Nervous Prostration

Complete Recovery by the Use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and manifested all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I believe my children would have been fatherless today had it not been for Ayer's Sarsaparilla of which preparation I cannot say too much."—H. O. Hixon, Postmaster and Planter, Kinard's, S. C.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and executive ability. Next to the Spatulate Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types believe to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a literature which is entertaining to those in a small degree, and instructive beyond of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will find especially enjoyable in Demorest's Family Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent pictures of ours, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpre, the most celebrated of all flower painters, and given free to all those who now subscribe to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $250.00; and the reproduction is distinguished from the original only in detail. Besides this, an exquisite Rose Panel Study, worth $5.00, is included in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are as profusely and superbly illustrated as are the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the type of the intellectual and deep-reasoned person of the Monthly. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $1.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Demorest's Magazine is especially noted for its perfect fashion patterns and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Peculiar Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and tapering fingers, a love of home, which would naturally lead to the quieter sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one Magazine everything to satisfy literary taste of the whole family.

Conical. Spatulate. Artistic. Philosophic.

A PREMIUM of $225 was paid for $25,000 Fergus Falls city bonds.

ANOKA will probably be selected as the place for the location of the new insane asylum.

THE fate of Harry Hayward will be decided Nov. 4th, at which time the argument will be presented to the supreme court.

NEW receivers are being appointed for the Northern Pacific almost daily, and a court that can't boast of having added to the number isn't strictly in it. There are eight now, and the courts are still in session.

HAVING failed in running an exposition of its own, Minneapolis now wants to organize one to be supported by the northwest, and to be known as the Northwestern Exposition. Its a move to boom the Twin Cities at the expense of the country districts.

LUTHROP will have a newspaper before long and will put on metropolitan airs. This will hurt Bro. Oliver's feelings, for he tried to get a foot hold in the thriving town near Leech Lake some time ago, but the powers that be told him they didn't want a newspaper there.

THE Lonisville Courier-Journal, democratic, sums up the political situation in Kentucky as follows: "The democratic party under its present conditions is not a party at all; it is simply a monster without a head, running loose through the wilderness of political incertitude."

A SAN FRANCISCO woman has left her husband and wants a divorce because her husband would not read the proceedings of the Durant murder case to her every day. This is a new idea and should be incorporated in Dakota's divorce laws at once, if she wants to retain her chief industry.

PRIZE fighting has received a serious set back in Minnesota at the hands of Gov. Clough. The people of this state have a right to congratulate the governor on his stand in the matter, and we suggest that he will make more friends by his action than he made in his visits to the numerous fairs this fall.

THE Duluth Tribune suggests that Grover Cleveland would be a fit person for United States fish commissioner. His chances for the position, even under a republican administration, would be better than they are for a third term, and then think how much better he would fill the place, than the one he now holds.

THE Minneapolis editors who were so fortunate as to be able to go on the editorial excursion to Atlanta have returned and report a very pleasant trip. Look out now for political tips, for the boys talked it all over during their leisure moments, and probably decided just what this great state needed in the way of office-holders after January, 1896.

THE Sovereign boycott on national bank currency does not seem to have been a howling success. The Minneapolis Tribune remarks: "Let's see, Sovereign's boycott of the national bank currency was to begin on Sept. 1st. Well, September has passed, and we hear nothing of the boycott. We do not believe that a single national bank note has been refused in consequence of Sovereign's order."

THE state superintendent of public instruction has submitted his October school apportionment, the same being $2.56 per capita this year, which is ten cents less than in 1894, which is accounted for by the free text book law. In counties where the free text book law has been adopted there has been an average increase of 10 per cent in attendance. Crow Wing county this year has 2,276 children in her schools and her allowance is $6,031.40. Cass county has 368 children attending school and receives $925.20.

This is a Good One.

The Grand Rapids Herald says that Alexander Phair, better known as "Sandy," came to town the other day in search of a lawyer. He wanted to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the state. He had been attacked by a moose on Willow river, where he was moving hay for Powers & Simpson. Sandy was badly used up in the fight but finally succeeded in mowing down his assailant. A law should be passed to protect citizens against those vicious beasts. Sandy says he proposes to push the case to the full limit of the law and thinks he has good grounds on which to recover damages.

