the success in this respect in a very great degree upon the kind of food he eats; in fact, the kind of food he eats is the chief factor in determining his health, and it is the duty of every man to take care to select the best food for himself and his family.

It is a common mistake to suppose that the best food is the most expensive. In fact, the best food is the most economical, for it is the one that does the most for the least money.

The first principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food. This means that you should eat the food that is best for your health and the health of your family.

The second principle of good nutrition is to eat the right amount of food. This means that you should eat just enough to keep your body in good health and to give you the energy you need to do your work.

The third principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food at the right time. This means that you should eat your meals at regular intervals and not skip any meals.

The fourth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food in the right way. This means that you should eat slowly and chew your food thoroughly.

The fifth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of drink. This means that you should drink plenty of water and avoid alcoholic drinks.

The sixth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of exercise. This means that you should get plenty of exercise and avoid sedentary habits.

The seventh principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of rest. This means that you should get plenty of rest and avoid overwork.

The eighth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of hygiene. This means that you should keep your body clean and avoid unhygienic habits.

The ninth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of environment. This means that you should live in a clean and healthy environment.

The tenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of attitude. This means that you should have a positive attitude and avoid negative thoughts.

The eleventh principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of habits. This means that you should develop good eating habits and avoid bad habits.

The twelfth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of knowledge. This means that you should have a good understanding of nutrition and health.

The thirteenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of will. This means that you should have the will to stick to your diet and to make the necessary changes in your life.

The fourteenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of love. This means that you should eat with love and appreciation for the food that you are eating.

The fifteenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of faith. This means that you should have faith in the power of good nutrition to improve your health and the health of your family.

The sixteenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of hope. This means that you should have hope for the future and believe that you can achieve a better life through good nutrition.

The seventeenth principle of good nutrition is to eat the right kind of food with the right kind of charity. This means that you should share your knowledge of good nutrition with others and help them to improve their health.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. It is a saying that has been true for many centuries. In these times of trouble and distress, it is more important than ever to have friends who will help you in your time of need.

It is not the quantity of friends that counts, but the quality. A few true friends are worth more than a hundred false ones. True friends are those who stand by you in both good and bad times.

One of the best ways to find true friends is to be a true friend yourself. Treat others as you would like to be treated, and you will attract friends who are worthy of your friendship.

True friendship is based on mutual respect and understanding. It is not a one-sided affair. Both parties must give and receive. True friends are those who understand you and accept you for who you are.

True friendship is also based on loyalty and honesty. True friends are those who will stand up for you and tell you the truth, even when it is not what you want to hear. True friends are those who will be there for you in your time of need.

True friendship is a gift that cannot be bought. It is something that is earned through a lifetime of friendship. True friends are those who have known you through all the ups and downs of life.

True friendship is a source of strength and comfort. True friends are those who will listen to your problems and offer you advice and support. True friends are those who will cheer you up when you are down.

True friendship is a source of joy and happiness. True friends are those who will share your joys and celebrate with you. True friends are those who will bring you laughter and joy.

True friendship is a source of wisdom and knowledge. True friends are those who will share their wisdom and help you to grow and learn. True friends are those who will challenge you to be a better person.

True friendship is a source of love and compassion. True friends are those who will love you and care for you. True friends are those who will be there for you in your time of need.

True friendship is a source of hope and faith. True friends are those who will give you hope and help you to believe in a better future. True friends are those who will help you to have faith in yourself and in the world.

Among the most common ailments which make life a burden are those which affect the digestive system. It is the duty of every man to take care of his digestive system and to avoid the ailments which result from its weakness.

The first sign of a weak digestive system is indigestion. This is a condition in which the food is not properly digested and causes discomfort and pain. Indigestion is often caused by eating too much or eating too fast.

The second sign of a weak digestive system is constipation. This is a condition in which the bowels are not properly regulated and causes discomfort and pain. Constipation is often caused by eating a diet that is low in fiber.

The third sign of a weak digestive system is flatulence. This is a condition in which there is an excessive production of gas in the stomach and intestines. Flatulence is often caused by eating certain foods that are difficult to digest.

The fourth sign of a weak digestive system is acid indigestion. This is a condition in which the stomach produces too much acid, causing discomfort and pain. Acid indigestion is often caused by eating too much fatty or spicy food.

The fifth sign of a weak digestive system is heartburn. This is a condition in which the acid from the stomach flows back up into the esophagus, causing discomfort and pain. Heartburn is often caused by eating too much fatty or spicy food.

The sixth sign of a weak digestive system is loss of appetite. This is a condition in which you do not feel like eating. Loss of appetite is often caused by a weak digestive system.

The seventh sign of a weak digestive system is weight loss. This is a condition in which you lose weight without trying. Weight loss is often caused by a weak digestive system.

The eighth sign of a weak digestive system is general weakness. This is a condition in which you feel tired and lack energy. General weakness is often caused by a weak digestive system.

