome to wives and daughters, sweethearts, spouse,
Behold Thanksgiving spreads the meats and pies—

Under the auspices of the Ladies of the Congregational church at Bly's Hall Thursday next.

Ten Reasons why You should Insure in the Washington Life Insurance Company, of New York.

1. Because, It is one of the oldest, Companies doing business in this country.
2. Because, Its investments are the very best that can be obtained;—none of them are even questionable.
3. Because, During all the recent financial depression, it continued to increase its assets and surplus.
4. Because of its unusually large surplus.
5. Because, Whatever advantages may be claimed under the New York State law of 1879, in favor of policy holders, they have in the Washington, the additional protection of non-forfeiting dividends.

It is the only Company that allows its dividends to hold its policies in force when premium is unpaid.

6. Because, of the absence of those objectionable conditions that taint the policies of some of the leading companies.
7. Because, Its "ordinary life" policies provide for a definite amount of "paid up" insurance in case of lapse after three years;—thus giving more and better insurance for the same money than the co-operative societies.
8. Because, While very many have lost confidence in co-operative schemes and experimental plans of insurance, this Company pursues the same straightforward course that has characterized it from its organization to the present time, and still maintains its reputation for promptness and liberal dealing.
9. Because, It pays claims for death by suicide the same as other claims; the agreement being clearly expressed in the policy.
10. Because, Its new form of Policy expresses a very liberal contract in plain, concise language, contains fewer restrictions than any other policy, and leaves no hooks on which to hang legal quibbles.

Secure a policy in the Washington Life at once, while you are in good health. J. A. SABIN, St, Paul,
Gen. Agent.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.
An Encyclopædia in 20 vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopædia ever published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10; in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent in book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.
The Library of Universal Knowledge is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopædia in the field.
Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of prepaid one-half price per volume.
Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.
Lead the Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:
I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one-half what it was a few years ago.
III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time: adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $2 and an enemy.

ANY woman who chooses, and has the talent, can become a lawyer, a physician, a professor of science, art, or literature an author, a journalist, in order to do this she must take her place in the procession headed toward the goal she aims at, and work and wait till she attains the desired position. This is what men do, and this is what women must do.

MR. C. S. HARRISON, of York, Nebraska, gives the Farmer of that State this item of suggestion on a current theme: . "Teach the child to plant trees he can call his own, something he will watch over, in which he will take the deepest interest. TRACKERY was not known as an author until nearly 40. Scott was 43 when "Waverly" appeared. Richardson became an author at 51. Defoe was 58 before he wrote his first novel. "Gil Blas" was not finished until the author was 67. All the great writers of fiction have matured late, but the periods of production have been preceded by years of observation, study and literary training.

WHEN Miss Alta Hulett died, two or three years ago, the Bar Association of Chicago paid the highest tribute of respect to her worth as a member of the profession. Nobly had she earned it. To become a member of that bar she had first to persuade the Legislature of Illinois to create for her special a statute, and that she did. She studied as men study, she waited as men wait, and when the success she had so well earned was within her grasp, she died but not till she had fully vindicated the ability of women to practice law successfully.

GREAT BRITAIN is said to possess four famous shots—Lord de Grey, Lord Walsingham, Lord Huntingfield and the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh. The latter is a short, stout gentleman who has become Anglicized. He is a sound churchman, and a generous one; he is cultivated in art, especially music, playing well on several instruments, and, indeed, working at complicated mechanism. He has had the hope of one day writing an opera. He is fond also of mechanical pursuits, and is a good clock and watchmaker, doing all the repairs in this line needed in his beautiful country house at Elveden Hall. }

IN New England, New York, and Michigan, there is a surplus of that best of all our fruits, the apple. In the latter State dealers are buying the crop of whole orchards, hand picked and delivered, at 10 cents per bushel. Thirty cents for the barrel and thirty cents for apples to fill it will cover the cost of apples of first quality at railroad stations of the apple districts. The poorer quality are almost worthless, and lie rotting on the ground by thousands of bushels. Mills are inadequate to the grinding and the supply of barrels for filling, and so there is an immense waste of what might be valuable for vinegar.

