

MISCELLANY.

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

DEAR NELLIE: I turn to you, love, in my trouble; I know I ought not, but I must speak or die. I found out at last that all bliss is a bubble. Don't think, though, with Jack, there is such a goodly one away.

THE LOVE OF A FOOL.

Lu stood behind the little counter where she passed so many hours of her life, her fingers resting upon the glass of the show case, which she tapped impatiently, while her eyes roved from Ned Snyder, behind the opposite counter, to the door, through which she hoped some customer would enter.

Lu's sphere of usefulness gradually extended through all the departments of the boarding house and sales-room; till now she found her, at the age of 20, after eight years of incessant toil, with the prospect of any change, so long as life and health should remain. From very early in the morning till very late at night, through seven long days in every week, with only an hour or two respite on Sunday, she was here, there, wherever her services were demanded, not conscious that she was doing more actual physical labor than two like her should perform, besides shutting out from her young life the joys of companionship and ignoring all those social privileges which are so dear to young life.

"Will you? Then tell me." "Marry me?" Lu's lip trembled as she cast a furtive glance up into the young man's face, and her whole soul thrilled as she caught the magnetic look of his eyes.

Lu's lip trembled as she cast a furtive glance up into the young man's face, and her whole soul thrilled as she caught the magnetic look of his eyes. "What do you mean," she demanded. "Just what I say, Lu. I want to tell you love you. I have long wanted to tell you so, and to ask you this. Now what say you, will you be mine?"

LETTER FROM WM. S. KING.

In Reply to the Resolutions of the Minnesota Legislature. To the Legislature of Minnesota. GENTLEMEN SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES—It has been my good fortune to come into possession of a copy of certain "Joint Resolutions," relating to myself, which resolutions are said to have been passed by the House of Representatives on the 30th day of January last, and by the Senate on the 5th day of February, 1876.

It will be observed, gentlemen, that while these proceedings bear date of April 10th, 1869, the transaction with your committee and leader, Mr. Donnelly, seems to have been completed some time previous, the "fifty thousand" due him being dated February, 1869. While, you will remember, Mr. Donnelly was a member of the House of Representatives, and guarding so vigilantly them, as is now the "honor" and the "scutcheon" of Minnesota.
