The merchants' exchange at St. Louis will exact $2,500 for membership after May 1.

General Sherman and party are at Tucson, Arizona, and, after a sojourn of a week, will proceed to Los Angeles.

President Arthur's reception to the officers of the army and navy was a brilliant affair. He was assisted by Mrs. Frisbie and Miss Folger.

The station-keepers of Steeple, Kan., each, their places of business ordered closed as nuisances, and their government licenses were surrendered.

France is represented as pale and haggard, but it is remarked that she had little to complain of in regard to her prison treatment. He will remain in Paris until the latest moment consistent with his parole.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of Texas to prohibit railroads from consolidating their stock and franchises. A favorable report has been made on a measure to repeal railway land grants, preventing the location of 8,000,000 acres already given away.

The house judiciary committee has received a letter from James A. George, urging the forfeiture of the land grant to the Texas Pacific road, which has lately been sold to the Southern Pacific. The grant was made to secure a competing line to the Pacific coast, and comprises about eighteen million acres, and not a mile of road has been built in the regions covered by the grant.

Mr. Frank Hatton, a young and vigorous stalwart, who is practically at the head of the postoffice department, though his title is that of assistant writer to the Cincinnati postmaster, after designed for the information and guidance of the whole department.

He quotes from Arthur's letter of acceptance: "I will add that, by the acceptance of public office, whether high or low, one does not, in my judgment, escape any of his responsibilities as a citizen, or lose or impair any of his rights as a citizen, and that he should enjoy absolute liberty to think and speak and act in political matters according to his own will and conscience; provided only that he honorably, faithfully, and fully discharge all his official duties."

Lovely woman is never quite so enthusiastically and devotedly pious as upon an Easter morning. Then she chide the epithet of saint and steps forth re-groomed as to wardrobe. She is joyous. Her Savior has risen and her bonnet has arrived. During the penitential season, when her soul has been wrapped in gloom and her diet of locusts and wild honey, she has been communing with her milliner, and upon Easter morning she steps forth radiant in robes and headgear. She feels herself a new risen. Her whole soul is in ecstasy. She goes to church with the happy and contented feeling that she is not the least advanced among the creatures of Omnipotence in that particular congregation, and that while her soul is engaged in pouring forth its worship her eyes may be permitted critically to examine the make-up of her sisters in the faith. If her husband or brother, or father, or whoever discharges her obligations connected with the Easter display, has any money left after meeting his demands, she will love that he will give it all to the ole, or an estate. Enter offering for the will be quite sure that his Estate, as you will be to something else about the dear Lord who rose just about the right time to make the spring banquet tell its best. While lovely woman breaks out in fresh clothes and prayers on Easter, she is not alone. The young man gets round to church on that day. He goes where the congregation is the libel-bonnet, for his thin legs are covered by a new pair of trousers and his thick head with a brand new bowler.

As the young man returns from service along the flagging, he will solemnly remark, in the language of the scripture: What shivers we are and what styles we pursue!

CURIOSITIES OF TRUTH.

Among the things not readily definable may be classed the modifications which the human countenance undergoes when subjected, for any considerable length of time, to the influence of a great city. What are these modifications, and in what way are they effected? Has there been an observant person who, in his travels, being as they are, of modern civilization, and constantly in the presence of the most advanced circumstances of life, cannot fail to perceive the most marked effect upon the expression of their inhabitants. The influence of the country is to create respect. The absence of racket and business in woods and fields, the broad expanse of hill and vale, the slow and steady march of the seasons, the breath and beauty of all that surrounds, has a permanent and proprietary course with which the busy citizen of a man's work and as sparks that burn beneath all these things tend to impart a quietude and inapprehensiveness to the nerves and thought altogether foreign to the life of the city. Our modern organizations, with their constant functions of reaching outward in competition, is never put upon its defense—never compelled to transform itself from a channel of communication with the outside world into a media against such communication. It is a common observation that the country folk the line of the inhabitants of a country follow the line of their habit character of country they inhabit.

There is something of the prairie in the wild visage of the Comanche Indian, and something of the mountains in the rugged features of the Switzer. The earth we stand on is our mother, and the spirit of her forms is discernible in the elements of her children.

But if this be true of the country, are there not corresponding correspondences in the artificial influences of cities. The magnitude of cities is the coming together of multitudes of men for the purpose of money-getting. Such cooperation involves conflict—an opposition of the interests of each individual to the interests of all the rest. The consequence is that every one arms himself against his fellow. To be a good business man is to be a bad citizen, and indeed for honesty is the business, in the absence of the business, is the business, and capable of dissimulation, of concealing a certain conventional demeanor, which must needs often be at variance with the feeling underneath. Now, to do this is to carry on two lives instead of one, and the effects of this feat are soon perceptible in the expression of the face; the clear complexion and intelligent eye are found to be the most common quality of the eyes is stained at the corners with wrinkles which are unknown to the most venerable savage. A certain rigidity gradually settles upon the features, and the scope and variety of expression becomes limited, because, the surface having become accustomed to the conventional rather than to the declaration of what is within, and one form of concealment is substituted for the multitudinous declaration the life of the face months naturally is circumscribed.

THE POLAR EXPEDITION.

It is a mistake to suppose that the Arctic winter is the higher latitudes a long, dreary one of opaque darkness. The highest latitude yet reached by man is 88 deg. 20 min. 50 sec., and there were light-lanes four hours and forty-two minutes on Dec. 22, the shortest day of the Northern year. Men will have to go some 371 miles further north than he region of absolute darkness. Twenty days—four days more than the average year during which the sun shines on both poles at the same time. This is one to the fact that the sun is larger than the earth, and that his rays are bent by the earth's atmosphere in such a way as to converge upon his surface.