Want a New Charter.

The people of Little Falls are considering the question of adopting the new general charter law passed by the last session of the legislature, on account of it being unable to fund the city's floating indebtedness under the general law for cities under 5,000 population, says the Transcript. It is supposed that under its provisions the city would be able to pay its floating debt, and it is certain that it would not allow an increase of the debt again. That provision is one of the best features of the charter. The council levies or appropriates a certain sum for a certain purpose, and when the amount so levied or appropriated is exhausted, that expense ceases. The clerk, mayor and all officers are prohibited from drawing warrants upon any fund in excess of the levy or appropriation. No appropriation can be made unless the money is in the treasury to pay it or the tax levy has been made to meet it.

Don't Want Tramps.

The two great trunk lines of railroad passing through St. Cloud have commenced an active war fare against the nuisance of the indiscriminate carrying of tramps on their trains. At St. Cloud the former road has two watchmen in the yards and at Barnesville there are four. The Northern Pacific also has several watchmen at its terminal points. These watchmen make it their special duty to guard against tramps and returning harvest hands boarding freight trains, and, whether with the consent of the railroad companies' trainmen or not, boarding the cars and being carried. Hundreds of these men are transported each season and with no increase of revenue to the railroad companies. Many of them have money sufficient to pay their fares on the regular passenger trains, but prefer to "bum" their way. Besides, the companies suffer from losing goods while in transit by reason of men boarding these loaded cars.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Curfew.

As many of the smaller cities in Minnesota and adjacent states have lately passed what is called a "curfew" ordinance, by which persons under say sixteen years, are liable to arrest if found on the streets after nine o'clock at night, unless accompanied by some person of full legal age, it will be of interest to know what "curfew" really is, or was. About the time of the conquest of England by William of Normandy, the house-fire was in a hole in the middle of the floor of earth, under an opening in the roof by which the smoke escaped. This was universal in Europe as well as England, among the common people at least. The "curfew bell" was a signal to the people to "cowre feu" (cover the fire) and retire to rest. Originally it seems to have been a sensible precaution against conflagrations in towns built chiefly of thatch-covered wooden huts, but its severe enforcement in England by the Conqueror is said to have been to prevent secret seditious assemblages of the people. The absolute prohibition of all lights was removed in 1100 A. D. by Henry I. The hours varied from seven to nine o'clock at night, and in Scotland ten was not an unusual hour. It seems, therefore, that a revival of "curfew" is a step backward of several hundred years, to a day when our ancestors were little better than ignorant savages. It may become quite the thing in our country, but is one thing at least our people will not be content to retrace their steps. They will never exchange the splendid railroad service of this day for the ancient stage-coach or the canal-boat. Among the railroads of America there is none to excel in completeness of equipment, or extent of territory covered, the great Burlington Route. Always ask your home agent for a ticket by this line when about to travel, or write for information to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Japanese Carving.

Japanese art is supreme in wood and ivory carving. Sir Edwin Arnold declares, in "Seas and Lands," there is nothing known to him in Europe that comes near what Japanese workmen can achieve. A specimen of ivory carving was shown to him, which represented a bag of rice with two or three dozen rats in and upon it.

Every rat was as individual in character, position and action as if a special portrait had been taken of him, and the web of the bag, the glistening grains of rice and the stock fur of the rodents could not have been better expressed in painting.

At an art store in Yokohama he examined a piece of wood carving representing two life sized wrestlers struggling in the ring. Every muscle and every vein was delineated. Every tendon and ligament was anatomically perfect.

It drew a constant crowd, and a policeman informed the proprietor of the store that, if he intended to continue the wrestling on his premises, he must engage a posse of policemen to restrain the crowd. He was invited into the store and plied ed into smiles when he saw that the wrestlers were carvings of wood.

The Oldest the Youngest.

Some of us know middle aged men who think it a hardship not to be allowed to play marbles and mud leapfrog. If they dared they would still take part in boyish "larks." The death of Matthew Arnold, the apostle of "sweetness and light," was caused in his sixty-fifth year by leaping over a fence in a fit of juvenile high spirits.