Work in the exploration of the section was suspended, the miners flocking the scene of the disaster, but were unable to render any assistance on account of the precarious condition of the pit. The origin of the explosion is not known. Most of the missing men are married and most of them have large families.

Later details of the coal mine explosion in the Pictou, Stellarton, N. S.the 13th, fully confirm the first reports. The latest estimates place the number of victims at fifty. Up to Saturday, the 13th, several attempts were made to explore the pit, but the choke-damp was too dense to allow a thorough search, and only three dead bodies were recovered. The cause of the explosion remains a mystery, the rescued reporting that they were suddenly struck down and knew nothing more. The pit has been flooded to check the fire, so that no more bodies can be recovered for the present. The scene at Stellarton is described as peculiarly heartrending. The blinds of every third or fourth house are drawn, indicating the loss of some member of the family. Those suddenly made widows have large families of small children, and great suffering is inevitable if generous assistance is not promptly extended.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Some of the Recommendations He Will Make to His Last Message to Congress.

President Hayes will begin the preparation of his last message to Congress at an early day, and has requested the heads of all the departments to forward their recommendations as soon as they can be prepared. The message will not be nearly so long as usual, and will contain but few important recommendations. Whatever suggestions may be offered by Secretary Sherman touching the refunding of the bonds maturing early in 1881 will be incorporated in the message. The probability is that a 3.65 thirty-year bond will be recommended. With 4 per cent. bonds at a minimum of 109; there is no doubt but that a 3.65 bond would not only be floated at par, but that a syndicate will gladly give a premium to take the entire amount necessary to refund the outstanding 5 and 6 per cents. It is evidenced by the fact that the 5 per cent bonds of the District of Columbia, the interest of which is guaranteed by the United States, already rule at a premium.

The President, in view of the prosperous condition of the country, and the increasing receipts of the United States, together with the surplus revenues, will undoubtedly recommend a liberal system of improvements, and more especially the improvement of the Mississippi river. This great artery of internal navigation would long since have been more liberally provided for had not the unfortunate sectional issue been associated with it. The Southern representatives treated the improvement of the river and the building of the levees as a distinctive Northern measure of relief, and hence suffered by it. President Hayes is heartily in favor of the improvement of the river; and it is also in his successor-elect, being one who committed thereto in a speech made in the House.

The President will call the attention of Congress to the fact that there is for the counting of the electoral vote. He will urge, in view of there being no dispute now on the Presidential contest already past, that Congress pass some law which will leave any trouble as to a disputed count in the future.

Of our foreign policy but little will be said except to reiterate the oft-repeated assertion that "we are at peace with all nations." A history of the firing upon American merchantmen on the high seas by Spanish cruisers of-war will be recited, and the steps already taken by the government to secure reparation will be fully set forth.

No recommendation will be made looking to the reduction of taxation, or any change in the existing tariff system.

The President will again ask Congress to appropriate liberally for the improvement of the Washington harbor of the Potomac, which is fast filling up with accretions injurious to health.

A detailed account of the negotiations with the Ute Indians will be incorporated in the message.

Allusion will be made to the contemplated Interoceanic canal. It is believed the President will take the ground that the canal, if built, should be under American auspices.

The Chinese question, it is not thought, will be alluded to, but will be left to be dealt with unembarrassed by the incoming administration.

Congress will be reminded that as yet there has been no provision made for the payment of United States deputy marshals; and a recommendation that an appropriation for covering past expenditures on this score, and to provide for future, obtain gencies, will be made.

In closing the message, the President will take occasion to make a retrospect of his administration. This will not be in the nature of a fulsome eulogy, or a defense of what may have been its shortcomings, but will be rather a recital of what it has accomplished, to rest upon its own laurels.

