Teaching the Men a Lesson.
The women of Rio Grande, N. J., found their husbands, brothers and sweethearts a political trick or two in the recent election of a school teacher by the district. They claimed that their rights were being trampled on by their husbands, and they had learned to resist by their own hands and school trustees pledged to their interests. They put forward as their champion Charles W. Reed, the handsome student of the West Jersey railroad, who had endorsed himself to every female heart in the place by his effusive manners as well as his good looks. Sam recently accepted the honor, and the women started to work. They caused the entire district to be covered with servants and waitresses that to the women against Sam. In a few days, however, the women were at the polls for the election of a school teacher. The men were of the opinion that the women were not to be trifled with. They went to the polls and voted for the woman, and the woman was elected by a majority of 20.

Writing Business Letters

Business letters should be short and to the point, writes a Philadelphia editor in a helpful article on "The Art of Letter-Writing in the Ladies' Home Journal." In ordering articles for the monthly magazine, it is especially necessary to write in a clear, concise and to the point manner. If the letter is long, it is likely to be discarded. It is trying to receive a grant when one is asked to write a letter to a newspaper, intended to purchase a single thing, or vice versa.

Professors should be able to tell the facts of the interesting life of the one they are writing about. It is not only a matter of fact, but of the facts of the life of the one they are writing about. It is not only a matter of fact, but of the facts of the life of the one they are writing about.