Swedenborg imagines that in heaven the angels advance continually to the prime of youth, so that those who have been there longest are the youngest. Some of us have friends who seem to fulfill this idea. They preserve the freshness, guilelessness, hopefulness and elasticity of youth. They have put away the weakness, imperfection and immaturity of childhood. They retain the mind and heart—"the will, a man; simplicity, a child."—Chambers' Journal.

A Clever Retort by Napoleon III.

The Palais Royal, where always resided the younger branch of the reigning family, had at all times been a focus of opposition, and, although the princes who lived there during the empire owed everything to Napoleon III, the old traditions were in this respect thoroughly revived. The poor emperor, always kind, always gentle, always generous, was overpowered by the unpleasant relatives coming to him from his great predecessor, so that he might well answer, as he did on one occasion when reproached by the aged Prince Jerome with having "nothing" of his brother, the great emperor, "I have his family."—

WHAT TO EAT AND WHEN.

The Rules to Regulate Diet to Age and Occupation.

An adult in average health requires, as a rule, about three meals a day, and these may be arranged as follows: Breakfast at 8:30, lunch at 1:30, dinner at 7.

In country places, where dinner is taken in the middle of the day, a light tea is taken at 5 and supper at 8, and when there is late dinner a cup of tea may, as a rule, be taken without eating at 5 o'clock.

The tendency in adults is very much toward overeating, for food is not required in the adult body in order to supply growth, but only to support waste of tissue. It is therefore evident that those who lead a comparatively idle life without much exertion, either mental or physical, require very much less food than those who are engaged in active occupations.

Business men who have to be moving about much in the middle of the day should not take heavy luncheons, but should make their chief meal in the evening.

The practice of taking soup at the beginning of dinner is based on a sufficiently scientific principle, as when a small quantity of strong, good soup is taken the liquid that is rapidly absorbed into the blood refreshes and stimulates and prepares the way for more solid meals.

Sufferers from indigestion, however, often find that they cannot take soup, and these should also avoid taking strong tea or coffee after dinner, as they retard the process of digestion.

Some persons who have slow digestions do best with very long intervals between their meals, others need food more frequently, and if they do not have it at frequent intervals the appetite passes off and they are unable to eat, and grow weak.

As a rule, women require less food than men, as their bodies are smaller and they do not generally lead such active lives, but they very often injure their health very much by living principally on tea and toast, cakes and other innutritious articles of diet when they have no male relatives present to stimulate them by the force of example into taking more nourishing articles of food.

Elderly persons of either sex are, as a rule, unable to digest or assimilate food in the same way as in their younger days, owing to the progressing degenerative changes in the glands and lessened absorbent power in the alimentary canal.

The amount of food taken at a time should be small, and the intervals between meals rather short. When, as in many cases, it is the habit to awaken about 4 o'clock in the morning, a little food, such as a cup of cocoa or warm milk or beef tea, will often insure sleep afterward.

All farinaceous foods should be submitted to high temperatures for some time, so as to render the granules of starch easy to digest, for owing to the lessened activity of the glands and lessened power of mastication the food in old people is, like that of young children, not sufficiently subjected to the action of ptyalin in the mouth.

Stewed celery and cooked Spanish onions are very nice for old people, and old gentlemen have been known to take Spanish onions cooked in milk habitually for supper, saying that this induces sleep. — Lady's Pictorial.

It Worked Both Ways.

Little Jacky had two apples, which he had saved from dessert. There was company in the room, and one of the gentlemen thought it would be a good opportunity to give Jacky a lesson in manners. So he called the boy and said:

"I see you have two apples, Jacky. Won't you give me one?"

Jacky hesitated, looked rather ruefully at his prizes and finally offered the smaller one. This was what the gentleman had expected, and he proceeded to expatiate upon it, ending with:

"Now, Jacky, whenever you have anything to give away you should always keep the poorest for yourself."

This might be good manners, but it didn't harmonize with Jacky's desires. So he ruminated over it awhile, and then stuck out the other fist.

"Take t'other one, too," he said generously.

The gentleman was congratulating himself on his success, when Jacky stunned him by saying:

"Now, won't you please give me one?"—Boston Standard.