An elephant is used in a spectacular play in Philadelphia. He is kept in a stable several blocks away, and taken to the theater every evening at the proper point in the piece. One afternoon he took it into his head that the time had come to perform. Throwing his keeper aside, he burst into the street, overturned a wagon and several street-stands on his way to the theater, smashed a door, and took his usual place on the stage. The absence of lights and audience seemed to convince him that he had made a mistake, and he suffered himself to be led back to the stable.

DIRE CALAMITY.

Burning of the Minnesota Insane Asylum at St. Peter—Thrilling Scenes and Frightful Loss of Life.

The Minnesota hospital for the insane, located at St. Peter, Nicollet county, was discovered to be on fire between 8 and 9 o'clock the evening of the 15th. The fire began in the north wing, and considering the substantial character of the building spread with great rapidity.

The asylum is located a full mile from the city proper, and the first news of the conflagration was given by Dr. Bartlett, superintendent of the asylum, who telephoned from the main to the [illegible] hospital, the latter building being in the heart of the city. The alarm was then made general and the hand fire engine was hastened to the scene of the conflagration while the populace turned out en masse.

Aid was summoned both from St. Paul and Mankato. A special train was started promptly from Mankato with an engine and 100 men, while St. Paul was prompt in securing waiting transportation, and it was 1 a. m. before the train with steamer, hose cart and equipments left the Union depot.

Meantime a terrible scene was in progress at the asylum. The patients already crazed were driven wild by the noise and excitement of the fire. The attaches gathered by the hundred and though terror stricken at the idea of saving hundred lunatics being turned loose upon the surrounding country, set to save the patients. The wing in which the fire was raging was occupied exclusively by males, many of whom were utterly ungovernable. Window gratings were broken and ladders erected to bring the victims out. As many as possible were brought down the stairways, the hall choked with the crowd of exit were thrown open and two or three hundred availed themselves of the opportunity to secure their liberty. Exhibiting a disposition to leave may never be known. The first reports indicate that forty or fifty lost their lives, but the later advices may reduce this.

Those who escaped were in a pitiable condition, and hardly prepared for the winter exposure. Many of them were almost naked, barefoot and hatless, and probably as many as were burned to death will be found to have perished from exposure. Many were captured after the fire, since people they sought dark alleys, out-buildings, and by ways throughout the city. Some ran to the fields and very likely will never be heard from again. The fire was so much of a recaring or caring for them, and they roamed at will. The death list from exposure, when added to those destroyed by fire, will make a fearful aggregate.

The flames appear to have been confined to the wing where they originated, though at one time it was thought that the whole magnificent structure would be utterly destroyed.

While the flames were in progress, Wm. Gilfillan, secretary of the board of trustees, telegraphed Gov. Pillsbury for aid in caring for the burned out patients. The Governor responded that he had called for men and secured the promise of transportation to remove the afflicted to St. Paul and Minneapolis, or such portion of them as could not be cared for at St. Peter.

The building was begun in 1866, and was planned on such a magnificent scale that it was over half a century in completion. It had a capacity for 650 patients and for months has been full to overflowing. The loss to the State to the insane being no insurance on the building or furniture. How it originated is a mystery and may never be known, but be that as it may, the flames did effective service.

The following is a partial list of the scene of the disaster on the morning of the 16th. As many as possible were accommodated in the hospital with wing which escaped the destroying element. Temporary habitations were also found for many while those who had escaped or perished feasted the number to be provided for. The building is now in ashes therefore the loss of life can be known and it is not certain that it will ever be fully ascertained. The Southern wing was occupied by the insane in a manner of doubt forever, as to the exact number who perished in the flames.

When the helpless and dangerous character of the insane is considered, and the multitude of friends scattered far and wide, utterly powerless to aid, is taken into the account, the sympathy is the greatest which ever befel the State.

The Day After the Fire.

St. Peter was the scene of much excitement and confusion the day after the fire, but there were no new events to record. The fire was confined to the north wing, leaving the south wing and the main building for occupancy, and by Wednesday morning of the fire all the building they were able to give at least temporary shelter to all who were alive or had not escaped. The number of the latter is known and cannot be until the debris is removed from the basement. It is thought that not less than ten or more than twenty-five were burned to death. It is probably nearer the former than the latter figure.

