Whiskey Did It.

John Webber, a resident of Crow Wing, committed suicide on Monday while in a state of drunken inebriation. It seems that Webber had been on a business trip and had not slept for three or four nights and he became so fatigued that he could not resist the temptation to drink a bottle which was filled with the drug and gave him a few drops, but he would not be satisfied and wanted more and he drank around the house until his wife became frightened and she called the neighbors and they came to his aid and he was taken to the hospital and died following.