No Use.

Briggs—I knew the cook would burn the bread this morning as usual, so I lay awake last night and got up the finest sort of a sarcastic speech for her benefit. I sprung the speech, and she downed me in the first round.

Braggs—What did she say?

Briggs—She said, "Say, can talk like a firing of a gun." How, how could I answer that?—Indianapolis Journal.

Jack's Vegetables.

A vessel being ready for sailing, the captain ordered the hands to take a boat to shore and buy 10 shillings' worth of vegetables. Not being certain of the meaning of the word, the man consulted the first individual he met. "I say, mate, what might vegetables be?"

"Vegetables?" the stranger replied. "Why, peas are vegetables, for instance."

"That'll do," said Jack.

Having got his sack filled with peas, he pulled back to the ship, and when alongside the captain called out, "Have you got those vegetables?"

"Yes, sir."

"All right," said the captain. "Then hand them up one by one."

"By gad," said Jack, scratching his head, "I have got a job now and no mistake."—London Telegraph.

The Connecticut river was named by the Dutch Versche river, "fresh river."

A London dispatch asserts that many fine old families are in need of cash. There is evidently a shortage of American heiresses, or that state of things would not obtain.

The people of the United States are in favor of the enforcement of the neutrality laws, of course, but when such laws are enacted in favor of a country fighting for liberty, they are inclined to condone the offense.

H. H. Holmes persists in asserting that he is not guilty of wholesale murder. It is hardly worth while to lay great stress on that point, inasmuch as a very limited small business is that line is sufficient to hang him.

Artificial flowers were invented by nuns. In the Italian convents the altars and shrines were up to the end of the 18th century, decorated with artificial flowers, laboriously put together, and made of paper and parchment.

It is a pity the new chemical army ration was not in use when Stonewall Jackson led his troops on supplies captured in the Shenandoah Valley. The new ration is the best thing yet invented to fall into the hands of the enemy.

A number of Brooklyn women, all arrayed in bloomers, will meet one day next week to take a spin of 100 miles on the wheel, getting back home in time for supper. It is another thing to do that something resembling a new woman is abroad in the land.

A railway across Arabia from Ismailia, on the Suez Canal, to the head of the Persian Gulf, following as nearly as possible the 19th degree of latitude for nearly 1,000 miles, is now under consideration. The engineering difficulties are not serious.

Once more the New York Central railroad makes the record for the fast time in a long run. It is supposed by some good judges of the country created by Lord Salisbury's action that Chili has an ambition to dominate the whole of that continent, and that he is willing, if necessary, to go to war with the Argentine Republic within a year. Chili possesses the most serviceable army and navy in South America, and its agreement to arbitrate with its neighbors show that it is well aware of the fact. The Argentine congress recently held a secret session to consider the hostile attitude of Chili, and Brazil also is watchful of the growing Chilian military establishment.

Lieut. Peary's two voyages to Greenland have served to establish the theory that the only way to advance in the far arctic region is by sledge approaches, and even these would have to be scientifically constructed, for Peary's party on the last journey nearly starved through the failure to find the spot where a large quantity of provisions were stored. The explorer has learned that the snow and ice of Greenland are even more terrible than he supposed, the game scarce and the average weather the cause of constant suffering. The wild dashes made to reach the pole have been more or less disastrous and have become tiresome. A slow march upon it, keeping the "cracker line" open, with depots of abundant supplies at frequent intervals, is the rational plan, and the cost of this would be many millions

DOCTORS BAFFLED.

THE POISONING CASE AT SABULA, IOWA, A PUZZLING ONE.

Three Deaths Have Thus Far Occurred and Two More People Will Probably Die, as the Physicians Are Unable to Offer Any Relief.

Sabula, Iowa, Oct. 9.—The singularly mysterious poisoning cases are drawing at the wedding of John Tapiaw and Miss Bertha Ferguson are directly attention of the medical fraternity of this and other cities, but so far no physician has been able to correctly diagnosis the case. Three other deaths have occurred and eighty persons are confined to their beds, and several of these are expected to die. The dead are George Bertelle, Mrs. Florence Walker and — Flake.