The ninth sign of a weak digestive system is depression. This is a condition in which you feel sad and hopeless. Depression is often caused by a weak digestive system.

The tenth sign of a weak digestive system is premature aging. This is a condition in which you look older than you are. Premature aging is often caused by a weak digestive system.

The Brainerd Tribune.

SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1892.

E. B. CHASE, Editor and Prop'r.

THE TRIBUNE IS SOLD AT THE FOLLOWING RATES: For one year, in advance, $1.00. For six months, .60. For three months, .40. For one month, .15. Single copies, 5 cents.

The waters of the lower Mississippi are receding while the flood is swelling above. The Red river is on the main stage, having raised three feet yesterday, and the river side of Missouri is badly submerged.

James Wallace the actor, who is about to present a drama on the subject of the James boys, has sent an order to an agent at St. Joseph, Mo., to buy the set then ridden by Jesse. Order—order for trinkets, such as weapons, saddles, etc. of the dead out-fits, have been received here.—[Special to P. P.]

The president has at last disclosed the state of his mind on the important cabinet changes which he has been harboring for months. He sent in the name of William E. Chandler for the treasury, Henry W. Teller for the interior department and sent the cabinet list on as foreign a mission as possible to be presented to, and he is certainly more worthy and deserving of recognition than Hunt.

Jesse James' funeral should be held at Frank's, and in the afternoon ought to close by a service getting the corpse ready.—[Evening Journal.]

This is all very well if the bandit can be captured, but it is to be sincere, we hope that the remaining man will not be shot in the back while unacquainted and helpless as Jesse. For heaven's sake, kill him in a civilized manner.

A Sedalia, Mo. special to the Floridian says that prominent citizens of that town do not take stock in the death of Jesse, but believe that the country is being fearfully "galloped." They believe that the "fords" with Mrs. Smuck and Mrs. Jones are pitting up his job, and are acting their parts well, but if this be possible, more people than those named are acting well. As the same who are, or ought to be, bravely acquainted with the bandit are galled as well as the public at large.

The Gilvert-Mills twins, Garfield and Arthur Chapin, have been quite sick or some time, but are now on their feet to recovery. They are six pounds old, and each weighs nineteen pounds, respectively. They are chiefly recognized by placing their hands about the neck containing coins of different denominations. When crying, their faces assume the contorted look, and when laughing the same joyful lines are plainly visible. Many people are attracted to their home by the almost incredible stories of similarity that are related, to find themselves completely dazed in their presence in disbelieving which is which. Mr. and Mrs. Chapin are very proud of their little boys, and as soon as the weather becomes settled will have some photographs taken and the public generally can have the pleasure of noting the remarkable resemblance.

A Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Times thus speaks of the match making qualities of Ex-Secretary Blaine: "While the public at large are puzzling over the foreign policy of Frelinghuysen and Blaine, those who are known as the capital to both, are much more interested in the matrimonial chances of two fair candidates. One the daughter of the former, the other a family friend of the latter. There is much talk in the papers of the first named young lady as the companion of the White House; but lookers on are proverbially said to favor more of the game in Blaine's first wife for the position. A charming Philadelphia widow, Mr. W. seems to be getting on her excellent feet again. That the ladies remain friends is equally to the credit of both, for great is the prize. Were I called upon to say whose chance is at present the better, endeavor would compel me to back the favorite of the ex-secretary, all of whose magnetic influence is being used for the benefit of his country.

SEVENTH FORECAST AND WHITE OLIVEA
Many years ago, while Edwin Forrest was playing an engagement in a Worcester theater, while Clotel and a number of other plays were on their tour from town to town. Stopping in a town one evening, he was invited to go to the theater to see the great American tragedian. Mr. Forrest was then in the prime of life, his voice being up to the maximum of a tenor. The play on that evening was "Metamora." While the play was in progress, the audience was so packed that it was not until the first act was over that the audience could see the actor. HOW CROSS IS IT?
An Ohio naturalist claims to have discovered that "Crosses fly zig-zag and not straight, as has been generally believed, in a zig-zag line." O well, may be they do fly zig-zag in Ohio. It depends a good deal on the condition of the man who is looking at them. Now, in Texas they fly round, non-round and round; in California they fly round and square; in Kansas they fly as straight as a plank-line any hour between 12 and 12.—Ex-Change.

CHRISTIAN GRACES are like performances they are presented, the sweeter they are; like stars, they shine brightest in the dark; like trees—the deeper root they are situated, the more fruit they bear.

THIS is a rural-resort landlubber thinks a city man is putting on too many airs, and is poor to boot; and also he takes to the city man's ways, and is a city man to turn on his gas; don't blow it out.—Philadelphia News.

WHY, says Blaine, abouts two are represented when Europe meets in congress, except in population, this is as usual, except in population, this is as usual, except in population, this is as usual.