All day long Superintendent Bartlett was engaged with others of the building on the ruins, searching for the remains of inmates. In many cases he was obliged to give uncertain replies as the parties were missing, but might have escaped and be still absolutely lost to their lives.

The origin of the fire seems likely to remain a mystery. The theory generally accepted is that it caught from a leak in the gaspipe (gasoline being used). When it was discovered the basement of the north wing was well on fire. This wing was 165 long with two-towers, 40x70 and 80x80. It contained 200 rooms and was occupied by 270 male patients. At least 200 were in peril of their lives, and that more were not destroyed is a wonder.

Gov. Pillsbury, who visited the scene the day after the fire, says that the building can be rebuilt for $100,000. There was also several thousand dollars damage done to furniture in removing it from portions of the building which were not destroyed. There being no insurance the loss is total. A meeting of the trustees was held during the day, and it was decided to send the lunatic patients to Rochester, and ask St. Paul and Minneapolis to each take twenty.

One poor woman literally roasted alive. He occupied a room in the third story of the corner where the fire started. During the fire he stood peering through the bars of his window, evidently contemplating the martyr fortitude of a martyr. The flames crept stealthily upward, and he watched their advance with the keen interest of a disinterested spectator. He seemed infatuated at the prospects of a fiery and awful death. Red, sinuous snakes of fire darted up and almost licked his face. Still he stood unmoving, merely dodging from the flames by a sharp turn of the head. At last the cage became filled with flames and he sank down unconscious, the victim of a fiery choice. Suddenly there was a crash, and he went down with the debris without uttering a groan.

During the excitement of the fire a large number of the male patients wandered or ran off. The exact number is not yet known, and probably will not be definitely ascertained until some time to-morrow, when the confusion having subsided, the officers will have a chance to take account of stock. The number is variously estimated at from twenty-five to a hundred and twenty-five. Men were at once sent out to scour the country in search of the estrays, and succeeded in finding a number of them in the city, some in adjacent farm houses, while at Kasota nine were found in a barn. Evidently highly pleased at what they considered a joke, they were all safely found by a farmer about four miles from the asylum with their feet and hands safely free from bonds. Their names are Jacob and Henry Miller. They may have to suffer amputation. They received immediate and kind attention. Several others were captured in the fields, but they were not of a serious nature. It is estimated that fifteen are now from thirty-five to forty patients missing, some of whom may be lying dead beneath the ruins.

Dead and Missing.

The official list of the missing and dead furnished by the hospital officials is as follows: S. S. Frazer, Lincoln county, probably fatally burned; J. C. Brunner, Washington county, missing; believed to be safe. Columbus McMullen, Scott county, probably burned. Wm. Calighle, Ramsey county, probably burned. James E. Clinch, Anoka county, probably burned. Charles H. Brower, Nobles county, missing. Amos C. Alley, Wright county, missing. Carl Ramsleuier, Scott county, since probably burned. Jacob E. THE WHEAT CROP.

Prodnestion of the World and the Supply and Needs of Different Countries.

Bradstreet's commercial agency, in New York, publishes a review of the wheat crop of the world in which it claims that 455,649,- will be the total yield in this country.

The total for the New England States aggregates 4,100,000 bushels; for the Middle States, 95,595,000, and for the Southern States, 41,229,000. The summary gives the yield in Ohio as 43,450,000 bushels; in Indiana, 33,000,000 bushels; in Minnesota, 42,- 490,000 bushels; in Nebraska, 9,130,000 bushels. The final returns of other States are as follows:

	Bushels.
Wisconsin	33,875,000
Illinois	52,800,000
Michigan	45,000,000
Missouri	25,750,000
Kansas	19,750,000