The physicians here are E. B. Day, mayor of Sabula; James Dynes, Mrs. James Dynes, William H. Berner, Mrs. W. H. Berner, J. D. Gage, John Taplin, the bridegroom, Dr. Mastery, W. C. Dow, Mrs. Dow, Dr. Cavanaugh, Mrs. G. W. Cearborought.

The peculiarity of the disease is causing great apprehension and is attributed by the fifteen of the physicians to successfully combat it. Its similarity to common forms of poisoning and the impossibility to get antidotes and usual remedies is a puzzler. Some of the victims show every symptom of trichinosis, yet the ordinary treatment fails to eradicate the disease as allay the fever or pain. It is accompanied. Others appear to be affected by the effects of the antidotes administered in cases of minor poisoning, with the slightest tendency to check the illness.

The fact that most of the victims are Irish and Germans, has caused a newspaper correspondent Mr. Sala has carried all over the world. He is the son of an Italian gentleman, and married a favorite London singer of West Indian parentage.

HOLD-UP IN CHICAGO.

Eighteen Passengers on an Electric Car Relieved.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—An Evanston electric car was stopped suddenly about eight between Argyle Park and Edgewater by five masked men. It was thinly after 6 o'clock in the evening. Assistance relieves them. Those who had on the car were all in the act of handing over their valuables when the conductor lost all his fares of the day and some of the passengers were relieved of their valuables to the extent of several hundred dollars. The surprise was complete and no one seemed disposed to resist. The robbers had taken pains to conceal their identity, and which has been officially demonstrated pure and wholesome.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Bannock Indians Kill the Man Who Killed Their Chief Pocatello.

Idaho Falls, Idaho, Oct. 9.—A report was received here from Fort Hall, Idaho, that Bannock Indians had killed Jackson's Hole, that three men were killed by Indians at the ferry and Jackson's Hole on the morning of the 3d. The men were Mr. Hennessy, Jackson and one Capt. Smith, who precipitated the Indian troubles last fall. The Indians had sworn vengeance against Smith, as it was he, they believed, who killed one of their chiefs, Pocatello, the cause indirectly, of the death of a papoose last July. Smith was wounded himself in the fight, but he recovered. Wilson states that Capt. Smith and his party were ambushed and killed on the south fork of Snake river at the same place where Pocatello and his men were ambushed, and he and his two companions were buried in all died as the baby did. Saturday their baby also died, old, died. The coroner to-day found that the children from a heavy coating of dust. Monday the baby was covered with dirt and was a mere skeleton. The coroner believes the children died of starvation. A week ago the neighbors took a 15-months-old boy away from the family and are trying to save his life. There are no signs of starving. Longowitz had seven children. All are dead except the rescued boy, and he is expected to die. All died as the baby did. He is in jail.

MINE DISASTER.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN A MINE AT WILKESBARRE, PA.

The Explosion Occurs While a Corps of Rescuers Are Making a Survey of Abandoned Workings and the Mine Is Partially Wrecked.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 9.—A terrific explosion of gas occurred today in the Dorrance mine, operated by the Susquehanna Valley Coal company, which is situated in the southwestern part of the city. It is not yet known how many men were in the mine, but officials are very reticent and it is almost impossible to get any information from the levels of the earth where the rescuers are at work.

It is said that the dead burned, were brought to the surface. They are: Robert Blanchard, William Fisher, Michael Moss, George Lafly, Joseph Murphy.

The first two are members of the engineer corps. Moss and Lilly are laborers and Murphy is a driver. Miller and Blanchard are so badly burned that they cannot live.

The engineer corps decided to make a survey of a portion of the old abandoned workings known as the Baltimore section, which underlie the grounds of the Wilkesbarre base ball club, one mile distant from the main opening of the mine. The party which was in charge of the fire boss, Daniel Morgan, who is an expert on mine gases, consisted of William Jones, Robert Calkill and Llewellyn Owens. Blanchard with compass in hand, and Miller and Fisher with chain and tape. The finish some work that had been started in the morning. About one hour and one-half after the party had left Miller and Blanchard the explosion occurred. Both Miller and Blanchard were knocked down by the

CHAPTER I.

A Slight Breeze.
"Where should this music be—in the air or on the earth?"

