SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1893.
A. E. CLARKE.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has decided in favor of the claim of legislators for $500 each for extra services.

The east wing of the Kings county insane asylum at Flatbush burned Tuesday morning. One patient was lost.

In delivering the budget speech, next Friday in the Canadian parliament, Sir Leonard Tilgher expects to announce a surplus of over $1,000,000, and will recommend the abolition of the duties on tea and coffee.

The chief of Beauce county Wisconsin who has been on trial in a Milwaukee court for a charge of attempted bribery with a hired girl has been acquitted, though he acknowledged in his testimony that he went to the room when a sister of them were in full dress, and begged her a few, against the law in such cases made and provided. If the law officers of our country are going to prosecute around hired girls' rooms in a seclusion, in condition, and score uscetit shoot-ers into fits, what can be expected of the balance of the men.

An exchange suggests that Grand Forks take the cake. One of the business firms in that city, paid for a certain amount of advertising space in the holiday edition of the Herald. Another business man did not adhere to the published rate, and a great number of copies and had printed a number of copies bearing his name, and the worth of the column and long enough to cover the first named ad. These he carefully pasted over the other hand that mailed the paper to his friends in the east. Some honest man in New England who received a copy sent it back to Grand Forks, and said "it went out." It was a sharp rebuke, but the man who did it will hardly make a fortune out of it. It would have a leather muddling on the gate.

The warfare made on the Northern Pacific road, and the efforts to wrest from it its land grant, appears to be the exceedingly unjust proceeding. The land grant was absolute and not subject to forfeiture, and the lands were in the company from the time the grant was made and filed. The government reserved for its protection the right, in case the work was not prosecuted, as to the working on the ground, though the government has no ground to complain. Never in the history of railroad building has the rapacity of work been more conspicuous than in the construction of this road. All the rails and material of Dakota and Iowa have been moved forward to the front and all the men are engaged in its construction, and the work is being carried on with the most rapidity. 25,000 tons of rails, 3,000,000 feet of ties have been contracted for, grading will be finished by the first of June next. The Missouri river bridges will be completed by the first of October next, and the whole road will be finished, except 10 miles, and that will be completed in 1893.

In a letter written to enforce its policy, history honor law, Kansas is finding how poorly it fared by its injustice, and how the rigidity of men, who are excited by strongest repressive measures, circumstances the written law. A sinner of beer was being prosecuted, and the prohibition being because there was no proof. The witness said, they drank sea foam, not beer. Did it foam like beer? It did. Did it taste like beer? It did. Could you discover any difference between it and beer? No. What, then, in your judgment was it? It was sea foam. This is sea foam! I don't know. This is sea foam! It is not known. The fact that since the attempted enforcement of the prohibitory liquor in Kansas the consumption of liquor in that state has increased, and with it there has been a painful and demoralizing increase of intemperance. It is the history of the world, especially the history of few people, that an unpopular law of only a few years ago, even though it were not enforced, and that people of even temperate hastes remain every day, is to be wiped out of the map. The Maine liquor law is a fraud and a failure. The Kansas law is proving a failure, and which must be steady, to action, and energetic. AMERICAN FINEST "PUNCH" CIGARS. At Parker's Restaurant, Sixth Street.

THE LADY GRANT. A correspondent of the New York Times in writing about the Northern Pacific land grants shows that while congress may do any and all acts and things which may be necessary to insure a speedy completion of the road, it cannot divert the granted lands to any other purpose. The implied attacks on Mr. Schwarz for his negligence as secretary of the interior in favor of the road are clearly shown to be baseless. Two questions were submitted to Mr. Schwarz: 1. That the grant to the company failed by reason of the acts within the time specified? and 2. If it had so lapsed, can the department recognize any acts by the company looking to the institution of new rights or the enlargement of old ones? Mr. Schwarz was disposed to decide both questions against the company, but on their submission to Attorney General Devens, that officer decided that the time specified for completion of the road would not expire till July 4, 1879; that till congress had taken steps to declare a forfeiture of land grant it remains in full force and effect, and that the grant must be held to be the same as it existed on the day when it was made and accepted by the company.

A terrible revolt among nearly three hundred female prisoners took place in a prison, some distance out of Montreal. Saturday afternoon, which was only suppressed after a vigorous fight with a posse of police from the central station. The jail where these amazons are confined is presided over by a man, which only three male guards in attendance. Of late the police authorities have been raiding houses of prostitution in the city, of which it is reported by the police there were three hundred in the French station alone. These women have overcrowded the place to such an extent that all discipline has been at for some time, and nothing but demoralization exists, the inmates of all classes and all degrees in crime being buddled together in the same rooms.

On the arrival of the police they found the inmates all locked up in their own rooms, from which they did not emerge until the entire was quieted. The vindictive book up the furniture and defended themselves against the sportsmen against the officers' slaughter. They were finally subdued by force, and the most violent locked up in cells. The policeman were all severely handled, and some dangerously wounded. Constables Desjardins, Rozanette, and Nargelle are reported to be in a critical condition from their injuries.