Total for all the Western States...323,675,000

This estimate runs somewhat under, but is 39,500,000, an excess of 10,000,000 over the first estimate of October 9. This result after deducting seed and waste, will permit the exportation of about 30,000,000 bushels. The exports of flour and wheat from San Francisco during the twelve months ending January 1, 1880, comprise 193,967 barrels of flour and 2,165,450 centals of wheat. For the same time the exports of the latter amounted to 128,338 barrels of wheat and 4,274,247 bushels of wheat, is marked falling off. The yield in Germany, under the best of skilled years, exraordinarily good. Fical returns warrant the conclusion that the yield of France, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Germany, Washington; will aggregate 13,850,000 bushels less heavy at 63 pounds to the credit of Dakota. The needs of the country for food, seed, etc., will be about 265,000,000 bushels. On this basis the

A MARGIN

of 190,724,000 bushels for export to supply the demands of foreign countries. Early in the season the estimate of the exportable of the wheat crop gained wide acceptance, a belief that was strengthened by the surprise of wheat would be very largely in excess of any one most likely to arise. The latest and most trustworthy returns regarding the quantity and deficiency of the wheat-producing and wheat-consuming countries of the world are as follows: Supplies available from 254,350,- 000 and the deficiencies to 227,500,000, leaving an apparent surplus pro- ductions of 27,050,000. Regarding countries producing a surplus for shipment it should be noted that the cent rum of Europe, Russia and Australia is, as yet, an uncertain element in the problem, although the estimates are said large. Notwithstanding the general failure of the Russian crop, that country is included among the exporting countries. It needs to import grain; but rye and Indian corn will be brought in to supply the need, while wheat will be exported in excess of any one normal extent of 5,000,000 bushels. The average annual has been 745,360,000 bushels. The average of the annual importation has been 115,524,- 000 bushels. The total crop of that last year amounted to 131,200,000 bushels. The estimate of 120,000,000 bushels for wheat imported into the United Kingdom during the current year is borne out by official returns of the British board of trade. In ordinary years the consumption is 13,000,000 bushels of wheat. In the light of these facts we estimate the probable importation of the German empire at 20,000,000 bush.; and these figures will, it is believed, not be far out of the way when the returns for 1880 are footed up. The apparent surplus of wheat, after the world's need is supplied, is so small that, considering the general failure of the crop in some and abroad increasing rather than decreasing, there is no good reason to count on declining prices.

THE FASCINATING CAPTAIN.

Through the holes of my hat, as I lay on the sand,
I saw the Louisa sail straight for the land;
The yacht has my name and the Captain's my beau!
Where he asked me to marry, I couldn't say no!
I wouldn't say no, because it is true
Every girl in Nantic wanted him, too.

Through the holes in my hat, as I lay on the sand,
I saw my brave Captain step lightly to land.
I would wish to have slept, and see what he'd say,
Though I'd wished every step as he hurried this way;
I would watch every step of my lover so true;
Every girl in Nantic wanted him, too.

Through the holes in my hat, as I lay on the sand,
I saw him keep waving his handsome brown hand;
And Bella De Vere, who sketched by the sea,
Waved her hand in response and laughed merrily.
Waved her hand in response to my Captain so true—
Every girl in Nantic wanted him, too.

Through the holes in my hat, as I lay on the sand,
And then it repeated—then always round in fear;
"She's been asleep for an hour," said Bella De Vere.
"I've, that's what she said; I'm telling you true—
Every girl in Nantic wanted him, too.

I took off my hat as I lay on the sand,
And, sadly, both a poem, "Why, when did you land?"
The Captain came over and knelt by my side;
"I was fearing to wake you," he tenderly cried;
And I never let on I knew him untrue—
Every girl in Nantic wanted him, too.

ELEANOR KIRK.

TOPSY'S THANKSGIVING.

Topsy was Win's kitten. She sat all humped up in the cellar-way, watching the plump, speckled hens, which hung their by strings tied through their yellow legs. Only yesterday she had chased these same hens about the yard, and jumped at them from behind the rose bushes. Topsy shook her little sable head, "O, no;" said she, and then she gave thanks that she was not a fowl.