The last soft, sweet note of the singer has died away upon the evening air, a knowledge that for the next five minutes their own voices may be heard in dulcety diatribes against their musical friends. It is close to the end of the season that may regard the music social evening at Lady Swansdown's as really their last in town, and are already dreaming of flights upon the somerves. A flight from fogs, and smoke and acquaintances, to the calm, cool depths of the country. It is a tremendous crush, and the air would be intolerable; so is the perfume of the dying flowers; but everybody, just now present, and future, in an artistic sense is present, so that not to be here would mean unforgiveness.

The coveted five minutes has already drawn to a close, and now as Lady Swansdown moves toward a corner where a crowd of young men makes the nest, she throws quick glances after her, with a calm sense of expectation.

The crowd parts as she draws near, and perplies her self-possession that now the shoulder of a girl who had been lost amidst its depths.

"Your turn, dearest. You will play; won't you? Every one is so anxious, so on the very tiptoe of hope. Come now—"

She speaks nervously, as if a little afraid of a capricious refusal at the last moment; but the girl, giving her pet quiet smile into her friend's witness aside the gilded youths who have surrounded her, and steps into the open space outside—her violin in her hand.

Quite calmly, with scarce a touch of consciousness, she moves to the position that has become—although not put into the glare of the many lights, and the many eyes beyond. Yet she is very conscious all the while, and her heart beats crushingly, as she lifts her violin to her shoulder, and slowly raises the bow.

Such a small, slender thing! Clad in a clinging gown of amber Indian silk, low and rounded at the neck as a child's frock might be, and with puffed sleeves that show dimpled white arms

The repair committee was instructed to prepare a room in the old Sixth street building for school purposes, the West Brainerd school having been closed by a unanimous vote of the members present. The reason given for the action is that there were but twelve resident scholars in attendance, and the total enrollment was 20. So to educate these children of the city are crowded it was deemed advisable to open a room in the Sixth street building, and place the West Brainerd teacher in charge, where 45 children could receive the benefit that was being given to twelve. On Monday evening, Oct. 14th, this popular company will commence a week's engagement at the opera house, presenting an entirely new repertoire of standard plays. On Monday evening "Queena" will be presented for the first time in Brainerd. There is scarcely a theatre-goer in this city that does not remember with pleasure this popular company which played the most successful engagement ever known in Brainerd last season. The seats of prices will be as follows: Circle, 50 cents; Parquet, 35 cents; Admission, 25 cent; entire gallery, 15 cents. Special matinee Saturday afternoon at 2:30, when the prices will be 25 cents to any part of the house. Children 15 cents. Among the other plays to be presented are: "Forget-Me-Not," "New Magdalen," "Leah, the Forsaken," Damon and Pythias," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Two Orphans" and "Two Touch of Nature," and "Partners For Life." The Winnipeg Free Press says of the company: "The production that Miss Cortland would and the leading role in "A New Magdalen" eminently suited to her powers was verified last evening. To say that she acted it to perfection is high praise, but not undue praise. Mr. Butler, too, breaks out in quite new places. From the strong "Jaggers" to the gentle "Rev. Julian Garz" is a long step, but it is difficult to say whether he is better as a barbarian or a parson. The audience last evening, among others, contained Sir Charles H. and Lady Tupper, who were highly pleased with the entertainment."

Thinks It Will Help Cass County.

The Cass County Pioneer in its last issue contains the following:

The turning of part of the flow of the Crow Wing into Gull and stretched lakes which are to be diked and used as reservoirs to equalize the outflow of water from this section of the Crow Wing and Mississippi rivers, seems to be an assured thing. We have a report stating that draining, preparatory to starting the lower dam, has already been commenced; that the congressional appropriation sought is said by those who have looked the matter up, to be forthcoming without opposition; and that the work of putting up dikes will probably commence in the early spring. This will give employment for scores of men which will last, they say, something like three years. The expenditure of so much hard cash will afford the people of Cass an opportunity to place themselves on a solid financial basis, which will be a lasting benefit to the county, and the storing of water there will make the driving business of this part of the county a certainty each year which the occasional droughts sometimes delays entire seasons.