The Salt Lake organ of Mormonism professes not to be at all alarmed by the Edmunds bill, which it believes will become a law. Its reason is that it changes the present law in regard to the prosecution of polygamists, namely, a making cohabitation instead of marriage the offense. It does not alter the jury law. Persons who practice polygamy are not to be prosecuted, or believe it right to practice polygamy, but have been excluded from the box in the trial of polygamists cases, and the supreme court of the United States has sustained this action by the Utah courts, which makes it as good as a law as if it were in the statute book.

The law of evidence remains unchanged by the bill, but the machinery and the powers of the courts are undisturbed. Hence it is not plain to see why there should be greater alarm over this feature of the proposed law than there is over the anti-polygamy act of 1862. It is notorious that the pronounced constitutional by the supreme court, was never adequately enforced, and there is little reason to suppose that the Edmunds bill will be carried out any more energetically. The case of the late Governor of Utah, who was charged with polygamy, that nobody whose name is in Utah is Mormon or Gentile can find anything in the bill to excite his joy. Only reckless, irresponsible adventurers would attempt to venture, to the Utah rolling of its other officers. The Herald predicts that if this bill becomes a law, those against whom it is intended to operate will not be its only victims, even if they suffer, from even temperate hastes remain every day, is to be wiped out of the map. The Maine liquor law is a fraud and a failure. The Kansas law is proving a failure, and which must be steady, to

A printer at Dismalque has been convicted of violating the Sunday law by fishing on that day. It seems as though there is an epidemic of crime going through this country that would eventually knock it to pieces. The man at Dismalque will evidently claim that he was inspired. There is too much of this going on. Wonder if he caught any fish.

An officer searched a house in St. Paul, where a search warrant, looking for some goods supposed to be stored there, and found a mutilated corpse in a closet adjoining a room occupied by medical students. The young men went home the corpse could have got in there and they did not know it, and the keeper of the boarding house over his head, also having on a pair of pants and a coat, and carrying an umbrella. Other boarding houses in the neighborhood are being searched for bodies. They have been found in a number of houses, and if a student comes in at night with any package larger than a box of cartridges, he is searched for a corpse. This particular corpse was badly cut up at the affair.

J. J. Healey is the editor of the Fort Boston Daily Record, and also the sheriff of that county. Recently under his charge in Dublin, was put into the stocks for horse stealing. The red was released for some reason, but before he was turned loose his revenue tresser were cut off—yeast even shaved the top of his head—sparing not so much as the war lock. But Bull returned to the ropes of his people a rascal, but revenged man, and he has sworn to have the sheriff's blood. Healer may well be wary, but he is a clever man, and the quickest pistol shot in the West, and his killing more Indians than he has fingers and toes, it behooves him to carry a revolver in a very killing manner if he means to come out first best when he meets the object of his wrath. A front-page editor, who can't shoot a single Indian possesses the chief western accomplishment of the profession to a very limited extent.—[Bismarck Tribune]

Last December the Albany papers contained quite a lengthy account of the strange and mysterious character who was known as "the Rubber Man." The mysterious individual, in a partial state of nudity, made it a practice to appear at night of stealing up stealthily behind ladies and children for the purpose of frightening them. The name given him seems to have originated from the fact that when complained was made against the offender by the ladies whom he had frightened they stated that he wore rubber boots. He chose these kind of boots probably in order to approach close to his victims without making the noise of falling footsteps. One evening a young lady, the daughter of one of the most respected citizens of Albany, was accosted about 8 o'clock by the "Rubber Man," and was so frightened that her physicians feared the illness caused by the nervous prostration that followed would prove serious. Another young lady experienced a most unexpected encounter with the same man some nights later. She returned home late to tea, and while walking up to the front stoop of her father's residence, was about to ring the bell when she felt a hand upon her shoulder. She was terrified to find the "Rubber Man" standing in the above immediately adjoining her. He made a motion to her and the girl fainted. A few minutes later, when she recovered, she course the "Rubber Man" was invisible. A similar known game is known to have been resorted to in at least one other instance.

The matter was soon reported to the authorities, and the police were given special instructions to use every endeavor to capture the mysterious individual. In order to entrap the fellow a stout policeman of the city force was dressed in a woman's clothes a night or so ago and deputed to catch the offender. The officer was neatly distinguished, and was accosted by the stranger when walking through the streets of the city about 9:30 o'clock in the evening. The fellow darted out from a dark passage, and when grasped by the officer, at once showed fight, proving too athletic for his newly into the captor, whom he policeman recovered himself quickly and felt for his revolver, but before the weapon could be brought into play the "Rubber Man" sped out of reach with astonishing rapidity. The encounter was of such short duration that no description of the wretch could be furnished. Of his strength and dexterity, however, there was no question.

Some suppose that this strange man was a half-witted fellow, while many believed him an escaped lunatic. But whatever he was or is, he has evidently made his advent in this city. For the past week a man answering to the description of the Albany man has been seen in various parts of our city. As these young ladies were returning home from Gordon's store last Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock, they were unexpectedly accosted on north Chilton street by a strange individual wearing a rubber coat with a hood and the keeper of the boarding house over his head, also having on a pair of pants and a coat, and carrying an umbrella. Other boarding houses in the neighborhood are being searched for bodies. They have been found in a number of houses, and if a student comes in at night with any package larger than a box of cartridges, he is searched for a corpse. This particular corpse was badly cut up at the affair.