Just then Win's mother stepped down on the stairs and took one of the hens. Topsy followed and saw her lay it on a board and begin to "dress" it. Topsy thought it more like undressing it—feathers jerked off, legs and head cut off; and when the sharp knife began to open it open, Topsy ran away horrified. "What a dreadful observance Thanksgiving is," said she.

However, the odor of the various baklings and stewings was delightful. Topsy spent the afternoon in the kitchen rocking chair. Frequently Win came in and gave her a hug and talked to her of the good things they would eat to-morrow. Topsy's views of Thanksgiving were considerably changed by evening; but it was the evident hungriness of the whole family, I think, which caused her to take the step she did.

Under the stove where she lay, she had a good view of Win's pape and mamma. She sieized the moment when the former sneezed his spectacles off and the latter dropped the seam stitches in her knitting work, to walk across the dark corner toward the pantry door, then, with one backward look and a soft leap, she was in.

Under the broad shelf stood the molasses jug and the vinegar jug, and behind them Topsy sought his herself. She was so black that no one could see her in the dark corner, unless they looked very sharply.

In a little white somebody said: "Well, we'll turn the cat out now, and go to bed."

And then Topsy heard a soft, persuasive voice: "Kitty! kitty! kitty! kitty!" but she did not stir.

"Kitty, kitty, kitty!"

In vain.

"Well, I thought the cat was in here, but I guess Win turned her out before he went to bed."

Topsy purred so loudly—that was her way of laughing—that she was afraid of being heard. But presently the ivory shop was put out and the house grew still; she waited until she could hear somebody snore, and then crept out. She knew where her favorite dishes were, for she had watched them when they were put away. She sprang upon a shelf and then smelt daintily at what she found behind the platter of roasted chickens. She tasted the delicately browned wings, the breast, and the tender inside of the leg she ate heartily. Then she partook of the squash and pumpkin pies, eating out the insides, but leaving the rich crust of the mince and apple pies, then she ate the cake, then lapped a little cream from the milk pans.

By this time she was too full to swallow another mouthful, and she jumped down to the floor, and looked around for a nice sleeping place. She found a drawer partly open, and the ironing sheet in it made a nice nest, and so she went to sleep, sure of her Thanksgiving dinner.

In the morning she was awakened by some one making the kitchen fire. She lay still, not daring to crawl out, for she knew very well what she had done.

While she was thinking about it, Win's mamma came into the pantry' and, seeing the open drawer, said:

Topsy forgot and was just going to mew to be let out, when she heard mamma exclaim: "Well, I do declare!"

"What's the matter?" said papa from the kitchen.

"Just look here!"

Papa came, and not only looked here, but looked there; and then Topsy heard him say: "Where is the little brute?"

"In the kitchen, I presume," said mamma.

"Just let me find her!" said papa, threateningly.

They looked all about, but no black kitty could be found. When Win came down they showed him the spoiled pies and general chicken-picking, and he said he would thrash that kitty as soon as he could catch her. When Topsy heard that she was more than ever afraid to stir.

By and by everybody went to church; and then Topsy pushed her way to the front of the drawer, but it was shut tight. So she crept back again and went and tried to go to sleep, but the odor of the roasting turkey came through the crack in the drawer, and kept her awake. Then she heard people come back from church; and in a little while she knew by the sound that they were drawing up to the table. After that the table was cleared, and she knew that delicious things were brought into the pantry.

"If I could only get out now!" sighed Topsy.

In the evening there was a little party, as Topsy knew by the sound. She mewed some, but no one heard her; they were all too merry and noisy.

Then Topsy began to think that being shut up in a drawer was a worse punishment for stealing than being whipped. The whipping would have been over so much sooner.

Thinking made her sleepy, and she took a nap. When she awoke the house was still again, everybody having gone to bed. By this time she was terribly hungry. She didn't care a straw for the "threshing" Win said he would give her, didn't even care if she was drowned, and began to mew, softly at first, and then louder and louder until Win's papa bounced out into the kitchen to see what was the matter, and ran against the table and then against the stove and hurt his knee so badly it made him knock a chair over.

Topsy heard Win's mamma call from the bed-room,

"What upon earth is the matter!"

And papa answered, "I wish this stove was in Jericho!"

Mamma laughed, and then papa and "Now where is that wretched little cat?"

Topsy was afraid somewhat again, so she and very softly, "meow!"

"There she is!" cried papa.

"Where?" called mamma.

"How should I know!" scolded papa for his shins still ached from the bump on the hearth.

"Meow, Meow" said Topsy.

"She's in the pantry again!" exclaimed papa, and then mamma came and lit a lamp and then went to look for her.

"MEOW!"

They looked under the shelves and behind the flour barrel, and into the cupboard, but no kitten was to be seen.

"MEOW!"

"She's under the floor!" cried papa, in dismay.

"She's in the drawer!" cried mamma, suddenly remembering that she shut the drawer when she went into the pantry and found the spoiled goodies.

Papa opened with a flourish, and out jumped Topsy right into his face, which startled him so that he jumped back

The ladies of the Congregational church have hit upon the plan of preparing a grand Thanksgiving Dinner, on Thursday, at Bly's Hall, which will be open from one to five o'clock in the afternoon, and to which all are invited. Tickets for dinner are for sale at the various stores at 50 cents, the proceeds to be devoted to the benefit of the church. This is at once a novel and sensible plan. It will save the labor of preparing a Thanksgiving dinner in many a family, and will afford a very enjoyable occasion, which we hope to see our citizens one and all avail themselves of. Get a good Thanksgiving dinner at a nominal expense, have a good time and aid a good cause at one and the same time. Come, and bring the children.

Thirty-three years have past since the introducting of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and it still stands unrivaled. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

Would Never have Suspected It.

The TRIBUNE protests, that "harder work was never done in Brainerd for any nominee than was done for Mr. Buckman." Glad to hear it, for we should never have suspected it from the figures. We believe, however, that there were some good Republicans in Brainerd—including the TRIBUNE editor—who did their duty this year.—Elk River Star.

DR. CLARK'S JOHNSON'S INDIAN BLOOD SYRUP

Laboratory, 77 W. 24 St., New York City.

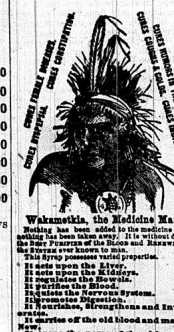
LATE OF PERRY ORT.

[TRADE MARK.]

The Best Remedy Known to Man!

Dr. Clark Johnson, having associated himself with Mr. Edwin Eastman, a practical expert, long a resident in Waknaktia, U. Medicine Lodge, Kiowa Comanches, is now prepared to lend his aid in the introduction of the wonderful remedy of that tribe.

The experience of Mr. Eastman being similar up that of Mrs. Chas. Jones, of Mt. Washington, Ct., lowa, an account of whose sufferings were intelligently narrated in the New York Herald of Dec. 15th, 1878, the facts of which are so widely known, and so nearly identical, that but little mention of Mr. Eastman's experiences will be given here. They are, however, published in a neat volume of 300 pages, entitled, "Seven and Nine Years Among the Comanches and Apaches," to which mention will be made hereafter. Suffice it to say, that Mr. Eastman, while a resident of Waknaktia, was compelled to gather the roots, gums, barks, herbs and berries of which Waknaktia's medicine was made, and is still prepared to procure them, and to obtain the successful introduction of the medicine to the world; and assures the public that how scarcely it is the same now, as when Waknaktia compelled him to make it.



Waknaktia, the Medicine Man

Nothing has been added to the medicine and nothing has been taken away. It is without doubt the King Pharaoh of the Blood and Nerves of the Eterna ever known to man.

This Syrup possesses varied properties:

It acts upon the Liver.
It acts upon the Kidneys.
It purifies the Blood.
It purifies the Stomach.
It regulates the Bowels.
It controls the Nervous System.
It promotes Digestion.
It imparts Vitality to Lifeless and Invigorates the System.
It carries off the old blood and makes new.

By opens the pores of the skin, and Induces Healthy Perspiration.
